TWO KILLED BY IRA CAR BOMB

Newry victims both English

By KENNETH CLARKE and COLIN BRADY

A POLICE reservist and a civilian security guard—both Englishmen who settled in Ulster—were killed yesterday in the second IRA murder attack in Newry, Co. Down, in five weeks.

Constable Michael Keith Kay, 38, was killed instantly and Kenneth Parry, 55, was fatally injured when explosives packed in a Toyota car exploded outside the courthouse of the Ulster border court.

The building is less than half a mile from the police station where nine police officers, including two women, were killed by mortar bombs fired by terrorists on Feb. 28.

Yesterday's double murder revived complaints about lack of security in the town.

The attack came as an armoured Land Rover arrived with seven policemen due to provide security for a court sitting.

Constable Kay, a married ex-soldier from Blackburn, Lancs. who had an eight-year-old son, got out to open the gates to the building helped by Mr Parry.

As the Land-Rover began reversing through the gates, the car bomb was detonated by remote control by terrorists hiding in a house overlooking the court.

Reserve Const. Michael Kaye: killed instantly.

Mr Kenneth Parry: died in hospital.

Police said at least two gunmen had held the 70-year-old occupant of the house captive since 6 p.m. on Tuesday. His home help was also held when she arrived yesterday morning.

The terrorists detonated the car bomb at 9.59 a.m. and then fled, leaving the man and woman unharmed.

Witnesses said the Toyota exploded in a ball of flame which engulfed constable Kay and Mr Parry.

Mr Parry, a Leicester man who married a Newry woman, was taken to hospital, but died later.

The six policemen who remained in the Land-Rover suffered minor injuries as their vehicle caught fire. One was detained in hospital. Some passers-by were struck by flying debris.

One witness said: "The bomb went off sending out a huge cloud of black smoke. The policemen who were in the Land Rover scrambled free, some had blood stains and one carried away a colleague on his back.

"I could hear the crackle of what sounded like exploding ammunition inside the Land Rover."

The wreckage of the Toyota was hurled across the Belfast-Dublin road where cars can be left unattended despite previous terrorist attacks in Newry.

Tighter security promised

Mr Hurd, Ulster Secretary, said he was "outraged" and promised re-doubled security for Newry, which he said was a place "where tragedies tend to happen." Similar promises were made after the mortar raid on the police station, but local politicians are not satisfied with what has been done.

Mr James Nicholson, Official Unionist MP for Newry and Armagh, said he intended to take the matter up at Westminster.

Statements condemning the bombing came, not only from Ulster Unionists, but from Mr Peter Barry, the Irish Republic's Foreign Minister, Mr Seamus Mallon, deputy leader of the mainly Catholic Social Democratic and Labour party, said it was "another act of savagery."

Security forces in Northern Ireland expect more terrorist outrages in the run-up to next month's council elections in Ulster and in the light of speculations about negotiations between London and Dublin.

Meanwhile detectives are searching for a man abducted by four masked gunmen from a bar in Londonderry. Patrick Joseph Campbell, 20, single from Rinmore Drive, in the city's Bogside area, was taken from the bar in Chamberlain Street on Tuesday night.

The remains of a Toyota containing a 5lb bomb which terrorists hidden nearby detonated as the armoured Land Rover reversed through the gateway of Newry court house yesterday.

YOUNGEST LIFE PEERESS

By VALERIE ELLIOTT
Political Staff

MISS GLORIA HOOPER, 45, yesterday became the youngest person ever to be named a life peer.

A solicitor and Conservative Euro MP for Liverpool until last year, she is one of 12 new working peers whose names were announced by the Prime Minister. The list includes six Conservatives, five Labour supporters and one SDP nominee.

The other Conservative peers are Sir William Elliott, 64, former MP for Newcastle-upon-Tyne North, Sir Marcus Kimball, 56, former MP for Gainsborough; Sir Russell Sanderson, 51, chairman of the executive committee of the Conservative National Union, and chairman of the Yorkshire and Lancashire Investment Trust, Mr John Butterworth, 57, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Warwick, and Sir Leonard Wolfson, 57, chairman of the Wolfson Foundation and chairman of Great Universal Stores Merchandise Corporation.

SDP nominee

The first SDP nominee to go to the Lords is Lt-Col. Richard Crawshaw, 67, former SDP MP for Liverpool Toxteth, and a former Deputy Speaker. Dr Owen, the SDP leader, was invited to make a nomination and put forward Lt-Col. Crawshaw's name, but considered that as a former Deputy Speaker he was entitled to a peerage by convention.

This list was issud after a request from Mr Kinnock, who was concerned that Labour could not carry on its role in the Lords unless its numbers were strengthened.

The Labour nominees include Mrs Muriel Turner, 62, assistant general secretary of the Association of Scientific Technical and Managerial Staffs

The other new Labour peers are: Mr Bernard Donoghue, 50, a senior Labour policy adviser 1974-79, who is head of research an investment at Grievson, Grant and Company, Mr Hugh Morton, QC, 54, a member of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, Mr. Sam Silkin, QC, 67, former Attorney-General, who is deputy chairman of the British Printing and Communication Corporation, Mr Charles Williams, 52, chairman of the Prices Commission 1977-79, an a merchant banker.

Kit Kat bar ban sought by GLC

By R. BARRY O'BRIEN

THE chocolate biscuit bar Kit Kat has become the latest victim of the Greater London Council's campaign against race and sex discrimination, following the ban on Robertson's marmalade because of its golliwog emblem.

Kit Kat, which has world-wide sales of 24 million bars a year, faces a ban from London schools because the makers, Rowntree Mackintosh, have refused to fill in an anti-discrimination questionnaire from the council.

Twenty thousand firms supplying goods and services to the Labour-controlled GLC are being asked 50 questions in a 12-page form to show if they provide equal employment opportunities for women, racial minorities and disabled persons.

Rowntree Mackintosh is threatened with loss of a £70,000 contract for Kit Kat and other confectionery sold on sweet counters at London local authority schools because of its refusal to fill in the form.

A new GLC body called the "contracts compliance equal opportunities unit" has recommended that the company should be removed from the council's approved list of suppliers. The recommendation is to be considered by the supplies and contracts services sub-committee at a meeting this afternoon.

OLD MASTER 'COPY' MAKES £2m

By ALISON BECKETT
Art Sales Correspondent

A GRUESOME old master painting which its owner thought was a copy of a work by Guido Reni, was sold at Sotheby's in London yesterday for £2 million, a record price for the artist.

The picture of "David with the Head of Goliath" was indentified after the vendor, who lives in Scotland, contacted Sotheby's Glasgow office. Her father acquired it at at the turn of the century.

It was painterd by Reni, a Bolognese artist with a reputation for sentimental religious work in about 1620. The previous record for a work by Reni who is said to have been noted for both his virginity and heavy gambling, was £421,052 at Christie's in New York 14 months ago.

Marble bust

It was one of two remarkable discoveries to come under the hammer in London within barely an hour of each other, the second being an 18th century marble bust at Christie's of the Fourth Earl of Chesterfield which was spotted in a Yorkshire farmhouse porch and fetched £480,000, the most expensive piece of English sculpture ever auctioned.

BIRMINGHAM'S RATE UP 43pc

Birmingham's Labour-controlled council announced a 43 per cent rates rise yeterday. When the West Midland County Council rate is added, the occupier of an average semi-detached house will pay about £538, an increase of more than £100.

Councillor Neville Bosworth, Tory leader on the council, said the increase would mean the loss of 3,000 jobs. Labour said two-thirds of the rise was caused by raids on reserves by previous Conservative administrations, higher interest and cuts in Government grants.

600 JOB VACANCIES

Students' rampage appals Thatcher

By JAMES WIGHTMAN, Political Correspondent

MRS THATCHER has told Tory officials in the wake of vandalism at the Federation of Conservative Students Conference that every effort must be made to guard against infiltration by Right-wing extremists.

She told Mr Gummer, party chairman, that she was appalled by the trouble at the students' gathering in Loughborough and that she backed his decision to suspend £50,000 in grants to the federation.

As party leader, the Prime Minister is particularly concerned about the Conservatives' image on law and order at a time when the Government is trying to combat rising crime and, in particular, football hooliganism.

She interrupted preparations for her South-East Asia trip to study reports of the trouble at Loughborough where during a late-night party on Monday, after the conference's opening session, several rooms were damaged in the hall of residence where most delegates were staying.

Mr Gummer and other party officials yesterday began looking at the membership of the federation which has a strong Right-wing faction.

Mrs Thatcher is in the mood for expulsions. But she also wants to be sure that other sections of the party do not contain Right-wing extremists whose conduct could prove an embarrassment for the Tories in the approach to the next General Election.

All payments to the federation have been suspended by the Tory leadership until an inquiry is completed and its report presented to the national union on June 12.

Mr Gummer's action was widely applauded by Conservatives yesterday.

Customs working to rule

By JOHN RICHARDS
Industrial Correspondent

CUSTOMS officers are expected to operate a strict work-to-rule which could disrupt Easter holiday travel at ports and airports from tomorrow.

The disruptive action has been ordered by the Society of Civil and Public Servants and the Civil and Public Services Association after rejecting a 4·4 per cent. pay offer.

It seems certain to cause delays for returning holidaymakers at Heathrow, Gatwick and other airports and the ferry terminals at Dover, Felixstowe and elsewhere.

The society, which represents uniformed Customs officers stationed at the ports and airports, said the work to-rule would operate over the Easter week-end and throughout April.

It followed a ballot of the 18,500 members involved.

10 per cent. cut

Mr Campbell Christie, society deputy general secretary, said: "If the members accepted a 4·4 per cent. offer, they would be accepting the equivalent of a 10 per cent. cut in salary in real terms since 1980."

Last night the Easter getaway had already begun and a spokesman for the Customs and Excise promised: "We do have contingency plans and we will be watching the situation closely to keep passenger traffic moving as quickly as possible.

Details of the disruption were being kept secret but long queues could build up as Customs men enforce more stringent checks of baggage and passengers passing through the green "Nothing to declare" channels.

The unions said that there could be further disruption later in the month with a one-day strike of Customs officers planned for April 15 and selective strikes over the following three days which would leave some Customs posts unmanned.

Both unions are balloting over this proposed action and the result will be known on April 10.

The Civil Service unions are seeking a £15 a week flat-rate increase—equal to an extra 15 to 16 per cent.—and a minimum weekly wage of £100.

HEATWAVE ON THE COSTAS

By Our Madrid Correspondent

Britons who have chosen Spain for their Easter Holiday break have struck lucky—with a heatwave caused by a wind blowing north off the Sahara.

Temperatures on the Costa del Sol, the Costa Blanca and along the Costa Brava in the north, were all in the upper seventies fahrenheit yesterday, and the weekend outlook is the same.

FLU OUTBREAK SPREADING

By Our Health Services Correspondent

An outbreak of Hongkong influenza hit 40,000 people last week and a further 80,000 succumbed to flu-related illness, the Royal College of General Practitioners stated yesterday.

Although nearly twice as many people are now suffering from flu compared with the same period last year, there is not yet an epidemic. For that to happen, the numbers would have to double for two consecutive weeks, said a spokesman at the college's research unit in Birmingham.

Bishop calls on Bishop of Durham to quit

By JOHN SHAW

THE Bishop of Norwich, the Rt Rev. Maurice Wood, yesterday called on the Bishop of Durham, the Rt Rev. David Jenkins, to resign.

Bishop Jenkins, he said, had cast doubts on the Resurrection, the central, crucial belief of the Christian faith. Unless he could preach unreservedly this Easter weekend that Christ was raised from the dead, he should return to his academic work.

"I believe him to be a kind, academic man, but nevertheless I believe he should not be a bishop in the Church of England, said Bishop Wood in an Easter address at a Rotary lunch in Norwich.

The Bishop of Durham's recent widely-publicised doubts over the Resurrection had to be publicly disowned by bishops, said Bishop Wood. He had suggested that it was "feasible" that the Disciples had stolen Christ's body from the tomb, "but this is the very lie that the enemies of Jesus paid the soldiers to put out on the first Easter weekend."

Historical miracle

Bishop Wood went on: "Unless the sheer historical miracle that God raised Jesus from the dead on the third day took place—our Gospel is false, the Apostles were liars, the New Testament is untrue, and the Church was built on a lie for all these centuries."

Bishop Wood said he recognised the honesty of Bishop Jenkins when he said in his latest diocesan newsletter that he could not cheat or conceal or pretend to particular beliefs. But "if these are his considered views . . . then sadly I believe he should resign his bishopric and return to his academic work."

Bishop Wood said afterwards that he did not wish to comment further on the affair. But when asked whether he thought Bishop Jenkins would take note of his resignation call, said he would be sending a copy of his message to Durham.

Due to retire

The Bishop of Durham, whose comments on social issues and doubts about the literal truth of some parts of the Bible have made him a nationally-known figure, was unavailable for comment last night.

The controversy surrounding him recalls the dispute in the mid-1960s when the Rt Rev. John Robinson, then Bishop of Woolwich, questioned some of the miracles in his book "honest to God".

Bishop Wood, who is 68 is due to retire this year.

2 BANKS EASE LOAN RATES

By FRANCES WILLIAMS
Economics Correspondent

FURTHER strengthening of the pound on world currency markets will provide scope for more cuts in interest rates, Mr Lawson, the Chancellor, said yesterday, as Barclays and Midland banks reduced their base lending rates by ¼ of a percentage point to 13¼ per cent.

This leaves the big four High Street banks still split on interest rates. National Westminster and Lloyds cut their loan rates by ½ percentage to 13 per cent, a week ago.

The Chancellor was giving evidence on the Budget to the all-party Treasury Select Committee of MPs, said the reduction in interest rates so far had been fully justified by the improved performance of the pound. But the Government would go cautiously on further rate cuts and would not take any risks on inflation.

Strong pound

The Chancellor also hinted to the committee that he might discontinue the practice of publishing in his autumn economic statement an implied "fiscal adjustment" — the amount of cash he might have for tax cuts in the coming budget. He said it created misapprehensions which he then had to spend time correcting.

The pound opened strongly on foreign exchange markets but fell back later to finish the day 38 points higher against the dollar at $1·2120 in London.

The FT 30-share Index fell 12·9 to 956·5 in thin pre-holiday trading.

REBEL COUNCIL GIVEN DEADLINE TO SET RATE

By JOHN GRIGSBY
Local Government Correspondent

THE Labour-controlled council of Hackney in east London has no reasonable grounds to defer making a lawful rate, Mr JUSTICE WOOLF ruled in the High Court yesterday.

The council, which says it is responsible for "Britain's poorest borough" has said it will set a rate when it has obtained spending concessions from the Government.

But the judge said it had given the court no good reason for delay.

The ruling will be closely studied by the 11 other councils subject to Government's rate-capping and three others which have not so far made a rate. It lays them all open to legal challenge.

The judge ruled that if Hackney council had not set a rate by April 16 he would order it to do so. He would give reasons for his ruling then and would also make orders quashing the council's decision last month not to fix a rate.

He would not make an order compelling the council to comply with his ruling if he was assured in the meantime that it would fix a rate by an "acceptable date."

£118m budget

He said that there could be circumstances where it would be proper for the council to defer its decision until after April 1.

The judge said: "It is with great reluctance that the court would make an order against a local authority, bearing in mind that it is a democratically elected body which has the responsibility of representing the views of those in its locality."

He made no ruling on the £118 million budget set by the council which had argued that it was impossible to set a rate linked to the Government's budget limit of £92 million because it said it had not provided enough money in rate support grant.

The decision means that the council — which at one time was warning staff that it might not have the money to pay wages from the middle of this month — can continue to pay its bills.

Officials of Hackney and other councils which have still not set a rate are now likely to warn their members that they are more likely to escape being surcharged if they quickly set a rate. The Hackney Labour councillors have received advice that they might anyway be surcharged for the costs of the High Court hearings estimated to be at least £10,000.

Apart from Hackney, Camden, Southwark, Lambeth, Greenwich, Islington and Sheffield, have so far refused to make a rate. Haringey will meet today, to reconsider its decision not to make a rate, and Lewisham was meeting yesterday.

Tower Hamlets, Newham and Liverpool have also failed to set rates.

After the hearing, the man who brought the case, Mr Mourad Fleming, a local ratepayer and a solicitor's clerk, said: "I am pleased at the outcome, but I regret it was necessary to bring the case at all."

He did not believe that the Government was giving Hackney enough money. "The Government is wrong — the council is worse.

He said a mob had sung scurrilous songs outside his council home and he lost a tooth cap while being jostled by demonstrators as he made his way into court for the three-day hearing.

Mr Fleming, who recently stood unsuccessfully as an SDP candidate in a local by-election, said: "I recognised the demonstrators as council workers."

'NOT UNFAIR'
Jenkin decision

Mr Jenkin, Environment Secretary, did not act unfairly or improperly in calculating the GLC and ILEA's rate limits for this year, the High Court ruled yesterday.

Lord Justice MUSTILL, sitting with Mr Justice OTTON, said Mr Jenkin had been given "largely a free hand" to make political and economic judgments and had not abused his powers under the 1984 Rates Act.

Giving reasons for their decision last month not to quash the rate set for the two authorities, who claim it is too low, the judge said the dispute was more suited to Parliament, the council chamber or the ballot box, than the courts.

The judges ordered the authorities both to pay the costs of the hearing but granted leave to appeal.

McCARTHY FOR PRINT TALKS

LORD McCARTHY, the railway industry's chief arbitrator, will chair next week's new technology peace talks between the National Union of Journalist and the National Graphical Association.

The two unions will start talks on Wednesday in London on handling new technology in provincial papers and its impact on jobs.

The NGA had called for the expulsion of the NUJ from the TUC for signing a deal at Wolverhampton while printers were in dispute, and the NUJ accused the printing union of encroaching on its work at a dispute at Portsmouth.

ADVERT DEAL
Big pay rise for staff

OUR INDUSTRIAL CORRESPONDENT writes: The NGA yesterday announced a new technology deal involving the direct input of telephone advertisements into production computers at Northern Counties Newspapers, the Bolton-based group.

Twenty tele-advertising operators at the BOLTON EVENING NEWS currently earning £123·05 a week basic will get parity with 57 print compositors, currently on £210·56 a week, after five years. All are NGA members.

Dose of disinfectant for Tory students

By SARAH THOMPSON Education Staff

While Mr John Selwyn Gummer, party chairman, announced his plan for political cleaning-up in the Federation, students were ordered to clear up the physical mess themselves.

The university cleaning staff refused to touch it. Damage is estimated at over £100, and the bill is to be paid by the students themselves.

Loughborough University's spokesmen yesterday stressed spokesmen yesterday stressed that damage was "minimal."

But Mr Hal Miller, vice-chairman of the party and the MP with special responsibility for youth liaison, said: "The university's authorities are realy very angry. The place was a disgusting, drunken mess."

Thee door handles had been wrenched off, one taking the Yale lock with it. Mud was thrown through windows and the floors of the rooms were littered with lavatory rolls, broken bottles and beer cans.

Students had vomited on floors and one had used the communal showers as a lavatory. It all happened about 3 a.m. on Tuesday.

500 beer cans

Later Mr Miller told Donald Stewart, vice-chairman elect of the Scottish Federation, and David Dodds both from Glasgow University — and Blair Wilson from Stirling University to go home after his request for the main culprits to own up went unanswered.

Mr Miller has recommended that the three, whose rooms suffered most, be expelled from the party for 10 years.

Mr Dodds said yesterday: "I was thrown out because 500 empty beer cans were found in my room. It wasn't my fault — the others just decided to use my room to drink in."

The party inquiry on which the Federation's future depends will look into its past operations, particularly those of the Scottish arm, including allegations of vote-rigging in university elections.

POSTAL PEACE BACKING

By Our Industrial Staff

POSTMEN'S leaders voted last night to recommend that their union's National Executive accept a peace formula when it meets in emergency session in London today.

After a five-hour debate the 15-man postal executive of the Union of Communication Workers gave its approval to a settlement plan drawn up in talks between union and management negotiators on Tuesday night.

Ratification of the 57-page document by the 32-man National Executive today will avert the threat of strike action over the Post Office efficiency programme.

Details of the document have not been released, but it embraces the recruitment of more casual and part-time workers, reduced overtime, the acceptance of new technology in sorting offices and co-operation with the introduction of a mandatory productivity scheme.

Tension between the union and management eased further with the lifting yesterday of a High Court injunction granted to the employers on Monday to prevent a stoppage at the Mount Pleasant sorting office.

The court order prevented the union from calling its members there out on strike over the introduction of an electronic sorting machine, without first holding a ballot of the workforce.

Although a one-day unofficial stoppage did occur, the union has agreed to hold a ballot

Three years for miners in arson raid on lorries

FIVE Kent miners who fire-bombed the yard of a strike-breaking haulier were jailed for three years yesterday by a judge who hit out at NUM leaders for failing to condemn violence.

Judge MARTYN WARD told them at Chelmsford Crown Court:

"If those among your national leaders who throughout this long dispute were repeatedly asked to condemn the use of violence has done so, many miners might not have ended up before the criminal courts.

"Were those leaders here today to see you and your families' anguish, they might recognise how wrong and misguided they were by refusing to speak out."

The five, all married, are EMLYN DAVIES, 33, of Grenville Way, Broadstairs, and four Deal men — GARRY NEWELL, 28, of Diana Gardens; MARK BEST, 26, of Western Road; BRIAN DAY, 28, and JAMES WADDELL, 29, both of Davies Avenue.

They admitted conspiracy to commit arson.

Fuel lines cut

They had been on picket duty at north Essex ports, where there was friction with strike-breaking lorry drivers, and drove to the yard of C. A. NEAL at Ardleigh, near Colchester, late one night in July.

They broke through the chain-link fence and cut fuel pipes on lorries and on storage tanks containing 3,000 gallons of deisel fuel.

Then they lobbed in four petrol bombs and an incendiary made from a medicine bottle filled with propellant from shotgun cartridges, with a straw as a fuse.

NUM's SWISS MONEY BACK IN BRITAIN

By TERENCE SHAW
Legal Correspondent

MORE than £200,000 of the National Union of Mineworkers' money that was sent to Switzerland last year to avoid seizure by sequestrators during the miners' strike, was returned to Britain yesterday.

The money which is the balance of some £500,000 traced to Zurich by sequestrators of the union's assets, was released to Mr Michael Arnold, the receiver appointed by the High Court last December to replace union leaders as trustee of its funds.

It had been paid into the Zurich District Court by the bank, EBC Schweis. After lengthy delays the court ruled that Mr Arnold was the "lawful representative" of the NUM and that the funds should be released to him after deductions of court and other costs and expenses.

Announcing the return of the money yesterday, Mr Arnold, a senior partner in the City chartered accountants, Arthur Young, said he would now be applying to the English courts for further directions of disposal of the funds.

The Zurich court's ruling may also have legal consequences for the recovery of the only remaining NUM money still outside the jurisdiction of the English courts. This is £2,700,000 which has been frozen in a Dublin bank since November.

Home loan tax change

By RICHARD NORTHEDGE
City Staff

HOUSEOWNERS behind with mortgage payments, including some coal miners who joined the strike, could lose mortgage tax relief because of rules introduced by the Inland Revenue this week.

The tax authorities have told the building societies that while interest on loans up to £30,000 continues to attract income tax relief, it will not do so if it is "interest on interest" which has been rolled up because the borrower has gone into arrears.

Some societies have become concerned with the new tax rules and taken up the matter with the Building Societies Association Opposition MPs are also concerned.

The Revenue argues that while interest on loans to buy homes qualifies for tax relief, interest on unpaid past interest is not for a qualifying purpose.

Such loans are defined as being of "mixed quality" and the Revenue claims that they should be taken outside the MIRAS system which automatically deducts tax relief on mortgage payments.

Home owners removed from the MIRAS system will have to reclaim their legitimate tax relief later therefore, or have their tax codes adjusted.

HOW THE NEW TAX RULES AFFECT BARCLAYS SAVERS.

Last year the Chancellor announced that, from 6th April 1985, the interest paid by banks on personal savings accounts of all U.K. residents (excluding accounts held outside the U.K.) should be paid under the same arrangement as that applied to building society interest for many years.

This means that all relevant interest payments will automatically be paid net of tax. We will pay this tax direct to the Inland Revenue on your behalf. The interest you receive will be without further liability to basic rate tax.

Most savers will benefit from the new arrangement because the rate of tax we have to deduct is less than the basic rate of tax.

Prior to the changeover, we are making a payment of gross interest to accounts which in future will receive net interest. Depending on which type of account you hold, this will have been credited on either 25th March or 4th April.

To compensate for the vast majority of our Supersavers account holders being non-taxpayers these accounts will attract an increased rate from 4th April 1985. Rates may vary from time to time.

Account holders outside these new rules, e.g. companies, overseas residents, members clubs, charities, associations, will continue to receive gross interest.

With effect from 4th April 1985 our rates of interest will be as shown in the table.

If you are included in the new system then the net figure is the one you will receive. If, in addition, you are a basic rate taxpayer, the gross equivalent figure shows what the interest is worth to you. If you are excluded from the new system, then you will receive the gross figure.

Whether the new rules affect you or not, you should continue to declare interest for tax purposes, as in the past.

If you're not sure about how or if you will be affected, call in at any Barclays branch where we'll be pleased to advise you.

JUDGES FREE QUICK-DRAW SHOTGUN KILLER

A SOLDIER serving life imprisonment for the shotgun killing of his step-father in a drunken quick-on-the-draw challenge was freed by the Appeal Court yesterday.

The Lord Chief Justice, Lord LANE, said the 3½ years ALISTAIR MOLONEY had spent in jail is "more than enough to satisfy the needs of the law, and expiation of the crime."

As he stepped into the spring sunshine outside the High Court, arm-in-arm with his sister and mother, Moloney, 24, said:

"The support of my family and friends has kept me going. I don't know what I would have done without them. I was half-expecting the judge's decision to free me, but it's a relief.

"There were a lot of good guys in prison. But I'm glad I'm out and I don't want to go back.

"I'm going home to celebrate with eggs, chips and Branston pickle."

His mother said: "I am three miles high. It has been a long battle, but it has been worth it."

Shot in the face

It was in November 1981 after a family party at his step-father PATRICK's home in Huntingdon, Cambridgeshire, that Moloney fired a single cartridge from a 12-bore shotgun which hit his step-father in the face.

At his Birmingham Crown Court trial in September 1982 his plea of guilty to manslaughter was not accepted and he was jailed for life for murder.

The Appeal Court originally upheld the conviction, but last month the House of Lords substituted a manslaughter verdict and sent the case back to the Appeal Court.

In that ruling Lord Bridge said that while Moloney, of John McGuire Crescent, Coventry, who was on leave from service with the Gordon Highlanders in Belize, was guilty of a "high degree of recklessness" in accepting a "ridiculous challenge" from his step-father to see who was faster on the draw, it did not amount to murder.

Long enough

Yesterday Moloney's counsel Mr LOUIS BLOM-COOPER Q C, had been addressing the Appeal Court for only a few minutes when Lord Lane intervened to say: "We think this young man has been in custody long enough."

The Lord Chief Justice, who sat with Mr Justice SKINNER and Mr Justice SIMON BROWN, went on: "This young man, in the most bizarre circumstances, unfortunately killed his step-father, of whom he was very fond.

"It was plainly necessary for him to serve a term of imprisonment for a variety of reasons but, in particular, for him to be able to expiate his crime.

"However, the course of justice has inevitably been somewhat slow and he has spent a considerable period in custody—over three years."

He should now go free.

IBA chief wins 'Scum' appeal

By HARVEY LEE
Television Staff

MRS MARY WHITEHOUSE faces legal costs of about £50,000 after the Appeal Court yesterday overturned a High Court ruling that the director general of the Independent Broadcasting Authority committed "a grave error of judgment" in allowing the screening of the film "Scum."

Sir JOHN DONALDSON, Master of the Rolls, in a reserved judgment, rejected as "misplaced" criticism of Mr JOHN WHITNEY for not referring it to members of the Authority.

He also issued a warning to those challenging in the courts any IBA decisions over controversial programmes.

"The mere fact that a programme offended good taste or decency would not inevitably mean that the Authority's monitoring system was open to attack or not being operated," he said.

The court was satisfied with the way in which the IBA monitors programmes. It ought to be left to the director-general to decide when to refer programmes to members.

The screening late on a Saturday night in June 1985 on Channel 4 of "Scum" — about violence and homosexuality at a Borstal—led Mrs Whitehouse, president of the National Viewers and Listeners Association, to take legal action.

"Scum" was described by Lord Justice WATKINS in the High Court, as "gratuitously offensive and revolting." He and Mr Justice TAYLOR said the IBA had not been wrong in allowing it to be shown, but had failed in its legal duty by not seeing it first.

Mr Whitney had watched a video copy at home with his wife to simulate the kind of environment in which viewers might see it.

Last night he said: "Mrs Whitehouse created a loophole which others have fought to exploit in the past year. The Appeal Court has firmly closed it."

She was refused leave of appeal ot the House of Lords. But she plans to petition the Lords for leave of appeal, and begin a campaign to have broadcasting covered by the Obscene Publications Act.

She said she brought the action as an individual and does not have the resources to meet £50,000 in costs.

"I have not the remotest idea where the money is going to come from. My husband and I are pensioners, and if they decide to bankrupt me, what can I do?"

She said the Association has 30,000 members, each of whom pays £1 a year in subscription.

Carbon-copy raiders get £1m gems

By IAN HENRY
Crime Correspondent

A SMASH-and-grab gang stole jewellery worth about £1 million yesterday in the third raid in five years on Graff's of Brompton Road, Knightsbridge.

Yesterday's robbery was almost identical to a £1½ million raid on Graff's last summer — and the gang even used a similar beige Escort car.

Three men, possibly four, armed with builders' nail guns and sledgehammers, smashed a display window and grabbed jewellery before jumping into their car and driving off.

Driver injured

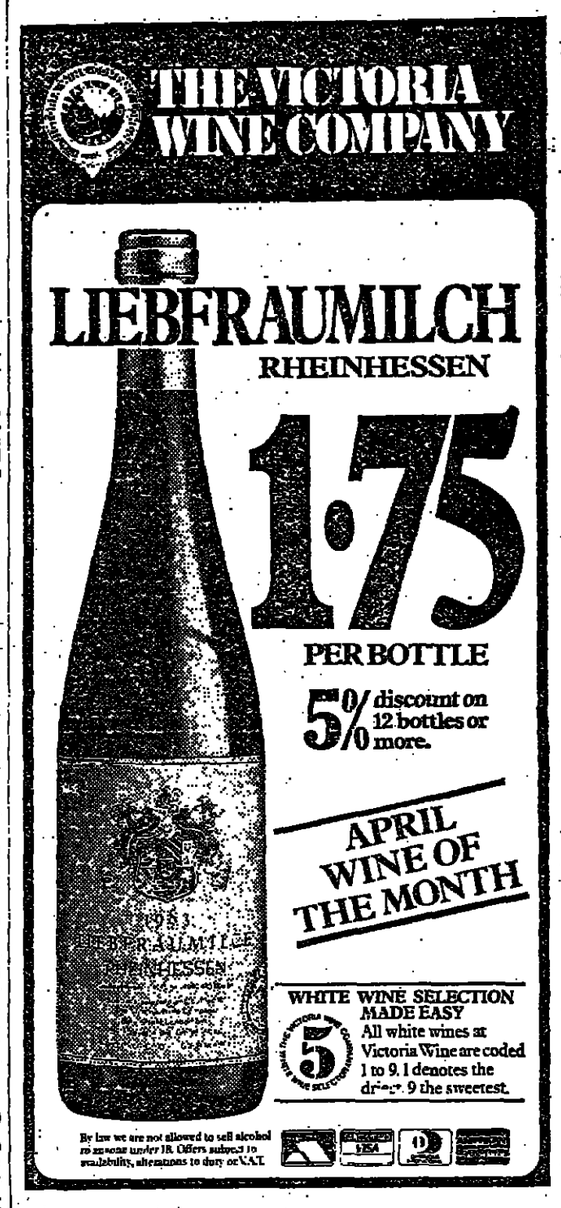
Last August when jailing two Americans for a £1,500,000 raid on Graff's in Sept. 1980, Judge Owen Stable Q C warned American gangsters planning robberies in Britain they were likely to come up against public-spirited actions.

The Americans, both from Aafia families, were jailed for 15 years. They had been arrested as they stepped off a flight at Chicago. Three members of the public who helped police were awarded £850.

It was reported that the 1980 robbery was ordered by a Mafia chief who wanted the £400,000 Marlborough Diamond for his wife. None of the stolen jewels were recovered. It was posted to New York from London before the robbers caught a plane to Chicago.

DEAD TWINS NAMED

Twin sisters aged 19 who drowned when a freak wave swept them out to sea while paddling near Porthleven, Cornwall, were named yesterday as Jean and Alison Margarson, of Parklands Close, St Columb, near Newquay. They were university students.



Tighter check ordered after Jasmine death

By DAVID FLETCHER
Health Services Correspondent

TIGHTER social work procedures have been ordered following the death of Jasmine Beckford, the four-year-old girl who was battered to death after being starved and tortured.

A "strong reminder" on the need to visit children in care who have been returned to their parents — has been sent to all councils by the Health Department.

Mr John Patten, junior health Minister, said: "Following this tragic case ministers have held an urgent review of how this kind of case should be handled."

"Our advice, which is going out to directors of social services in the next few days, reminds authorities that:

"There is an esesntial requirement for social workers to visit such children to ensure their safety and wellbeing. This should be done not less often than every six weeks for children under five.

Regular contact

"Returning a child to its family must be part of a planned programme of rehabilitation.

"There needs to be frequent and regular contact between the social workers and the child particularly in the early weeks of the child's return home."

He announced that the DHSS would also be asking the social services inspectorate to undertake an early investigation of the best practice in the supervision of children who are at risk of child abuse.

Mr Patten added: "The Department's advice recommends that where a child in care is returned to its family, its placing should be reviewed by a senior social worker within the first two-to-four weeks."

MOTHER OF TORTURED BOY 'SCARED'

A TEENAGE mother whose lover tortured her baby boy with hot nails was sentenced yesterday to 40 hours' community work making toys.

The 18-year-old unmarried mother, who was not named, lived with the man for nearly a year but he was not the baby's father, it was stated at Horseferry Road magistrates' court.

Mr PETER CADMAN, defending, said his client was too scared to go to the police. The man was violent, and had attacked her.

Police Sgt MARY TUCKER told the magistrate, Mr ERIC CROWTHER, that hot nails heated in an electric socket were placed on the boy's buttocks. The injuries included bruising, bites and burns to the back, buttocks and legs, and a cigarette burn to the hand.

A man is in custody awaiting trial on seven charges including grievous bodily harm on the baby, neglect and wounding.

Screams muffled

The mother told police she had locked away her 17-month-old baby in a cupboard to muffle his screaming. She admitted neglecting the boy in a manner likely to cause unnecessary suffering.

Mr CROWTHER, in sentencing, told her: "Do this work and put all of this behind you. I know you weren't actively cruel, but you know, this child was terribly ill-treated while in your care, by a man who you tolerated.

"Part of the description of you in the probation report was that you had been a purposeless rebel. Let us try to give a little purpose to your life by seeing if you can repay your debt to society and your child by doing unpaid work for the community."

The baby is now with foster parents, Westminster City Council having obtained a permanent care order.

MOTHER SAVES BOY WITH HEAD IN DOG'S MOUTH

Seventeen-month-old Jamie Baker was recovering in hospital yesterday after the family Dobermann clamped its jaws completely over his head as he crawled into the kitchen.

His mother Shelley dragged the animal's mouth open at their home in The Close, Wilmington, Kent.

After treatment for scalp lacerations Jamie was said to be "doing fine" at the Brook Hospital, Blackheath. The dog is to be destroyed.

COMA MAN DIES

Peter Hancock, 37, of Moorgreen, Nottinghamshire, has died in a Nottingham hospital after more than 18 months in a coma. He suffered head and lung injuries in a road crash in Nyeri, Kenya, in June, 1985, and was flown back to Britain.

CAR THIEVES TO BE TREATED LIKE ROBBERS

By A Dublin Correspondent

Tough measures against car thieves and thugs have been promised by the Irish Justice Minister, Mr Michael Noonan, following concern over the epidemic proportions that car theft has reached in Dublin.

Mr Noonan told the annual conference of mid ranking police sergeants and inspectors that car thieves and thugs who attack the elderly would in future be treated in the same way as armed robbers and rapists.

Their chances of early release from prison would be the same as these categories. The minister added that a new jail for car thieves and young offenders on Spike Island in Cork harbour would have its first inmates by the end of next week.

BOAT BOYS HID FROM RESCUERS

Two boys aged 15 who were caught by the tide in Langstone Harbour, Hampshire, and trapped in their boat on a mudflat, hid from rescuers overnight because they feared getting into trouble with their parents.

Jason Constable and David Japp, both of Leigh Park, Hampshire, stayed in the cabin when coastguards sent up a helicopter to find them. A third youth, Richard Gibbs, 15, also of Leigh Park, went ashore and raised the alarm.

MIDWEEK FIXTURE URGED

Daily Telegraph Reporter

MR MACFARLANE, Sports Minister, suggested yesterday that future England v. Scotland soccer matches at Wembley should be played midweek as part of the Government's crackdown on hoolganism.

Last week the Government effectively forced the Football Association to switch the fixture on May 25 from Wembley to Hampden Park, Glasgow. Mr Macfarlane's suggestion brought a furious response from Mr Gordon Wilson, chairman of the Scottish National party and M P for Dundee East: "The London Government seems intent on being as offensive to Scots as possible.

"If the Scottish Football Association have any self-respect they should cancel the Scotland-England fixture immediately."

Meanwhile, Mr Ken Bates, chairman of Chelsea, has told the Commons all party football committee that a "sinister" organisation is backing soccer violence and much of the trouble is pre-arranged.

Three in custody for crowd trouble

Three supporters who admitted using threatening behaviour at the Portsmouth v Cardiff match last month were given custodial sentences yesterday by Mr Vic Jenner, chairman of Portsmouth Magistrates.

Tyrone Birch, 21, an apprentice test engineer of Burnham, Arundel, was jailed for 10 days. John McGlynn, 18, an apprentice technician of Eastfield Road, Southsea, was sent to a detention centre for 21 days, and Christopher Nott, 22, a London caretaker, was jailed for seven days. Each was also bound over in the sum of £150 for two years to keep the peace.

Fan who threw coins fined £200

Anthony James Collett, 19, a painter, of Mayo Road, Sydenham, who admitted throwing a *stone at other supporters out*side the same ground was fined 2£00 for threatening behaviour.

Off-duty Pc cleared of soccer charge

An off-duty policeman arrested at the Chelsea v Sunderland Milk Cup semi-final on March 4 was cleared of using threatening behaviour by Wells Street magistrates, Westminster, yesterday.

Pc William Ross, 23, who is based at Rochester Row, Westminster, but has been suspended since his arrest, said he had been hit by a small battery, which he had then thrown into a clear part of the stand so that it could not be used again as a missile.

GORBACHEV FAR FROM SETTING SUMMIT DATE

By NIGEL WADE in Moscow

RUSSIA is far from ready to fix a date for an East-West summit, Mr Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister, told his Canadian counterpart, Mr Joe Clark, in Moscow yesterday.

"Gromyko said that in principle the idea of a summit was probably a good one at some point but they certainly were nowhere near choosing a date or venue." The Canadian Foreign Minister's spokesman, Mr Sean Brady, told reporters.

"Gromyko added that generally people should not look at summit meetings as being a sign of a good relationship or getting things accomplished."

Tass news agency said Mr Gromyko told Mr Clark Russia was striving for "a decisive turn for the better in world affairs." Arms negotiations with Washington could succeed if America went "its part of the way."

Diplomats say Mr Gorbachev appears to set high initial priority on strengthening unity within the Soviet bloc and rather less priority, for the moment, on forging new ties with Washington.

Peking target

Personal attacks upon Mr Reagan in the Soviet Press have been reduced but most of the Kremlin's diplomatic business since the succession on March 11 has been with eastern Europe.

Mr Gorbachev has also underlined his wish to see "a serious improvement of relations" with Peking, to heal the 25-year-old ideological rift between the two communist giants. The next round of the ponderous Sino-Soviet normalisation talks is due to open in Moscow next Tuesday.

In his acceptance speech, Mr Gorbachev promised that Moscow would do all it could to expand co-operatin with other communist countries, "to enhance the role and influence of socialism in world affairs."

A busy round of meetings with Soviet-bloc party chiefs, premiers and foreign ministers has followed Mr Gorbachev's takeover.

Official reports have been full of phrases about "promoting the further development of relations" (with Rumania), "expanding and perfecting co-operation" (with Bulgaria) and a "unanimous striving to strengthen friendship" (with East Germany).

Bonn signal

Mr Gorbachev met Soviet bloc party leaders at the time of President Chernenko's funeral and may hold another, more formal summit session with them around the 40th anniversary of the VE-day next month A Warsaw Pact summit was postponed in January because of Mr Chernenko's failing health.

Meanwhile, Mr Gorbachev has signalled to Bonn that the recent Soviet campaign against alleged "Revanchism" in West Germany may have been overdone.

A barrage of allegations from moscow throughout the winter accused the Bonn Government of encouraging Right-wing extremists in their alleged desire to retake territories lost by Germany in the war.

Mr Gorbachev said in a message to a West German peace group that Russia and the Federal Republic needed "co-operation and good-neighbourly relations."

Mitterrand resorts to PR voting

By MICHAEL FIELD in Paris

NEXT year's general election for the French National Assembly are to be held under a single-ballot system of proportional representation at "department" level, using the principle of the highest average.

The Socialist Government's decision, which requires legislation was announced after yesterday's Cabinet meeting. The change is a major one from the system of the single-member constituency with two rounds of balloting.

The change to proportional voting was promised by the Socialists in their campaign before the general elections of 1981. The issue faded after they won an absolute majority under the two-round, first-past-the-post system

But, as by-elections, local government elections, and opinion polls over the last three years progressively disclosed a big decline in support for the Socialists, and after their former allies, the Communists, left the Government last year, President Mitterrand publicly re-adhered to his original preference for the proportional system.

Earlier this year, as everything seemed to point to a disaster for the Socialists in next year's elections, the President said that "when the time was ripe" he would decide how large a dose of proportional representation would be introduced.

M. Pierre Joxe, Minister of the Interior, said yesterday that the change would increase the number of Deputies by several dozen to establish the principle of "one deputy per just over 100,000 inhabitants".

This would mean, is is pointed out, 97 more Deputies to be added to the 491 Deputies in the existing Assembly, bringing the total to 588.

M. Joxe said there was no plan to permit mixing names from rival lists or to allow a preference vote. Lists that obtained under 5 per cent of the poll would not qualify for seats.

PISTOL OF TERRORIST 'CLICKED'

By LESLIE CHILDE in Rome

A MAN said to have been identified as a Palestinian terrorist was being questioned last night after a bizarre bazooka attack on the Jordan Embassy in Rome ended amid comic-opera scenes.

The shell from the African-made anti-tank weapon hit an empty fifth-floor flat instead of the penthouse where the Jordanian diplomats work. Otherwise the result would have been a massacre, a Rome detective said.

The man who fired the bazooka fled, but was chased by Signor Paolo Gonnella, 59, janitor of the building. Three times the man pressed the trigge rof a Swiss-made automatic pistol — and three times it just went "click."

Two security guards overpowered the man and held him until two mounted policemen, who happened to be passing, dismounted and handcuffed him.

Police later said they had identified Ahmad Mimour, 20, who claimed to be a member of the "Black September" movement.

They said that after hours of refusing to do so he finally admitted who he was but that from their list of suspects they had known his identity all the time.

Mimour was said to have stated the bazooka, which could be used only once, was given to him by a woman in Rome.

NO INVITATION FROM RUSSIA FOR VE-DAY

By NIGEL WADE in Moscow

There has still been no formal invitation from the Soviet Union for a British delegation to attend Moscow ceremonies next month marking the 40th anniversary of the defeat of Nazi Germany.

British officials are waiting not only for the invitation but also for precise details about what kind of commemoration is planned. The last detailed statement on this came from the Kremlin in June.

It envisaged a Kremlin rally on the eve of VE-day and wreath-laying ceremonies to mark the day itself. Meanwhile, a propaganda campaign is being conducted by Soviet Press and broadcasting outlets to remind Russians and the world how the Red Army "liberated" Eastern Europe from the Nazis.

Prisoners freed by Israelis shout Khomeini slogans

By CON COUGHLIN in Ansar, South Lebanon

CHANTING pro-Khomeini slogans and gesturing their defiance, about 760 of Israel's prisoners-of-war were driven in Red Cross lorries to freedom yesterday.

Aged 15 to 50, they were mainly Lebanese Shi'ite Muslems and Palestinians.

They were freed after Israel decided to close a detention centre at Ansar in south Lebanon, just south of the Litani River.

Of the 2,000 prisoners held at Ansar, about 1,000, whom the Israelis accuse of being involved in direct terrorist action, have been transferred to a prison in Israel.

The remainder, people alleged to be members of terrorist groups but not to have been directly involved in anti-Israeli activity, have been released.

Hostage exchange

The Ansar camp was built after Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982. It held captured Palestinian fighters, but they were released in late 1983 as part of a hostage exchange, and the camp has since been used to house people arrested during the Israeli occupation of south Lebanon.

In many ways the Ansar camp reflects the fortunes of Israel in Lebanon. Constructed to hold the Palestinians, against whom the invasion was launched, it finished holding members of the local population, whom the Israelis initially wanted to liberate.

As the first detainees were escorted out of the camp yesterday morning to waiting Red Cross lorries, they broke into chants, praising Iran's Islamic leader, Ayatollah Khomeini, and Gamal Abdel Nasser, the Egyptian leader, who died in 1970.

Many of those released were "locals" arrested during recent Israeli searches of Shi'ites villages, although a few had been held since December, 1983, when the camp first took south Lebanese citizens.

"I was taken from my home in front of my wife and five children three months ago and have not had any contact with them since," said Abbed Alfatah, 41, a Shi'ite Moslem from Tyre.

"They searched my home, and when they found nothing they took me away. I had nothing to do with any militia activity, but they refused to believe me. Now I am going home, but I still do not know whether or not my house has been destroyed by the Israelis."

Nadim Mohammed, 27, a fighter with the Palestine Liberation Organisation, said he was picked up by the Israelis shortly after he was evacuated from Tripoli in north Lebanon in December, 1983, following the factional war between rival elements of the PLO.

"I was on my way to Port Said and was picked up 200 miles from the Israeli border," he said. "They arrested me, and I have been here ever since."

Mr Mohammed said that after his release he would be making his way to Tunisia to rejoin his PLO unit. "I am committed to the fight to win back my homeland and until the Israelis recognise the rights of Palestinians our struggle will continue," he said.

Conditions at the camp were primitive, with 25 men in a tent sleeping in a small compound surrounded by barbed wire and heavily armed Israeli soldiers.

Nearly all the people released yesterday looked fit, however, an donly one Moslem needed to be taken away by ambulance.

Mr Michael Cagneux, head of the Red Cros delegation in Tel Aviv, who supervised the release of the detainees, said most of them were being returned to areas outside Israel's control but that about 250 would remain in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon.

Closure of the camp indicates the fast pace at which Israeli forces are now withdrawing from Lebanon. Col. Israel Yosi, the camp's commander, said it was necesary to close the camp because it was near to Israel's front line in Lebanon.

Work was already under way yesterday to dismantle floodlights and security fencing, and the area will be turned into a field and given back to local people before the Israelis pull out completely.

There was concern, however, for the 1,000 detainees now in prison in Israel. They were all blindfolded and handcuffed before being put into a convoy of buses with windows blacked out to be taken to Israel.

Gen. Moshe Levy, Israeli Chief of Staff, said the prisoners would not be held in Israel indefinitely. Their release would depend upon the security situation in south Lebanon where their homes are.

This, in effect, makes them hostages, and the Israeli action is in breach of the Geneva convention, which forbids the transfer of prisoners-of-war across international borders.

Israel claims, however, that the terms of the convention do not apply because Israeli forces are not at war in south in south Lebanon.

ISRAEL CRITICISED

Red Cross protest

OUR GENEVA CORRESPONDENT writes: The International Committee of the Red Cross has criticised Israel for violating the Geneva Convention on prisoners in occupied territories.

It said the moving of 1,000 detainees to Israel before transfer to a new camp in Lebanon violated Articles 49 and 76.

WELCOMING GUNS

Pledge to shoot

OUR BEIRUT CORRESPONDENT reports: Moslem militiamen in Sidon who have been warring with the Christians, handed machine-guns to some of the prisoners freed by the Israelis to fire in the air. "The next time I shoot it will be at an Israeli soldier," one youth said.

United Nations sources said an Israeli anti-guerrilla force of 200 soldiers, 19 troop carriers, one tank, 13 other vehicles, and one bulldozer entered the market town of Chehrabiyen (formerly Teir Zebna) and rounded up 300 men for questioning.

'Elimination' order to South African police

By CHRISTOPHER MUNNION in Johannesburg

TWO days before the Langa shooting incident in which police killed 19 blacks, South African police headquarters issued instructions that people who threw petrol bombs during unrest should be "eliminated," the inquiry into the incident heard yesterday.

The orders also told police not to hesitate to use rifles when their lives were in danger or when there was a risk to the lives and property of the public.

Col Adolf Charlton van Rooyen, head of the police riot squads, told Mr Justice Donald Kannemeyer, the one-man judicial commission of inquiry in Uitenhage in the Eastern Cape, that the instructions were in a telex from General de Wit, senior deputy commissioner of police, sent to all divisional commissioners on March 19.

The telex said all armoured vehicles, the mine-proofed Casspirs used by riot police, should be issued with R-one rifles and sufficient ammunition in cases when petrol bombs were used against the police.

Ineffective methods

In such cases, police were under instructions "under all circumstances" to try to eliminate the people who threw petrol bombs.

The telex followed two requests for permission to use buckshot or handguns in dealing with unrest as the conventional method of tear-gas and rubber bullets had proved ineffecitve amid escalating violence.

Col van Rooyen said the police would at first try to use rubber batons, followed by tear-smoke, rubber bullets and shotguns with birdshot and later roughshot. Sharp-point ammunition from 9mm pistols or R-one rifles on a single-shot setting would be used in extreme circumstances.

Earlier, Mr Errol Moorcroft, one of five Opposition Members of Parliament who visited the scene of the shooting the following day, gave evidence on a notebook said to have been carried by the leader of the group that advanced on the Police evidence was that the man was of Rastafarian appearance and that the notebook contained revolutionary slogans.

IMMIGRANTS OFFERED CASH TO GO

By Rebecca Franceskides in Brussels

THE Belgian government is expecting large numbers of immigrants to take up an offer of cash payments to return home.

Some 15,000 non-E E C residents on the dole for more than a year will be eligible for a bonus equal to a year's unemployment benefits if they promise to leave within 60 days.

The scheme, intended to reduce record unemployment running at 14 per cent., has received a cool reception from immigrant groups. The Government last year dropped plans to introduce the payments after meeting strong opposition.

But the centre-Right Government later found a busy time of the year to win approval for the measure, which takes effect on May 1.

Proof of return

Immigrants wanting to take up the offer will be given a 50 per cent. downpayment when their application is approved. If they go to another European country they lose the bonus.

A spokesman at the Ministry of Labour said the cash balance will be paid once there is proof of a return to the country of origin.

The scheme which cost the Government up to £5,000 for each immigrant, is aimed at North African and Turkish immigrants who came to Belgium during the economic boom of the 1960s.

The West German Government was the first to introduce grants to encourage repatriation. About 300,000 non-E E C nationals took up the offer but the high cost forced the abandonement of the scheme.

HONGKONG PACT APPLAUDED BY CHINA DEPUTIES

By HUGH DAVIES in Peking

CHINA'S Foreign Minister, Wu Xueqian, was applauded by 2,600 Deputies of the Chinese National People's Congress in Peking yesterday as he gave details of the Sino-British declaration on Hongkong.

He said that Hongkong had belonged to China from ancient times and that its return was the "common desire of the Chinese people."

Clapping began as he said that the People's Republic had resolved a question governments of "Old China" (before the 1949 Communist revolution) utterly failed to tackle.

There was further applause when Wu said agreement was reached through Sino-British co-operation to ensure the stability and prosperity of the territory.

In return for sovereignty in 1997 China is guaranteeing that Hongkong will remain a capitalist-styled enclave for 50 years.

'Far-reaching effect'

The Minister said: "The settlement is a momentous event in Chinese and world history. It will have a far-reaching effect on China's reunification with Taiwan."

He stressed that the friendship between China and Britain was entering a new phase. "We are confident of a bright future," he said.

Wu added: "We will make resolute efforts to implement the declaration. The political and economic situation in China is excellent. Since the declaration the Hongkong economy has been stable, and we believe Hongkong 'compatriots' will continue to develop the situation and make new contributions."

Earlier, at a briefing for foreign correspondents, Ma Yuzhen, chief spokesman for the Foreign Ministry, said that the two sides were still discussing the announcement of the membership of the joint liaison group to monitor the transition period.

He gave no details, but it is understood that Peking is objecting to a British suggestion that a Hongkong Chinese, Mr John Chan, be included in the team.

Mr Chan is Deputy Secretary for General Duties in the Hongkong Government. He was a key background figure in the secret negotiations.

He would sit on the British side. However, China has consistently refused to allow Hongkongers a say in any of the discussions, asserting that the mainland negotiators adequately represented the aspirations of ethnic Chinese in the colony.

When Sir Edward Youde, Hongkong Governor, said that he was speaking for the colony, the Chinese instantly retorted that he represented only the British view.

But China has agreed this week to allow Hongkongers to help with the drafting of the post-1997 laws, although Peking will have the final word.

The British liaison team is expected to include Dr David Wilson, an Assistant Under-Secretary of State, Mr Peter Thomson, head of chancery in the British Embassy in Peking, Mr Teal Burrows, a legal adviser to the Foreign Office, and Mr John Boyd, also from the Foreign Office.

China is thought to have already chosen her five men. They are understood to include Ke Zaishuo, 60, a counsellor in the Department of Western Affairs in the Foreign Ministry, and Qiao Zonghuai, a senior official of the New China news agency's Hongkong bureau, Peking's eyes and ears in the colony.

New Zealand closes door on Springboks

NEW ZEALAND would not issue visas to the South African Springbok rugby side because it would not "play sport with apartheid," Mr David Lange, Prime Minister of New Zealand, said in Nairobi yesterday.

But despite his Government's abhorrence of apartheid New Zealand could not order its own Rugby Union to call off a proposed tour of South Africa later this year, Mr Lange added.

He spoke before flying to Tanzania, the third leg of a seven-nation African tour that also includes Zambia, Botswana, Zimbabwe and the Seychelles. He started his tour in Mauritius.

Last week the New Zealand Rugy Union postponed until April 17 a decision on whether to go ahead with the mooted tour of South Africa, and Mr Lange has denied this was done to spare him embarrassment during talks with African leaders.

'Gets to heart'

He claimed that the Rugby Union, on the contrary, wanted to embarrass him because of his opposition to apartheid.

"Our sports policy causes the most vigorous, vehement squealing in South Africa you can possibly imagine," he said. "It gets to the heart of their exalted, elitist, white supremacist existence."

He also said it would be "pretty well meaningless" for New Zealand to impose trade sanctions against South Africa unless the rest of the international community did so.

New Zealand intended to open an embassy to establish representation in black Africa and was seeking to identify more closely with the anti-apartheid "front-line staues"—Tanzania, Zimbabwe, Zambia, Mozambique, Angola and Botswana.—Reuter.

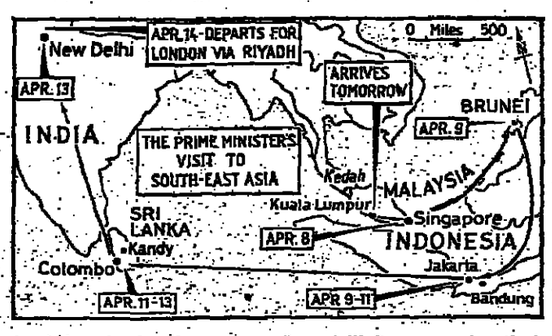
Gruelling Thatcher tour will take in Saudi Arabia

By JAMES MacMANUS
Diplomatic Staff

MRS THATCHER begins her tour of South-East Asia today with an unexpected visit to Saudi Arabia added to her punishing itinerary.

The crowded 11-day tour will take the Prime Minister to Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Brunei, Sri Lanka and India and then to the Saudi capital of Riyadh at the invitation of King Fahd.

The Saudi monarch felt that since Mrs Thatcher would be overflying the Middle East on her way back a meeting would be appropriate. The RAF VC-10 will therefore spend threes hours at Riyadh airport while the two leaders confer in the capital.



Strike cancellation

The tour, which was originally scheduled for last September but was cancelled due to the miners' strike, is designed to strengthen British trade and promote political ties in a region that was largely under British control until the war with Japan.

Britain's trade and influence in the region have shrunk considerably since then, and Mrs Thatcher hopes that by "showing the flag" she can at least boost British business prospects in the rapidly expanding Asian market-place.

She is also expected to review East-West relations with Asian leaders and give them her views on the new Soviet leader, Mr Mikhail Gorbachev, whom she has met both in London and in Moscow.

Skilful diplomacy

Political and economic changes in China and South-East Asian relations with the European Community will also be high on the agenda for discussion.

The Asian nations are reported to have been impressed by Britain's skilful diplomacy with the regional superpower, China that led to the Hongkong agreement last year.

Mrs Thatcher, who signed the agreement in Peking in December, met Chinese leaders on that occasion and is thus well-placed to discuss Peking's reform policies with her Asian hosts.

Mrs Thatcher's forthright diplomacy and her habit of blunt speaking may present problems of style on a tour on which there will be some political problems.

Relations with India, where Mrs Thatcher is to dine with Mr Rajiv Gandhi, the new Prime Minister, remain unsettled by the activities of Sikh extremists in London.

Sikh propaganda

Despite intense diplomacy by the British High Commission in New Delhi the Indian Government is still not convinced that Britain cannot do more to curb the dissemination from London of Sikh propaganda.

Relations with Malaysia meanwhile are slowly recovering from a sour period in 1981 when Britain raised fees for foreign students.

As in the case of Singapore the Malaysian national airline is demanding extra flights to Britain, and this highly technical but bitterly contested issue will figure prominently in the Prime Minister's talks in both countries.

Despite these and other problems Mrs Thatcher has crammed as much business as possible into her crowded schedule. She will make 11 major speeches and hold four or five Press conferences on the trip, and on one day, next Tuesday, she is to visit three countries: Singapore, Brunei and Indonesia.

YANGTSE CHANGE OF MIND

By HUGH DAVIES in Peking

Two Yangtse River ferry ticket collectors were said yesterday to have been openly rude to the Mayor of Wuhan, Eastern China, but to have "changed their attitudes" after their behaviour was exposed.

In a public confession one, Xiong Siqiang, 21, said it was "routine" for him to abuse passengers. Seeing the Mayor in an ordinary overcoat, he thought he was an ordinary passenger and abused him when he supported a passenger whose question had been ignored. Now the collectors had decided to do better for passengers.

By IAN BALL in New York

RESENTMENT of Japan for its supposedly one-sided trade policies is deepening rapidly among Americans, according to public opinion polls and informal surveys of their constituents conducted by a number of congressmen.

This year Japan will "celebrate" the 40th anniversary of its 1945 surrender with a projected $50 billion (£42 billion) trade surplus with the United States.

A majority said Japan was clearly not playing the trade game fairly.

The theme of most American commentaries on the trade gap is that the two nations are moving towards a trade war that could have far-reaching consequences.

A Louis Harris poll published in BUSINESS WEEK found that 60 per cent. of Americans felt the Reagan Administration was doing a bad job in opening up Japanese markets. Some 56 per cent. opposed Mr Reagan's go-ahead to the Japanese car-makers to end voluntary restraints on exports to the United States.

'Gain of a marauder'

"Japan's trade surplus is seen as the gain of a marauder, not a competitor," BUSINESS WEEK said in a commentary on the poll results.

"Increasingly, Japan is seen as an exploiter of the international trading system, a rogue threatening the very foundations of open trade."

Along with the resentment is a growing suspicion of Japanese motives.

Among congressional, business and labour leaders, scepticism is noticeable in the face of Japanese pledges to buy more goods from the United States. Since the early 1970s, it is pointed out, Japan has not carried out similar promises made several times at prime ministerial level.

Mr Lionel Olmer, under-secretary at the Commerce Department and one of the Reagan Administration officials who have been shuttling regularly between Washington and Tokyo trying to work out trade agreements, no longer discusses the issues in diplomatic language.

"It is not acceptable to be treated as a second-class citizen," he said

IMPROVED ACCESS

Bitterness counter

Measures giving foreign products improved access to the Japanese market are expected to be announced next week, Kyodo News Agency reported in Tokyo yesterday.

The new market-opening package is aimed at heading off growing bitterness among Japan's trading partners, particularly the United States, about its large and growing trade surplus with the rest of the world.—Reuter.

DARWIN ISLE FIRES 'MAY PURIFY LIFE'

By THOMAS NETTER in Geneva

FIRES that ravaged thousands of acres of Charles Darwin's research islands in the Galapagos Archipelago may have some positive side effects.

In Gland, Switzerland, conservation official at the World Wildlife Fund and the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources said they had received word on Tuesday that most of the fires were under control nd that rain was expected to put the last of them out.

The fires had attracted public attention since the islands of Isabela and San Cristobel were research grounds for Darwin's "Origin of the Species," and the home of the Galapagos turtle.

Mr Ole Hamann, vice-president of the Charles Darwin Foundation and conservation union official said that, to a certain degree, the results of the fires could have therapeutic affects in maintaining the purity of the island's wildlife and fauna.

Ecuador pressure

Mr Hamann said the fires might slow the advance of settlements, where most of the blazes originated, as well as the "invasion" of crops and weeds into undamaged areas.

It might also force the government of Ecuador, which maintains sovereignty over the islands, to recognise the need for conservation efforts and slowing tourism, the union said, noting that "human influences are almost certainly responsible for the fires."

The Ecuadorean government had considered proposals for increasing revenue by promoting tourism to the islands, much to the dismay of conservationists. But it rejected proposals to "preserve the island's ecosystems and protect them from harmful human influences," the conservation union said.

"If the fires bring this more abiding conservation aspect to the world's attention and promote stronger international support for Ecuador's good intentions, they will have had a far more constructive impact.

HONGKONG JAIL APPEAL FAILS

Financier Amos Dawe has lost an appeal to the Privy Council against a five-year jail sentence in Hongkong for multi-million dollar fraud, legal officials in Hongkong said yesterday.

61 MPG* and a drive so smooth you'll think it runs on petrol.

If ever there was a car to dispel, once and for all, the misconceptions surrounding the diesel, this is it.

(As if to underline the point, 'What Car?'† recently wrote: "the Peugeot 305 could easily pass for a petrol powered car, such is the refinement of the diesel.")

The engine is smooth, powerful and responsive, with strong acceleration through the 5 speed gearbox all the way to its top speed of 93 mph.

The interior is comfortable, quiet, and well equipped for 5 adults. Its ride and handling are, as befits a Peugeot, exemplary.

So why forsake the petrol engine in favour of a diesel?

And even greater economies await you when a service interval finally comes around.

That's got to be worth looking into.

With a full 15,000 miles between services, and no carburettor, spark plugs, distributor, or coil to attend to, the savings really are considerable.

If you'd like to know more about the 305 range of diesel saloons and estates, drop by your local dealer, or send us the coupon and we'll send you the facts.

After all, when it's going to be a diesel, it's got to be a Peugeot.

BRITAIN LOSES FIGHTER DEAL WITH AUSTRIA

By Air Cdre G. S. COOPER Air Correspondent

SWITZERLAND has withdrawn support for the sale of British fighters to Austria in response to Britain's choice of the Brazilian Tucano trainer for the R A F instead of the Swiss Pilatus P C 9, leaving Sweden to win the contract.

Austria is now expected to go ahead with an order for 24 Saab J-35 Draken interceptors instead of British Aerospace Lightnings, which were favoured on cost and performance grounds.

The loss of the R A F trainer contract is moderately described in British Aerospace's annual report, published yesterday, as "a disappointment."

The Swiss P C 9, proposed jointly by British Aerospace and Pilatus, was the R A F's preferred choice.

British Aerospace proposes to continue an association with Pilatus for marketing P C 9s in combination with Hawk advanced jet trainers, but there is concern that Swiss interest in buying and promoting Hawks has cooled because of the decision.

£120m profit

The company is asking the Government, through the Society of British Aerospace Companies, to disclose the method used to decide winners of international tenders for defence contracts.

In releasing the 1984 annual report and accounts yesterday, the company confirmed a pre-tax profit of £120 million, announced last week.

It also produced a preliminary prospectus for the sale next month of 150 million shares, worth slightly over £600 million of which 50 million are new and the rest comprising the Governments 48 per cent. holding.

Military aircraft continue to be the main contributor to the sales turnover of £2,468 million, followed by guided weapons.

Life-saving additive

The aircraft fuel modifier developed by I C I could reduce loss of life by fire in air crashes, a Congressional hearing in Washington has been told.

Although a fire occurred when a Boeing 720 was crashed deliberately by remote control at Edwards Air Force Base, California, last December, "Avgard" anti-misting kerosene reduced the severity, said I C I.

CASH SNUB ANGERS POLY CHIEFS

By Our Education Correspondent

POLYTECHNIC directors have reacted angrily to the Government's decision to give the first stage of an extra £43 million for engineering and technology exclusively to universities.

The directors, holding their annual conference at Portsmouth, complained yesterday to Mr Peter Brooke, Higher Education Minister.

The 30 polytechnics have been ignored while 20 of the 44 universities are to receive £3,200,000 to pay for 579 extra engineering and technology students. A further £6,800,000 will be allocated in the first year of the programme, mainly on building projects.

Thatcher backing

The extra £43 million was announced in the Budget and backed by Mrs Thatcher, who wrote to 30 leading industrialists urging them to support the scheme by buying equipment for higher education institutions and sponsoring students.

Dr Harry Law, chairman of the Committee of Directors of Polytechnics and president of Portsmouth Polytechnic, said yesterday: "We expressed our feelings to the Minister fairly forcibly and made it clear that polytechnics were in an excellent position to supply industry with the engineers they need."

A survey of student costs conducted for the committee by Dr Raymond Rickett, director of Middlesex Polytechnic, shows that poly students cost taxpayers £1,210 a year less than their university counterparts, at £2,250 compared to £3,460 a year.

Guido Reni's "David with the Head of Goliath" which fetched £2 million at Sotheby's yesterday.

Service pensions 'cut by computer errors'

By NICHOLAS COMFORT Political Staff

THOUSANDS of ex-Servicemen are being denied their full pensions because of faulty computer programming which the Government has made only limited moves to remedy, a front-bench Labour defence spokesman said last night.

Mr Kevin McNamara, M P for Hull West, has obtained a "leaked" Defence Ministry document estimating that between 10 and 14 per cent. of Navy and marine pensioners may be affected.

Similar lapses had been identified by the Paymaster-General's office in connection with R A F pensions, and "we suspect Army awards may also suffer from the same errors."

The document states that while "fundamental errors" in programming have been known about for some time "no effort has been made" to check the individual entitlement of the 110,000 Navy and Marine pensioners involved.

Arrears due have been paid where discrepancies happened to come to light and compensation only when pensioners have asked for it.

Mr McNamara described this practice last night as "an insult to our ex-Servicemen" and demanded a full inquiry into why the correct pensions were not being paid as of right.

The document states that the discrepancies arose from the haste with which Navy pension records were computerised at Bath in the early 1970s.

Blanket Treasury authority had been obtained to put matters straight, and £120,000 had been paid out in "a handful of cases," with a further £30,000 written off.

WEEKEND FOOD

Hard winter makes Spring vegetables more expensive

By BRENDA PARRY

EASTER is traditionally the start of Spring, a time to introduce lighter foods and to start serving daily salads.

But Spring offers no concessionary prices.

The particularly cold winter means that new season vegetables are more expensive than ever.

English Spring lamb is at least £2 per lb for legs as are Jersey mids if you can find them. Cornish Spring greens are excellent quality but up to 60p per lb, while French beans and mange tout which go so beautifully with lamb are more like £1·50 lb.

School plea fails

IT was difficult to find justification for Sir Keith Joseph, Education Secretary, telling an Orthodox Hasidic Jewish community that their independent school must teach specific subjects, Mr Justice Woolf said in the High Court yesterday.

He said he was also concerned by a requirement, after a school inspection, that a set number of hours must be devoted to "secular subjects."

But the judge said he was unable to quash a notice of complaint against the Talmud Torah Malhzikei Hadass School at Clapton, made by the Education Secretary.

The school trustees, who had sought the quashing order, should have appealed to the Independent Schools Tribunal, which had wide-ranging powers.

The judge said that although the trustees had shown that there were "certain matters in respect of which the propriety of the conduct of the inspectors and the Secretary of State can be criticised," there were no clear errors of law established on which the Queen's Bench Divisional Court could quash the order.

A lawyer said afterwards that in the light of the judge's comments favourable to the school, discussions would be sought with the Education Minister's departments to seek a compromise.

Although the school is not dependent on public funds, the Secretary of State has a supervisory role.

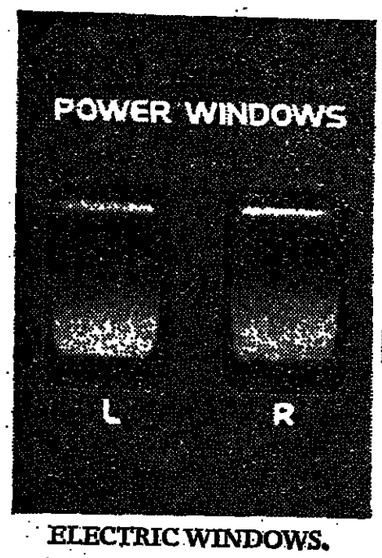
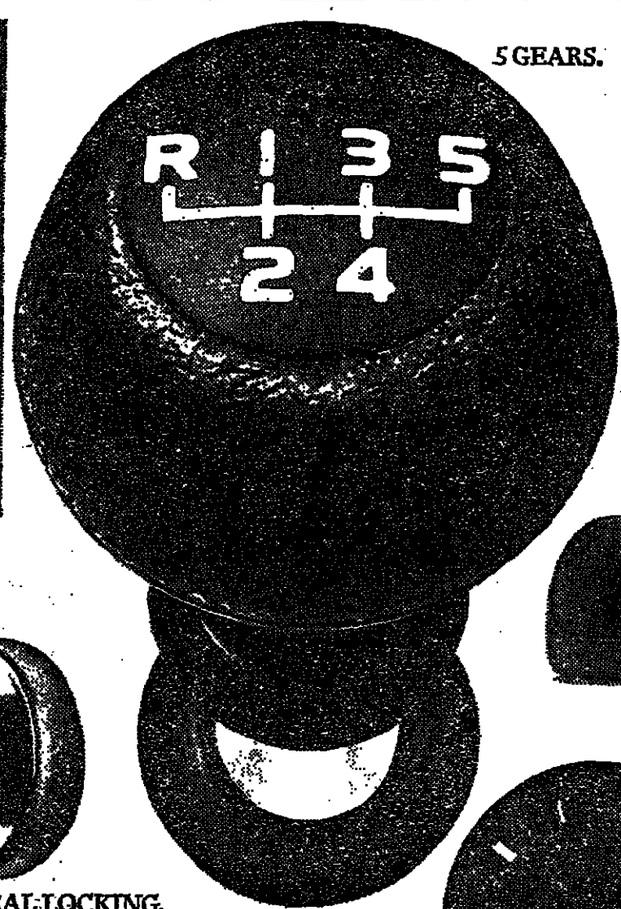
WITH THE VOLVO 340 SPECIAL EDITION WE'VE PANDERED TO YOUR WEAKNESSES.



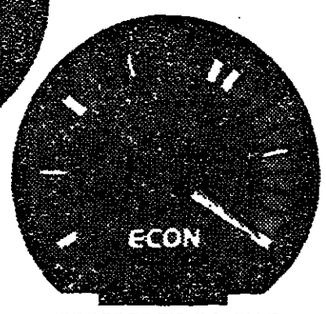
ELECTRIC WINDOWS.



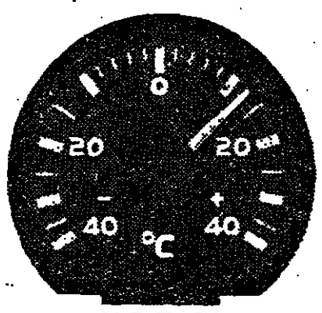
5 GEARS.

PLUSH UPHOLSTERY.

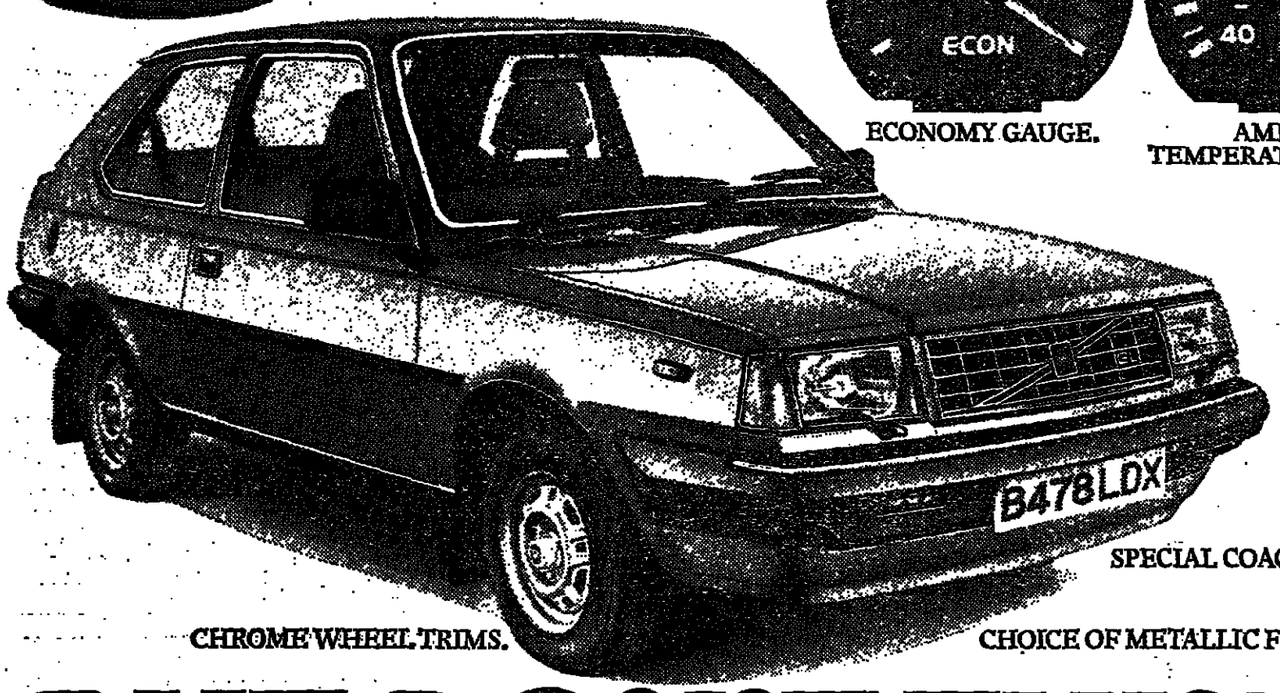
CENTRAL LOCKING.



ECONOMY GAUGE.



AMBIENT TEMPERATURE GAUGE.



SPECIAL COACHLINE.

CHROME WHEEL TRIMS.

CHOICE OF METALLIC FINISHES.

You may think we've been a bit extravagant with our latest Volvo.

But then again, it is a special edition.

We've included all the extras you've always hankered after, but didn't think you could find on a car of this price.

There's a fifth gear (to save you petrol).

On the dashboard, there's an economy gauge, to help you drive more fuel efficiently and an ambient temperature gauge (very useful as an early warning of icy conditions on the road).

There's also central locking (to save manoeuvres inside the car).

Outside, we've finished the car with metallic paint (Silver Grey, Ocean Blue, or Anthracite) and a special coachline.

And there's chrome trim on the wheels.

Though we've taken your weaknesses into account, it isn't fair to assume our car has any.

Like every Volvo, the 340 Special Edition is built around a steel safety cage.

It has crumple zones front and rear, that'll absorb a 30 mph impact.

We've also taken the care to weld a steel bar into the front doors, should you be unfortunate enough to be involved in a side-on-collision.

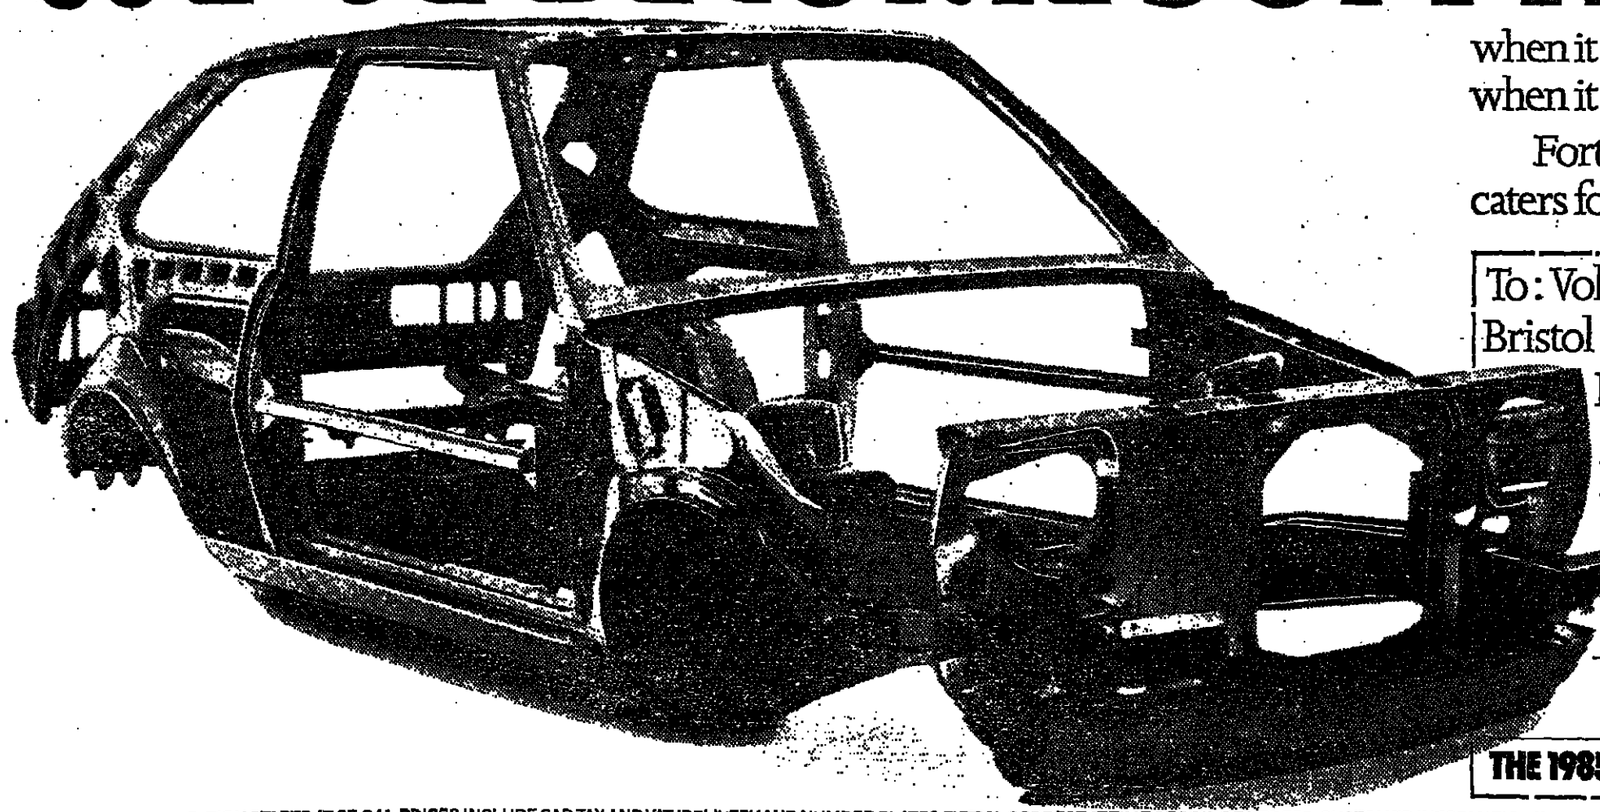
Then to top it off, we've rustproofed the car in a unique 37 stage programme.

The Volvo 340 Special Edition goes for only £5,941.

For which you get the trappings of a luxury car, and a lot of peace of mind.

After all, you may have your soft spots

BUT DON'T THINK WE'VE BECOME SOFT HEARTED.



when it comes to cars, but you also have them when it comes to accidents.

Fortunately, the Volvo 340 Special Edition caters for both.

HOLIDAY HOTELS STILL SEEK JOBLESS GUESTS

By DAVID FLETCHER Health Services Correspondent

SEASIDE boarding houses are still advertising for guests living on social security despite the Government's clampdown on scroungers who live in holiday resorts at taxpayers' expense.

A Margate hotel is advertising vacancies for social security claimants in London local newspapers and its manager said most of his rooms are taken by people on State aid.

The advertisement, placed by the Roxburgh Hotel, Fort Crescent, offers to arrange transport to the hotel.

It says: "On DHSS living in poor conditions? Why not live by the sea at Margate, pleasant hotel, lounge, dining room, bar, lift."

The manager, Mr Richard Gallagher, said he charged £50 a week for bed, breakfast and an evening meal, plus £2 for a colour television in the bedroom.

Under the DHSS clampdown, approved by MPs after a Commons debate on Tuesday night, claimants' board and lodgings allowance will be limited to between £45 and £70 a week, depending on the area

Limit of £55

Claimants in coastal resorts will get £55 a week board and lodgings allowance while looking for work and those under 25 will only be able to get the money for two weeks.

Mr Gallagher said most of his clients were over 25 and the £55 a week allowance was just enough to pay his fees.

"At those prices we don't make much profit but it keeps us full during the out of season period.

"It is also a great deal cheaper for the DHSS to pay for their keep here than if they were staying in accommodation in London or the big cities."

For £50 a week guests receive a cooked breakfast and a three-course evening meal followed by coffee. Their beds are made, the rooms cleaned and they have the use of a warm lounge.

Use the system

Mr Gallagher said he did not deny that some people "used the system" but he said some of his guests did find work while staying at the hotel.

Some unscrupulous claimants have moved to the seaside in Kent or Devon and pretend to be looking for work. The DHSS decided to clamp down after complaints that such areas were becoming havens for the jobless.

'LESS OVERTIME TO BOOST JOBS' CALL BY KING

By PETER PRYKE Parliamentary Correspondent

THE nationalised industries were to be asked to see if they could provide more jobs by cutting overtime, Mr TOM KING, Employment Secretary, told the Commons yesterday.

He said events in the postal services had brought to public attention the question of overtime and the possibilities there might be in terms of extra jobs.

People worked a total of 11 million hours of overtime a week the equivalent of 600,000 jobs.

While accepting it might not be possible to make "a straight conversion," he would be looking to the public sector to see if they could make a contribution by experiments with more flexible working.

Mr King was replying to questions on his statement about two White Papers on Government policy on employment and youth training.

His statement was condemned by Mr JOHN PRESCOTT, Shadow Employment Secretary, as proof that the Government had washed its hands of responsibility for unemployment.

Ministers were now blaming everybody else for mass unemployment which, in fact, had arisen directly from Government policies, he said.

Mr KING claimed that the measures outlined in the documents "Employment — the Challenge for the Nation" and "Education and Training for Young People," would make a substantial contribution to achieving "the best possible prospects for employment," but refused Labour invitations to predict how many extra jobs the measures would create.

'Free labour'

The most savage indictment of Government policy was made by Mr ANTHONY WEDGWOOD-BENN (Lab., Chesterfield). He said that thousands of young people on the Youth Training Scheme, 40 per cent. of whom would not get a job afterwards, saw the scheme quite differently to Ministers.

"They see it as a scheme to take people off the register, provide free labour for employers, lower wages, substitutes for adult employees, and by-pass trade union and health and safety legislation."

The White Papers revealed that the Government wanted low wages in a mass unemployment society.

Mr KING retorted that one of the reasons some young people held that view was because Mr Benn and some of his friends chose to keep telling them so.

When Mr Max Madden (Lab., Bradford W.) condemned the scheme in similar terms later, Mr King expressed contempt for such statements, which he said had "put off" many youngsters who would have had a much better chance of employment if they had gone on the scheme.

In his statement, Mr King said the priority in the Government's strategy towards employment was controlling inflation.

The Government could help by improving the labour market by encouraging more and better training, and by removing obstacles which hampered employers taking on workers.

The new training scheme would help to put vocational education and training for young people on a par with that of our four main competitors, and would help create a more flexible labour force and more competitive economy.

Mr PRESCOTT asked for confirmation that the Youth Training Scheme, now it had been extended to two years, would not be compulsory. He said a proper allowance should be given to the trainees, a sum of £59 a week, about £10 more than paid at present.

Mr KING did not reply on whether the scheme would be made compulsory. On the allowance, he said that with limited resources he did not favour a much higher payment, which might be at the expense of the quality of training.

'Cut unemployment' says Murray in maiden speech

By WILLIAM WEEKES
Parliamentary Staff

LABOUR fears that the Government wanted to cut the wages of low-paid workers through abolition or major reform of the Wages Councils were reiterated by Lord MURRAY in his maiden speech in the Lords yesterday.

Ministers have repeatedly asserted that people can price themselves into jobs, and have said that Wages Councils, which cover 26 industries, might militate against employment by setting wage rates which are too high.

Though the remarks by Lord Murray, former secretary of the Trades Union Congress, followed the convention that a maiden speech is not controversial, he called on the Government to demonstrate that the present level of unemployment was unacceptable by taking steps to reduce it.

Alluding to possible changes to the Wages Councils, he also emphasised that the Government had a duty to protect the weakest in society.

Wages strategy

Wages were once again at the centre of Government strategy: not only calls for restraints on increases but cutting real wages most deeply where they were already the lowest, in the public services and among employees in industries covered by the Wages Councils, Lord Murray said.

In the inflationary circumstances of 1975 it was right for the Labour government to ask for collective restraint. But in the deflationary circumstances of 1985 it was not right to seek to cut into real incomes in that way.

Lord Murray, who was speaking in a debate on the consequences of the Budget for employment, demanded to know how "we as a nation" could find four million unemployed acceptable or tolerable.

Lord MURRAY: Current unemployment levels are appalling.

Current unemployment levels were appalling and could only be dealt with collectively instead of in confrontation with one another.

Mr Lawson said in his Budget speech that the present figures were unacceptable, and Lord Murray commented that it would be churlish not to welcome any signs of penitence from Ministers.

The Government had an obligation to demonstrate that the present level of unemployment was not acceptable by taking measures to reduce it.

The debate was opened by Lord BARNETT, a former Labour Treasury Minister, who told the House: "The social consequences of these levels of unemployment are too serious to say there is no alternative."

Mr Lawson deserved to be condemned because his policies had condemned some four million people to unemployment.

"He particularly deserves to be condemned because he has planned a Budget that will leave four million unemployed, if not more, a year from today."

The Earl of GOWRIE, for the Government, said part of the Budget strategy was the reduction of borrowing swollen by the miners' strike.

"Without that dispute we could have done much more. Now, without dispute, we will do much more."

Economic growth

The problem of unemployment had only two chances of real improvement, he said.

"One is to continue with the policies, admittedly flexible ones, that bring growth to this economy . . . The other is to try to clear away the obstacles to employment, the things which discourage employers from employing people and the employed from taking work. This Budget does both."

This summer would see the country entering a fifth consecutive year of growth and this improvement had already delivered new jobs to the economy.

"It will, so long as we do not scatter it, deliver more."

A warning that some national newspapers could close as a result of the higher National Insurance contributions announced in the Budget, was given by Lord MARSH, chairman of the Newspaper Publishers Association.

He said it would add between £12 million and £13 million a year to the bill in Fleet Street. "If one looks at the financial position of these companies it is not possible for them to meet an increase at that level."

COUNCIL'S THREAT ATTACKED

MR PATRICK JENKIN, Environment Secretary, condemned Peterborough City Council in the Commons yesterday after an MP complained that it was discriminating against firms which carry out work at the nearby cruise missile base at RAF Molesworth.

Mr Jenkin said the Government would introduce legislation in the next session of Parliament making it illegal for "such irrelevances" to be included in contracts put out to tender.

These conditions were totally unacceptable, he told Dr Brian Mawhinney, Peterborough's Tory MP, at Question Time.

Dr MAWHINNEY said the Liberal and Labour councillors on Peterborough Council had combined to "blackmail" local firms by threatening to prevent them from bidding for council contracts if they had done work or were willing to do work at Molesworth.

"This is a disgraceful abuse of councillors' powers and contrary to the interests of the ratepayers," he said.

Ponting's mail was opened, MP claims

By Our Parliamentary Staff

A CLAIM that the mail of Mr Clive Ponting, the former civil servant, had been opened before and during his Old Bailey trial led to angry exchanges in the Commons last night.

Mr Ponting's MP, Mr CHRIS SMITH (Lab., Islington S. & Finsbury) said that the former Defence Ministry employee had noticed that his post was being opened and resealed.

It had happened from the time it was announced that he was to be prosecuted under the Official Secrets Act.

Mr Smith said: "I have here in my hand an envelope which was simply a bank statement sent to him from his bank. It took something like six days to reach him and the envelope has quite clearly been opened in a clumsy fashion and re-sealed."

Challenged by Mr Eldon Griffiths (C. Bury St Edmunds) who is adviser to the Police Federation, he said that Mr Ponting had checked with his bank and the envelope had not been opened before posting.

But Mr GRIFFITHS said that Mr Smith should have checked with the Post Office before making an implied allegation of "some improper, unauthorised or illegal action by members of the police or security service."

These people had no opportunity to reply to the allegation, he said.

Mr SMITH, speaking during the committee stage of the Interception of Communications Bill, said that the provisions for supervising telephone-tapping and interception of mail would not have helped Mr Ponting, who was acquitted on a charge relating to a leaked document on the sinking of the Belgrano.

The Bill proposes a tribunal and commissioner to oversee interceptions, and to award compensation for improper action.

Mr Smith said that this would would mean only that Mr Ponting would have had to complain to a tribunal answerable to the head of the Government which had prosecuted him.

'Out of control'

Mr KAUFMAN, Shadow Home Secretary, moved an amendment that the tribunal should be answerable to a Parliamentary select committee rather than the Prime Minister.

"There are widespread misgivings that the security services, or at any rate elements among them, are out of control," he said.

Security had become a game played by a self-selected team and there should be an independent referee.

The amendment was defeated by 241 votes to 161. Government majority 80.

From the depth of experience .... to the height of achievement

A more rewarding role for your design and engineering skills

Few companies can offer their Engineers and Designers the genuine challenge and job satisfaction that can be found at Dowty Fuel Systems.

At our purpose built headquarters in Cheltenham, we not only specialise in the design, development and manufacture of advanced engine controls for the aerospace industry, but we have also recently extended our technology into other areas such as torpedo propulsion.

With our thermal imaging support equipment completing the product portfolio and with excellent prospects for further growth, it's clear that exciting times lie ahead for the engineering professionals that join our team.

We currently have opportunities at all levels, for Engineers and Designers who are qualified in Mechanical or Aeronautical Engineering with experience in any of the following:

* Gas turbine control systems
* Low pressure fuel systems * High speed rotating machinery
* Hydraulic and pneumatic systems * Filtration systems design
* Stress analysis * Test rig design and instrumentation

If you're ambitious to further your precision engineering career, there's no better company than Dowty Fuel Systems – and there's no better place than the attractive town of Cheltenham, set as it is in the beautiful Gloucestershire countryside.

As well as attractive salaries, we are offering generous relocation assistance and a range of other benefits.

For further details and an application form, please telephone, or write with brief c.v. to: Colin Woods, Personnel Manager, Dowty Fuel Systems Limited, Arle Court, Cheltenham, Glotics. GL51 0TP. Tel: Cheltenham ☎ (0242) 533422.

Alternatively, outside office hours, just leave your name and address on our answering service by telephoning ☎ (0242) 533069.

Sales Manager

Hosiery

Northants Base

£18,000 + Car

The company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of a leading European hosiery, jersey and yarn manufacturer. The parent group has an unrivalled reputation for high quality, superbly designed products. The UK operation markets its range of hosiery goods through major UK retailers, serviced by a newly acquired distribution facility in Northants.

The Sales Manager will be a key member of the young management team, reporting to the Managing Director. Prime responsibilities include the direction, motivation and control of the sales force, including in-store consultants, and the personal development of major account business. You will also have substantial involvement in other marketing activities including pricing policy.

Probably aged in your 30s, you will have a successful track record in hosiery or lingerie sales to retail customers. Sales management experience is desirable, but more important are the personal qualities needed to lead by example and inspire others; energy, a strong desire to succeed and highly developed "people skills".

Please reply in confidence giving concise career, salary and personal details, quoting Ref. ER767/DT to Martin Lawless, Executive Selection.

DEFENCE SYSTEMS DIVISION

Quality Assurance Manager

A challenging senior role in Defence

Middlesex

The Defence Systems Division of THORN EMI Electronics has an outstanding success record and international reputation in high technology applications for the defence field.

Our expansion has been strengthened significantly by the recent award of a number of major development and production contracts.

Into this dynamic and progressive environment we seek to appoint a Quality Assurance Manager who will have overall responsibility for the QA functions at Feltham and at our locations on the Hayes site. This is a senior position in the management team, reporting to the Managing Director, with a staff of ever 200 managerial, engineering, clerical and manual staff.

Applicants, with a suitable technical background, must have substantial experience of managing a Quality Assurance department and be familiar with electronics development and production work to MOD standards. Corporate membership of an appropriate Engineering Institution would be an advantage.

We offer an attractive salary together with a comprehensive benefits package which includes relocation assistance, where appropriate.

Please write with full career details or telephone for an application form to Sue Godfrey, THORN EMI Electronics Ltd., Defence Systems Division, Victoria Road, Feltham, Middlesex TW13 7DZ. Tel: 01-890 3600 ext. 2325.

STOCK PLANNER

required by

Philip Morris Ltd

The Stock Planner will control stocks of Marlboro and other international and domestic brands of cigarettes, and plan and control production at the Philip Morris London E16 factory, all in the context of European Planning procedures.

Present systems are manual but computer-assisted. We are proposing to install microcomputers as aids to production management in the near future. The successful candidate will have an interest in helping to implement E.D.P. Systems. He/she will be educated to at least 'A' level standard in maths/statistics and have at least 2 years experience, preferably E.D.P. based, of control of finished goods in a FMCG manufacturing environment. A B.P.I.C.S. member might be an attractive applicant.

Candidates should be able to drive. Occasional travel to Europe may be necessary. This is a new post in a company which is expanding in the U.K.

An attractive salary will be paid.

Telephone Russell Hardiman on 01-476 4316 for an application form, or write to Philip Morris Limited, Thameside Industrial Estate, Factory Road, London E16 2HB.

'A' LEVEL LEAVERS

Computing Scholarships at Britain's most exclusive University

Strictly speaking, British Telecom is not a university. However, we are the most powerful and prolific user of computers in the country. We are 100% committed to state-of-the-art development. And we are about to offer 'A' level leavers the training of a lifetime.

"These are not academic exercises – they're real-life, real-time challenges..."

We're offering you the chance to join BT's most exclusive, London-based training course. Have no illusions, though, this first line management scheme is tough and intensive.

It will develop your programming skills on the most sophisticated IBM, ICL and other leading systems and software.

It will stretch your mind around some of the most fascinating DP projects in Britain today.

Remember, these are not academic exercises – they're real-life, real-time challenges that will shape the whole future of telecoms.

The course will also sharpen your management talents. BT's single-minded aim is to groom you for high level responsibility at the earliest opportunity.

That's why we start by offering you a decent salary from day one. As a Trainee Manager, you will earn – at 18 – over £7,000. Two years later, though, that figure could have risen dramatically to around £12,000. In other words, when your contemporaries are coming out of university and clawing their way on some career ladder, you could be well into the five figure income bracket and climbing fast.

"The competition will be fierce and our standards are uncompromising."

The only snag (there's always one) is that we have just a handful of management 'scholarships' on offer. As you might imagine, the competition will be fierce and our standards must be uncompromising. To be blunt, only the best are good enough for BT.

That's why we're insisting on proven academic achievement: Five 'O' levels (including Maths and English) are essential and you must be sitting at least two and preferably three Science 'A' Levels for the first time. Furthermore, we'll expect grades every bit as good as those demanded by universities – indeed, we'll be looking for other vital qualities too ... self-motivation, a pioneering approach to technology, a flair for communication and a mature appreciation of the meaning of management.

"Many students are much better advised to combine learning with earning on a professional career course."

Think you've got what it takes? Then do think very carefully about your next move. For some students, university is the right course – however, it's equally true that many school leavers are simply not cut out for campus life. They're hungry for success rightaway and they'd be much better advised to combine learning and earning on a professional career course like ours.

If you agree, we'd like to hear from you. Write and tell us about yourself, your academic achievements, your plans for the future and – most important of all – your reasons for wanting to come on such an exclusive programming and management course.

We'll be very interested in reading your answer – so write TODAY.

June Malwah, British Telecom Recruitment Centre, Room 8119, Tenter House, 45 Moorfields, London EC2Y 9TH. (Please quote reference D.T.).

ENGINEERS

...with designs on an exciting future in defence

We can offer you an outstanding opportunity to use your talents to the full working on the development of the next generation of Multiple Launch Rocket Systems (MLRS).

We are the Defence Systems Division of THORN EMI Electronics, the UK prime contractor for the international £multi-million MLRS project. The following opportunities exist at our Feltham site for innovative engineers to join the MLRS design team.

Radar Systems Design Engineers

Your task will be to design and optimise the parameters of a radar tracking loop for a millimetre wave seeker. Qualified to degree level or equivalent in physics or electronics, you must have practical experience of the design and analysis of radar systems. Knowledge of weapon guidance and/or tracking systems would be an advantage.

Digital Design Engineers—Telemetry

You will be responsible for the design of circuits for multiplexer encoders and simulators. The work will include aspects of analogue and digital design involving high speed switching/ADC/control logic and computer interfacing.

Educated to degree level or equivalent in electronics, you must be capable of theoretical design and specifying components. You must also possess the practical skills necessary to breadboard and prove designs.

Guidance Systems Design Engineers

Working closely with the radar seeker design team, you will be involved in the development and optimisation of sophisticated weapon guidance servo systems.

You should have a degree or equivalent in physics, mechanical engineering or control systems and have proven experience in weapon guidance and control. Familiarity with radar guidance systems would be an advantage.

RF Design Engineers

Responsibility will be for the design and development of a wide range of RF circuits for telemetry transmitters covering a frequency range from dc to 2.5 GHz. You will model the designs theoretically using existing computer programs, then breadboard and prove the designs practically.

A qualification to degree level or equivalent in electronics or physics is essential and previous experience of RF or microwave design is highly desirable.

Salaries are highly competitive and are supported by our attractive benefits package which includes relocation assistance, where appropriate. Genuine opportunities exist for future career progression.

Engineering Graduates

Purchasing: your passport to an international future

Your degree level qualifications and industrial experience could be the instant passport to a more rewarding career at Dow.

We are one of the world's most successful and respected international chemical companies with over 30 of Europe's most advanced chemical process plants.

To make our products to the highest quality, purchasing of raw materials, contract services, engineering equipment and packaging materials are a crucial part of operations, which will provide outstanding challenges for a professional engineering graduate.

You'll be responsible for negotiating purchases and exploring cost saving opportunities whilst retaining high quality in materials and services, and will enjoy the freedom to make independent decisions on these economic factors.

Based at King's Lynn, our main UK manufacturing site, you'll be part of a European function and will support not only local purchasing needs but will also assist with European supply negotiations.

We'll consider anyone aged 23-30, whose professional and personal qualities meet the highest standards. So your experience to date could have been gained in any industrial role – technical, scientific, engineering, planning, distribution or indeed purchasing. Of more importance is your potential – you must be self-motivated, an achiever, a creative and confident negotiator with first rate technical knowledge and communication skills.

Prove yourself in this challenge, and you'll discover the full breadth of career opportunities at Dow, including excellent professional, management and international prospects.

Naturally we also offer attractive salaries, and a full range of large company benefits to the people who are ready to make their experience and qualifications yield bigger rewards.

If you'd like to know more about a great career with a world-recognised market leader, write or telephone for an application form to: Roger Lindsay, Personnel Manager, Dow Chemical Company Limited, Crossbank Road, King's Lynn, Norfolk. Tel: King's Lynn (0553) 761251.

SUCCESS AND SECURITY FROM SELLING

Are you capable of building a career in selling if you were given the right opportunity? Our sales development programme could be what you have been waiting for.

We are a major group providing catering, security and cleaning services to commerce, industry and education — and now we are looking for top flight sales people to join our team.

Following a very comprehensive training and development programme you will be given total responsibility to develop new business in the group. This will include identifying prospects, researching their requirements, formulating detailed proposals and negotiating contracts.

The professional demands are significant, and you will be dealing with people at very senior levels, but the rewards are equally high. Your first year earnings should be in the region of £13,500, plus company car and private health care, and there are excellent prospects for promotion in the security of a nationally respected company.

We have a number of openings in various locations throughout the UK, so if you are aged 22-35, have a selling background, ideally in the service industry, and the will to succeed, write with a detailed CV to:-

HEAD OF WATER POLLUTION CONTROL SECTION

Duties will include, but not be limited to, the organisation, planning and programming of all work undertaken by his section in the fields of water and solid waste pollution control. He will be based in the Ministry central office and will direct the activities of staff both in the central and regional offices. Duties will include co-ordination with other sections responsible for air, marine and soil pollution control and be responsible for the establishment and management of staff training schemes.

The successful applicant will have as a minimum, a first degree in engineering or applied science and be a member of a relevant professional body or institution. He will have had a minimum of 15 years experience, of which at least 10 years is experience in water pollution control in a Government or Municipal Authority or in a Consultancy practice. Applicants will be familiar with industrial discharge, wastewater treatment, refuse disposal, municipal engineering practices and with the monitoring and analysis of environmental parameters.

Some residential experience in the Middle East is considered essential. The applicant should be fluent in both spoken and written English and a knowledge of Arabic would be an advantage.

HEAD OF AIR POLLUTION CONTROL SECTION

Duties will include, but not be limited to, the formulation of policies and tactics of air pollution control and the implementation of regulations and be responsible for the organisation, planning and programming of all work undertaken by his section. Based in the Ministry central office, he will direct the activities of staff both in the central and regional offices and take part in the inspection of works and the assessment of equipment for the control of air pollutants.

The successful applicant will have as a minimum, a first degree in engineering or applied science and be a member of a relevant professional body or institution. He will have had a minimum of 15 years' experience, of which at least 10 years experience is in air pollution control over a wide range of industrial processes in a Government or Municipal authority or in a consultancy practice, and be familiar with commercial and industrial emissions and with the monitoring of air quality situations and the measurement of source emissions.

Some resident experience in the Middle East is considered essential. The applicant should be fluent in both spoken and written English and a knowledge of Arabic would be an advantage.

These are senior appointments and salaries and terms of appointment will be in accordance with qualifications and experience. Written applications together with full details and academic qualifications, training and working experience should be submitted to:

The Director of Administration,
Ministry of Environment,
P.O. Box 323,
Muscat,
Sultanate of Oman.

The last date for receiving applications will be 25th April, 1985.

PEOPLE AND TECHNOLOGY TOGETHER

BRITAIN'S NUCLEAR POWER INDUSTRY-OVERSEEING ITS SAFETY
Engineers and Applied Scientists
Up to £18,125

The Health and Safety Executive needs high calibre professional engineers and scientists to participate in the safety assessment and inspection of a variety of nuclear installations in the United Kingdom. A very wide range of technologies is involved and projects are reviewed from the time of conception through construction, operation and ultimately decommissioning. Staff are employed in small multi-disciplinary teams and are encouraged to broaden their range of technical knowledge with further training, experience on the job and contact with world wide developments in nuclear technology. The ability to deal with people, communicate effectively, and conduct negotiations on technical issues is of prime importance.

The unique responsibilities call for engineering and scientific expertise of a high order. Disciplines currently required include: mechanical, structural, civil, electrical, control and instrumentation, chemical engineering and health physics. All candidates should have some years experience in one of the following areas: design, construction, operation, inspection or maintenance of nuclear power reactors or nuclear chemical plants; application of fault tree analysis including the use of fault and event trees and probabilistic methodology; computer applications for control and instrumentation; the application of ergonomic principles to control room design; fracture mechanics; pre-stressed concrete structures design and construction; structural and stress analysis; quality assurance as applied to major engineering projects; or health physics in the nuclear industry. They should also normally possess a relevant first or second class honours degree and be corporate members of an appropriate professional institution, or have equivalent (including overseas) acceptable qualifications and experience.

Vacancies exist at both Principal Inspector and Inspector level. Candidates for the Inspector posts should have had several years of experience in a responsible position in the nuclear industry. Candidates for the Principal Inspector posts should be more mature and have greater experience.

Several of these appointments will be in London initially, with the remainder in Merseyside. It is planned that a major part of the Inspectorate in London will transfer to Merseyside this year, with the remainder before the end of 1986.

SALARIES

Successful candidates enter either as Inspectors (£11,685–£13,910) or as Principal Inspectors (£14,975–£18,125). Promotion prospects to over £25,000.

RELOCATION ASSISTANCE MAY BE AVAILABLE.

For full details and an application form (to be returned by 26 April 1985) write to Civil Service Commission, Alencon Link, Basingstoke, Hants RG21 1JB, or telephone Basingstoke (0256) 468551 (answering service operates outside office hours).

This senior position will be appropriately remunerated and will carry usual fringe benefits of membership of contributory Pension Scheme, Life and Medical insurance.

Please reply to C.A.18894, Daily Telegraph, London, E.C.4, enclosing detailed Curriculum Vitae.

Sales Professionals – even gunsights offer benefits!

Vickers Instruments is a recognised leader in the design and manufacture of military sighting systems making gunnery more accurate and faster – more cost-effective. Our products find markets throughout the world.

We are looking for a professional Salesman or woman to strengthen our small, dedicated and hard-working Sales Team. Our ideal candidate will be able to point to success in both gunnery (tank or artillery) and in Sales but we believe strongly that our markets are like others: they respond to Salesmanship.

The successful candidate will be able to demonstrate, therefore, either a background in gunnery and the ability to respond quickly to formal Sales Training or a background in a professional sales environment and the ability quickly to absorb product/market knowledge.

The successful candidate will be responsible for managing a number of overseas Territories and our Agents/Consultants within those Territories. Freedom to travel is essential. Previous export sales experience, although desirable, is not essential.

An attractive salary, the exact level of which will be determined by the blend of experience and ability brought by the successful candidate, will be paid. A company car will be provided. Other benefits include participation in the Team's generous commission scheme and in the Vickers contributory pension scheme.

Please apply in writing, enclosing full c.v. to: Personnel Director, Vickers Instruments, Haxby Road, York, YO3 7SD.

AT first contemplation the idea of an anthology of prayer may seem a little strange. After all, most religions either have their formal prayer books or reject the idea of using one, preferring to speak as the spirit moves them.

A little more thought will persuade one that indeed such an anthology is an excellent idea if it is assembled by a team from several Christian faiths under the captaincy of Bishop George Appleton, whose Saturday "meditations" are well known to readers of THE DAILY TELEGRAPH. The excellence comes from the fact that the compilers have sought out suitable prayers from many faiths — Christian, Moslem, Buddhist, Jewish, Taoist and others that are described as "primal."

So among the 1,120 prayers presented here, those from St Anselm and St Francis of Assisi rub shoulders with others from Dag Hammarskjöld, Alexander Solzhenitsyn and an anonymous Ghanaian fisherman. Alongside the grandeur of the Book of Common Prayer and the eloquence of the Jewish prayers on the Day of Atonement is the simple prayer of an 11-year-old child uttered during border fighting between the Chinese and the Indians: "Lord, make this world to last as long as possible."

What then is prayer? This is Bishop Appleton's definition:

> Prayer is essentially man standing before his God in wonder, awe and humility; man made in the image of God, responding to his maker. In Christian terms, this is the Holy Spirit acting within man. But God can and does break in upon a man at any moment and in any circumstances. It is man's attitude of openness — looking, listening and waiting — which prepares him to receive whatever God may give, and to obey.

Later the Bishop writes: "Prayer is a relationship with God. Such relationship presupposes communication from both sides." Or perhaps, as I heard it put succinctly on the radio a while ago by someone whose name I have forgotten: "God listens to our prayers, but he does not have to say Yes." And we may cry out in adoration, terror, seeking help at asking for release.

A prayer may take many forms, as is demonstrated here —poems by George Herbert, hymns by Charles Wesley or by just a sentence or two of prose. It would be tempting to quote endlessly from this inspiring collection—I find that I have marked 47 possible selections of a length suitable for reproducing here representing all these elements—but this is obviously impossible. First, then, a word about the arrangement of the prayers. These are centred partly on the Lord's Prayer, using each of its sections to introduce a variety of private invocations and reflections from many faiths. Then under the main headings of the Creed, the great formal prayers from the Eastern and Western Christian rites are set out, particularly those concerned with the Eucharist.

David Holloway

Another section presents prayers from other faiths, and a final one selects from those striving towards the unity of mankind.

From these riches I can select only a few. What could be more impressive than this passage from Teilhard de Chardin's "Hymn to Matter": "Blessed by you, universal matter, unmeasurable time, boundless ether, triple abyss of stars and atoms and generations: you who by overflowing and dissolving our narrow standards of measurement reveal to us the dimensions of God . . ."?

Then there is the wonderful simplicity of Soren Kierkegaard's, "Father in heaven! When the thought of these wakes in our hearts let it not awaken like a frightened bird that flies about in dismay, but like a child waking from its sleep with a heavenly smile." And in that of an anonymous hospital porter: "Good morning, Guvnor, and thank you."

Among the Buddhist selections, there is this Chinese saying: "Have mercy on me, O Beneficent One, I was angered for I had no shoes: Then I met a man who had no feet." I found that very moving as I did this characteristically well-mannered prayer from Jane Austen: "Incline us O God! to think humbly of ourselves, to be saved only in the examination of our own conduct, to consider our fellow-creatures with kindness, and to judge all they say and do with charity which we would desire from them ourselves."

If I had not read here the Sioux Indian prayer: "Oh Great Spirit, help me never to judge another until I have walked two weeks in his moccasins," I might have been tempted to suggest that Bishop Appleton had been over-generous in his selection of his own prayers — more than by any other contemporary contributor — but, on the other hand, they all deserve their place.

I would like to conclude with a wonderfully simple Old Gaelic blessing:

> May the road rise to meet you.
> May the sun shine warm upon your face.
> May the rains fall softly upon your fields until we meet again
> May God hold you in the hollow of his hand.

THE heroic age for men in Greece, we are told, is from six to 14, because at six a boy is too old to be a child and at 14 too young to be a soldier. Whereas for women, it is from the moment they are born until they die.

This epic, dramatic quality of the Greek character is finely captured by Stratis Haviaras in "The Heroic Age," his second novel. He tells the story—partly based on his own experiences—of 12-year-old Panagis and his small companions adrift in the aftermath of war in the late 1940s, when the country was torn apart by American-backed Royalists (the Nationalists) and the Communist-inspired guerrilla fighters (the Andartes).

The children make for the Albanian border, encountering hunger and death on the way. Turned back from there, they are conscripted by the Andartes, who are holding out in the Grammos mountains. After the last terrible battle, blasted by napalm and rockets, they are captured by the Nationalists and sent to the barren island of Antikalamos for "re-education and rehabilitation." As the political situation improves they are released to work under the supervision of the people of a neighbouring island.

The resource of the children is staggering. Loss of parents, the savagery of the times, bring out an acceptance of fate and an ultimate cynicism allied with a fierce loyalty to each other. Mr Haviaras himself worked as a labourer in the Athens slums at the age of 12, to support his mother when she was released from internment. Then, he wrote poetry by candlelight in his native tongue. Now, as Curator of Poetry at Harvard University, he writes in English. "The Heroic Age" is a fine monument to courage as well as an indictment of the sickening corruption of war.

IN "Lives of the Poets," E. L. Doctorow takes on a fictional cloak (reminiscent of John Updike's "Bech"), becoming a middle-aged writer who feels he must escape from domesticity in Connecticut to live alone in an apartment in New York. The novella of the title is flanked by six very short stories which reflect the writer's experiences, episodes picked out of it, as it were, for closer examination. One of the most bizarre is the story of the boy who is required to write letters to his grandmother in the persona of his dead father.

Alone in the city, the writer observes the joggers who are "trying to get away from this white-bread life, in their running suits they run, with their vegetable juicers under their arms." He chronicles his own and his wife's confusion; the edgy, chattering life of a sleepless city, the couple, who are not entirely together, nor entirely apart, the derelicts, the graffiti in the subway. At the end he appears to be giving a home to a family of illegal immigrants.

Full of life, the writing hums along in what appears on the surface to be its inconsequential way, but it all adds up to a dazzling kaleidoscope of contemporary life.

DESPITE the entreaties of her brother in Paris, Alicia Montfort de Sainte Croix, the widow of a cane planter, has no intention of exchanging the house she has lived in on the island of Martinique for 35 years for the comparative safety of the metropolis. There have been uprisings against the French administration before, she tells him, and she has no reason to fear them. Her niece Agnès is then sent out to persuade her otherwise. But Agnès proves to be as wayward and headstrong as the political climate itself and creates havoc among the males.

This, in short, is the theme of Jennifer Potter's first novel, "The Taking of Agnès." But what makes the story so gripping is the way the author interweaves the hot, steamy jungle atmosphere, and the furtive malcontents who inhabit it, with what seems to be the fairly normal rivalry between two women of different generations.

Miss Potter has a direct and admirably economical style and uses letters and excerpts from the girl's diary very effectively. And she leaves us in suspense, which is what every wise storyteller should do.

ALEXANDER FULLERTON has diverted himself from his "Everard" series to write a fast-moving tale of sunken treasure off the shores of a Greek island. "The Aphrodite Cargo" opens in London, with a former member of the wartime Special Boat Squadron dying in hospital after being beaten up.

His son Mike flies over from Chicago and undertakes the quest bequeathed him by the father he scarcely knew, and in no time is up to his ears in trouble, both from the police and the criminals who are after the lost Nazi loot. On the island of Aphros he meets an old comrade of his father's, with a comely niece, and together they plan the treasure hunt, diving into sunken wrecks. Mike discovers qualities in himself he never suspected. An engaging read for the holiday break.

THE subject of "Out of the Blue" (designated as a thriller) is a lustful painter who lives in Bavaria but is in London for an exhibition of his work. He is fed to us through a narrator (male) and a would-be biographer (female), who gives up towards the end of the book, for which she can scarcely be blamed.

The evocation of Notting Hill in its seediness is an example of John Milne's writing at its best. But he is straining too hard to be innovative. By the time I had reached the clash between the underground activities of the Blue Lions and the West German police, followed by the inevitable deaths in a crashed Mercedes, the muddle over who was actually telling the story had over-taxed my credulity.

CELLULOID EPICS

By John Coldstream

IT IS hard to reconcile the crumpled figure clicking a pair of ball-bearings under the strain of cross-examination every night at the Queen's Theatre with the noble impersonator of Moses, Mark Antony, Rodrigo, Ben-Hur and the Norman knight, Chrysagon.

But if one name dominates Derek Elley's "The Epic Film: Myth and History" (Routledge, £8·95) it is that of Charlton Heston who has swapped his robe and cuirass for the blazer of Capt. Queeg in "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial."

Heston once coined the "temptingly simple" definition of an epic film as "the easiest kind of picture to make badly." Mr Elley resists the temptation, essaying instead a detailed and entertaining analysis of those films set in periods up to the end of the Dark Ages.

Bestriding these, like the Colossus itself, is Heston, "surely the epic presence, an actor, like Olivier, who plays each rôle straight down the line, giving a film the necessary conviction to underline the rest of the production." Yet for each distinguished example of the genre there have been countless turkeys. Stanley Kubrick's "Spartacus," perhaps the most intelligent epic of all, towers above a morass of "revolting gladiator" movies, mostly from the Continent.

"El Cid" is a proud exception to the rule governed by "Poppaea's Hot Nights", "Rome Wants Another Caesar", "The Long Swift Sword of Siegfried" and "When Women Played Ding Dong". However, the equitable Mr Elley points out that we are incalculably in the debt of "the Italian peplum for exploring areas of history with which Hollywood could never have found sympathy."

Another of Mr Elley's giants is Miklós Rozsa, the Hungarian-born composer who dignified "King of Kings", "El Cid," "Quo Vadis", "Sodom and Gomorrah" and, of course, "Ben-Hur", for which he won the most cherished of his three Oscars. Thirty hours of tape-recorded reminiscences from this "musical expounder of the Ancient World par excellence" yielded "Double Life" (Baton Press, £5·95), an engaging autobiography by Rozsa, now in his late 70s, who has always striven to keep separate his "public" life as composer for film and his "private" development as composer for his own non-utilitarian purposes.

"I actually never liked the cinema very much," he confesses, "but for me, as for many other composers, it was a source of income, and once committed to it we did our best." His account of how he did so is studded with good-natured anecdotes of the good, the bad and the impossible.

Away from the world where nearly all is seen through 70mm lenses, there are two newly reprinted books steeped in affection. George Perry's "Forever Ealing" (Pavilion / Michael Joseph, £6·95) is a nostalgic and splendidly illustrated celebration of the "Great British Film Studio" — what Peter Ustinov calls that "quaint little emoire," under its mini-mogul Sir Michael Balcon, which "glorified the small — the expense of the big, the conventional, the pompous."

"Mr Laurel and Mr Hardy" (Robson, £4·95) is an unclouded biography by a founder-member of the Sons of the Desert, the body "devoted to the loving study of the persons and films of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy." These masters of the vanished art of innocent comedy had their own ideas of their importance. "I don't do very much outside of doing a lot of gags before a camera and play golf the rest of the time," Hardy told the author in 1954. "What is there to my life but just making a lot of comedy?" Laurel asked him many years later. Professor John McCabe ably responds.

Cambridge on parade

By Ronald Gray

Cambridge Architecture. By Tim Rawle. (Trefoil. £14·95; paperback, £9·95).

THIS is an astonishingly comprehensive book. "Atlas" or even "Encyclopaedia of Cambridge Architecture" would have been suitable alternative titles. Earlier books on the buildings of Cambridge from Anglo-Saxon times to the present day have relied mainly on words.

This contains more than 600 photographs of almost all the interesting buildings you can think of, with explanations of what they are for, how they developed, how they come to be grouped as they are.

Each college gets at least half a page alongside a chronological table and a facing page of a dozen photographs. In this section Tim Rawle tends to summarise or paraphrase Pevsner. He does not plagiarise. Nobody could compete, anyway, with Pevsnerisms like "the sonorous grandeur" of Wren's Library, or (on recent redecorations) "rather flashy for a college," let alone borrow them. And a pleasant way of using his book is to consult his photographs for a quick reminder of what Pevsner can often only write about.

But there is a lot more than potted Pevsner. The illustrations of architectural styles for over 900 years, all Cambridge examples, will put newcomers in the picture, and there are completely original sections on the latest buildings. The pros and cons of James Stirling's History Faculty building are given a fair hearing—Mr Rawle is pro.

The oddity of Trinity's Wolfson Court is explained — the architect's ziggurat was bowdlerised by the Fellows. The alternatives originally offered to Sir David Robinson for his College, less harsh and embattled than the final design, are given in some detail. And in superb contempt the controversial Lion Yard is not allowed a mention, not even on the map, which follows the Ordnance Survey in ignoring its existence.

Special chapters deal with the bridges, the gatehouses and boathouses, town churches, and, less comprehensively, town buildings (no Park Terrace, no Bene't Place, no Ashley House).

The photographs were strikingly good when exhibited last year at the Cambridge Dark Room. They lose some of their contrasts in the dark and light greys allowed by modern lithographic processes, and some of them are really too small. But the originality still shows through, and the views taken from an airship give an experience very few people have had.

This is a unique and valuable record of the buildings that have made Cambridge a city visited by architects from all over the world.

Rebels in the valleys

By W. B. Hepburn

The Last Rising: the Newport Insurrection of 1839. By David J. V. Jones. (Clarendon Press: O U P. £12·50.)

THIS is a detailed dissection of the anatomy of an uprising, about which every Welsh schoolboy no doubt knows, but which will come as something of a surprise to those of us living east of the Wye.

An attempt was made by a variously estimated number—perhaps four or five thousand—of card-carrying Chartists, most of them enthusiasts, some of them victims of intimidation by bully boys, to seize Newport by force in 1839 and make it the base for a nationwide uprising.

The battle lines had been drawn up in the late 18th century with the discovery of the mineral wealth of that "remote and peculiar region" which was then South Wales. On the one side were the undoubtedly greedy, predominantly alien and generally first-time employers, interested only in productivity. On the other were their employees rendered understandably desperate, not only by the brutalising nature of their work, but by the absence of even the most elementary provision for their welfare.

Disappointed of the benefits which they had confidently expected would flow from the reformed Parliament, they only determined on violence after the rejection of the First Great Chartist Petition. None of their three leaders was a manual labourer. They were a tailor, John Frost, an innkeeper Zephaniah Williams, and an actor William Jones. It was their achievement to overcome the "Valley mentality" and to instil into the proceedings of their followers, in clubs, lodges and pubs, a modicum of organisation and, as it transpired, an excess of secrecy.

David Jones's carefully researched description of the events that followed could scarcely be bettered: the march down the two main routes south from the coalfields and the ironworks; the still remembered failure of the Pontypool contingent to play a significant part in the fighting; the attack on the Westgate hotel, garrisoned by special constables and a handful of soldiers of the 45th Regt. (now the Sherwood Foresters) whose disciplined fire put the assailants (several hundred of whom were armed) to flight in half an hour, leaving 32 dead behind.

The punishments awarded at the trial which followed, where the prosecution was conducted by Campbell, the future Whig Lord Chancellor whose account of the lives of his predecessors and contemporaries was said to have added a new terror to death, were surprisingly lenient after an episode that was compared at the time to Monmouth's rebellion. Only the three ringleaders were condemned to death and their sentences were commuted to 15 years' transportation.

Implicit throughout the author's admirably impartial narrative is a question which is still both relevant and unresolved—whether the radical leaders of those who consider themselves oppressed beyond bearing should persevere with constitutional methods, or whether, and when and how far, they are entitled to take matters into their own hands when Parliament fails to redress their grievances?

Learning to know Spain

By Peter Luke

The Transformation of Spain, from Franco to Constitutional Monarchy. By David Gilmour. (Quartet. £12·95.)

IT was hardly necessary for the rest of Europe to have put Spain "in Coventry" for the duration of the Franco régime. Fenced in (or off) behind the lofty Pyrenees she had always been there.

In 1936 this "stretched bull's hide" of a country that had always seemed more African than European began to tear itself to pieces in fratricidal strife while a rather shocked world looked on. Of the spectators, some (many French and English) pretended it was none of their business and turned away, while others of a more bloodthirsty nature began to exploit the situation and to place bets on the noses of their fancy.

Three years later, in 1939, the Spanish Civil War ended and Spain was again forgotten — blacked out, as it were, by the light of the greater conflagration elsewhere. Beyond the mountains the Spanish were left to lie in the dust to lick their wounds with any spittle they might have had left.

Time passed. Today Spain is an inspiring example of how good can sometimes come out of evil, for most Spaniards have recently decided that they want neither the dictatorship of the Right nor the tyranny of the Left, but the best government they can get for the money of the majority of the people: a pragmatic government, not one of ideologies that end in bloodshed.

David Gilmour has threaded his way through the historical labyrinth of Spain's last half-century with all the confidence of a smart ferret in a familiar rabbit-warren. In doing so he has given us a book that is timely, easy to read, and—remarkable for a scholarly work—one that has a good feel of place.

The passage of time has done something to flatten the Pyrenees, and Spain has at last emerged from the dark centuries behind them. In the context of Nato and the E E C it is now the right time for the rest of us to learn what it is like to be a Spaniard. In Spain, the land of phenomena, one of the most conspicuous has been the about-turn of the Church.

From the embarrassing stance of the time when certain prelates were seen to give the Roman salute in public, the Church has swung round to a posture which today borders on "liberation theology."

Mr Gilmour shrewdly points out that when the Spanish people elect themselves a national hero he or she is always called by his or her Christian, or nickname, e.g., Federico (Garcia Lorca) or "La Pasionaria" (Dolores Ibarruri). The able midwife of today's democratic government is never known as Adolfo, but Suarez. Suarez has done his bit and gone. Today two heroes remain: Felipe (Gonzalez) and Juan Carlos (Primero). Long may they live in the service of their country.

Corridors of the Papacy

Anatomy of the Vatican: an Irreverent View of the Holy See. By Paul Hofmann. (Hale. £10·95.)

WHENEVER Pope Pius XII took a stroll in the Vatican gardens, staff in the area were forced to scramble for cover to avoid their sovereign inadvertently catching sight of one of his lowly subjects. When he used the lift he had installed in the Apostolic Palace he sat on a miniature replica of the pontifical throne in St Peter's.

That was in the 1950s, before Pope John XXIII ushered in a new age with the Second Vatican Council, the result of which has been an unprecedented emphasis on the human face of the Papacy, if not all the institutions under its control. In "The Anatomy of the Vatican," Paul Hofmann, for more than 30 years the NEW YORK TIMES's Rome correspondent, takes a wry, if always affectionate, look at the Vatican and how it has adapted, or more often failed to adapt, to an increasingly secular society.

Although he casts an amused, world-weary eye over the foibles of red-hatted cardinals, the manoeuvres of Machiavellian clerics and the vying for power between the religious orders that have always characterised the Holy See, his serious purpose has been to write a sociological analysis of the world's oldest bureaucracy (only the Emperor of Japan may claim that his office predates the Pope's).

It is a vast and perplexing machinery which, as has often been said, bears little relation to the Pope's real rôle of providing a prophetic moral voice for millions of Roman Catholics. Yet the Supreme Pontiff controls vast tracts of land, maintains diplomatic ties with more than 100 countries and heads a state which, though small, wields considerable financial and political power.

If Mr Hofmann tends to place an undue emphasis on the last of these functions, it is because his underlying assumption is that clergy enter the world of the Curia out of a lust for power and prestige rather than vocation. This is a distortion. Many are reluctant appointees who serve out of sense of duty. And many genuinely believe that the Holy See is not merely a convenient managerial structure but also a reflection, albeit imperfect, of a higher spiritual order.

Mr Hofmann lucidly unravels recent trends and scandals, such as the power struggle between the Jesuits and the recently formed and often secretive lay order Opus Dei (apparently known in some curial circles as "Octopus" Dei), the Vatican bank débâcle, and the growing discontent among the 1,800 civilian staff who work inside the walls of the Vatican City. We are led through the labyrinthine corridors of power—but fail to penetrate the real heart of the Church.

Jonathan Petre

Undercover tales

By Jonathan Cox

ALL the horrors of sectarian violence in Belfast are to be found in Gerald Seymour's "Field of Blood" (Collins, £8·95), a disquieting novel which brings the reader closer to an understanding of the passions behind the conflict.

No matter how many reports of bombings and shootings you may see on television, you will not breathe in the tension-filled atmosphere of Ballymurphy and Turf Lodge as much as you do in reading this book. This is fiction of the highest order—a thriller which not only entertains and informs but also demands strong emotional responses.

In setting his book in the grey, damp and depressing backstreets of Belfast, Mr Seymour has returned to the scene of his first thriller, the outstanding "Harry's Game." Like that novel, "Field of Blood" describes a world where hate is the most common emotion and no one can be trusted. As Det. Chief Insp. Howard Rennie, whose job is to bring a supergrass safely to court, says, "Everything that happens in this God-forsaken place is unfair."

The supergrass is Gingy McAnally, a man brought back to Belfast from Eire by the Provisional I R A to blow apart a judge's car with a rocket launcher. Facing 25 years in Long Kesh for the killing, he decides to turn "tout" to keep himself out of jail. On the face of it, this seems initially to be another example of injustice, but there is a high price for his freedom: he loses the respect of the Roman Catholic community and the love of his wife and children.

Ironically, he finds the only person who can keep him from total collapse is one of the men he once saw as the enemy, a sympathetic British army officer who believes that, if he had been brought up in a place such as Turf Lodge, he, too, would have become a "Provo."

Mr Seymour doesn't see everything as black-and-white. It is his ability to present conflicting points of view fairly and openly that makes the book so powerful.

In this technologically advanced age it is not enough for a private eye to be quick-witted, hard-bitten, honest and tough. He must also have more than a passing knowledge of computers. Guyer, the hero of Alan Furst's "Shadow Trade" (Quartet, £7·95), has just as strong a sense of justice as, for instance, Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe. But because he has to spend so much of his time analysing visual displays and organising complicated fund transfers, Guyer is not as attractive as the gumshoes of yesteryear.

Guyer, a sacked C I A agent, eventually discovers what duplicity and betrayal is involved in undercover work when his former employers use his skills without him knowing. Switching sets of dental X-rays and providing a stand-in double seem fairly innocuous tasks, but in Guyer's line of work nothing is what it seems. This off-beat spy novel entertains but never excites.

Patrick Hyde, the hero of Craig Thomas's "The Bear's Tears" (Michael Joseph, £9·95), also has to display computer expertise, but his main talent is extricating himself from the tightest of corners. By the time he bluffs his way into the Russian embassy in Prague to steal some top-secret information from a K G B computer, he has already barely escaped with his life after close encounters with the Russians in both Vienna and Kabul.

The densely-packed narrative concerning a Russian plot to seize control of the British Secret Intelligence Service is overlong and stretches credibility to breaking point. But the novel does have exciting moments and a satisfying conclusion.

FILMS / Micki and Maude

Micki and Maude (PG) Leicester Sq.
The Never Ending Story (U) Warner
The Return of Captain Invincible (PG) Minema
Beauty and the Beast (PG) Everyman

THE ATTEMPT, apparent in his recent films, to present Dudley Moore as a "romantic" comedian is continued, inconclusively, in his new film Micki and Maude directed by Blake Edwards from an original script by Jonathan Reynolds.

Given the particular persona of this actor, the task must necessarily be uphill, the idea that he can attract the prettiest girls with the power of a basilisk being, to me at least, especially hard to accept and here the task is made more strenuous still by the assumption that bigamy can be made funny.

Wilde, I know, said it was possible to be funny only about serious matters, but he didn't say the trick could be pulled off with all serious subjects, and bigamy certainly presents awkward problems for comedian and writer.

Mr Moore portrays Rob Salinger, a TV interviewer working with an understanding boss (Richard Mulligan) for a local station, a job which gives some scope for his comic talents but, more importantly, introduces him to a beautiful cellist named Maude whom he goes to interview.

That he will fall for her is not surprising, for she is Amy Irving who must currently be the prettiest girl in Hollywood, and that this will be reciprocated is something we have to swallow, charm or cheek, one must presume, making up for an unromantic appearance.

There is one snag, he is already married to Micki, a hardly less lovely lady as portrayed by Ann Reinking. She is a lawyer and so ambitious is her profession she cannot take time off to have the baby Rob longs for, whereas Maude can and will

So Rob starts leading a double life which allows the film to develop not very inventively the usual triangular situation. It is only when Micki and Maude become pregnant more or less simultanously that the comic pace quickens, with Rob juggling his meetings with both, not to mention his T V interviews.

Needless to say, neither woman suspects, and with Rob actually marrying Maude, there is the additional complication of two Mrs Salingers of which uproarious use is made when they visit different doctors who share the same waiting room.

It is here that the elaborate comic device begins to yield big dividends in the way of laughter: and bigger still when the women find themselves in adjacent rooms at a hospital for the delivery of their babies. Here misunderstandings multiply madly, doors open and shut provocatively as in a Feydeau farce, causing Mr Moore to dash to and fro in desperate attempts to hide all.

To achieve a happy ending after all this would be something of a conjuring trick, and I will only say that a conclusion is somehow reached that does not detract from the preceding farce, though it will hardly satisfy moralists!

WOLFGANG PETERSEN, who directed and partly wrote The Never Ending Story also made "The Boat," one of the most expensive and commercially successful of all post war German films.

That gave a realistic account of a U-boat operating in the 1939-45 War. The new film could hardly be more different, except in technical efficiency and the suggestion of another big budget, it being a fantasy for children.

There was a large number of these at the Press show whose attention was evidently held by these adventures of a 10-year-old American boy (the film was made in Munich with an American cast) named Bastian who goes off into a fantasy world to avoid bullying at his school.

He enters those realms through a book, given him by a kindly old man, which he reads while cutting class and hiding in the school's attic.

The book's hero is a small boy like himself with whom he can identify, and so it is Bastian in the character of Atreyu whom we watch braving the dangers of an unknown land inhabited by strange people and animals, undertaking a quest, in fact, to save the country from destruction by a malignant force, and the Empress who governs it, too.

In the parts of Bastian and Atreyu are able and amiable child actors, Barret Oliver and Noah Hathaway, who are by no means submerged by the special effects department which is as active as usual in fantasy.

Scenery and seasons are spectacularly varied, incidents on the quest are exciting and the flying dragon who supplies Atreyu's transport is a delightful creation in a film that never seems short of inventions in keeping with its consistent style.

To BURLESQUE the "Superman" films might seem superfluous, for they efficiently burlesque themselves; yet this pursuit, and the sending-up of other familiar film stereotypes, proves by no means unrewarding in The Return of Captain Invincible, an Australian film directed by Philippe Mora.

The title refers to an American superman in the 1939-45 War who, after falling on evil days in the McCarthy era, turns up 25 years later in Australia having taken to drink.

But the old country, threatened by a villainous Mr Midnight, needs the services of the Captain once more, and the stage is set for yet another power struggle between good and evil.

Since these are represented by Alan Arkin and Christopher Lee, there are contrasting acting styles to appreciate as well as the zany story in which Kate Fitzpatrick's police woman who rehabilitates the Captain is one of half a dozen helpful studies.

Jean Cocteau's Beauty and the Beast of 1947 was his first film, and many considered it the finest of all fantasies. An opportunity to reassess occurs now with a new 35mm print replacing the old 16mm, the only copy available here for some 20 years.

Although I found the new print initially disappointing, the piece in due course exercised all its old enchantment and why should it not, given the talents involved — Auric's music, Berard's designs, Alekan's photography and, not least the acting of Jean Marais and Josette Day.

THEATRE / Intermezzo

Just good friends

FRIENDSHIP between the sexes is always a risky business —especially if they are man and wife. In "Intermezzo" at Greenwich, Arthur Schnitzler finds in this obvious proposition a complexity and an excitement which I for one found totally unsuspected.

Admittedly, I have a profound admiration for the Austrian dramatist and his Freudian analysis of erotic conflict. And I also take easily to his contemporary, Henry James, who is similarly adroit at threading a way to the centre of the dark labryinths of human motive.

Less patient playgoers may be less fascinated by the glamorous composer Amadeus who in 1905 confesses his infidelity to his opera-singer wife Cecilia, and proposes that they separate but still remain professional colleagues, friends honest with one another, and good parents of their young son.

Jonathan Kent, long hair flowing and presence as graceful as ever, offers an edgy, high-strung portrait of Amadeus. And, though hindered by a hideous wig, Sheila Gish lends both dignity and bravura to a wife who clearly adores him when she leaves Vienna for Berlin.

The story proves to be a simple one. The composer swiftly tires of his amour, and becomes furiously jealous when Cecilia rises to stardom and has her name linked with a young and aristocratic admirer.

But when he throws himself at his wife's feet, begging her to return—he has even written a solo for her in her new symphony—he finds Cecilia changed. Being free has given her life new meaning. She has no lover, but she can no longer commit herself to Amadeus as either friend or wife.

Whatever she feels now, as he pours out his passion, she knows the moment can lie, and she will not trust it. She suffers at parting as much as he, but neither her pride nor her integrity will permit a happy ending.

All this is played out in a ravishing music-room (by Yolanda Sonnabend) and directed with all Christopher Fettes's care for the preciosity and burrowing introspection of its scented, self-tortured period. The twists of the plot include a near-duel and comic reconciliation between the husband and his wife's supposed lover, and the evening's pleasures include capital performances from Martin Wenner, James Griffin and (as the child) Toby Watkins.

Spell Number 7

BEWARE of plays which come with a glossary in the programme. There may be more than words to baffle you. What about the title, for instance, of "Spell Number 7" at the Donmar Warehouse? The whole thing should be approached with caution.

Among the words which this show from New York lists to help the poor, benighted London playgoer is miscegenation.

Indeed, miscegenation proves remorselessly the theme. The mixing of races in the United States bothers the black author Ntosake Shanga strangely and strikingly. The strangeness comes in the tone of what amounts to a revue. For it is nothing if not heavy with irony and American allusions to the idea and experience of being black. Much of the humour therefore sweeps clean over this ageing, white Cockney head.

But the British company directed by Sue Parrish goes about its racially satirical work with such vigour, precision and charm that although it doesn't make all the author's points, it creates enough purely theatrical impact to engage our continuous attention.

Much of the evening may look like a metaphorical rehashing of class and colour prejudice as half a dozen out of work New York black theatricals enact a series of charades to give us an impression of what it feels to be them.

Maybe if you live in Greenwich Village where Joe Papp first produced the show, you would feel less at sea than I did. Some of the laughter at the Warehouse sounds strenuously anxious to appreciate the ironical jokes against, as far as I could tell, whites of the kind the entertainment can be presumed to attract.

At least I think the jokes were mainly against the likes of me, though I can't be sure because the language is often too native (if that isn't racial as a remark) to be intelligible. What I am quite sure of is the pleasure of the spirited team work of this company, especially in song and dance.

TELEVISION / Imbibing the hard facts

O'Donnell Investigates . . . Booze (B B C-2) offered us a new — new to me, that is — telly pundit in Dr Michael O'Donnell. Less solemn than Dimbleby (J.), less diadactic than Burke, breezier than the esteemed Philpott, he is a medical man with a faint Irish accent and no objection to being photographed with his back to the camera, which makes him unusual, if not unique.

"Booze" is a two-parter about the contemporary evils of the demon drink. It's been done before: there was an earlier T V documentary devoted entirely to the suppressed "alcohol policies" report. This one concentrated on the worrying notion that we bibbers of wine can no longer be comfortably separated into "social drinkers" and "alcoholics," but must regard ourselves as all standing on the rungs of a perilous ladder labelled "alcohol abuse."

Statistically, this argument rests on the fact that over the past couple of decades or so, total alcohol consumption has doubled. As a colleague pointed out, this could mean not that everyone is drinking twice as much, but that some people (women, teenagers) who drank relatively little before are now supping. O'Donnell did not explore this possibility. Nor did he refer, when blaming "alcohol abuse" on greater availability, to the experience of the Scots, who recently liberalised their licensing laws and report less drunkenness as a result.

O'Donnell and his witness almost seem to be implying in tonight's second programme that we are on the way back to the horrors of 80 years ago, when our Draconian licensing laws were needed to counter appalling and widespread drunkenness. If so, they are surely going over the top; for a start, no one but a lectotal Arab could afford the stuff these days.

Still, the facts, and figures, were disturbing enough: increased deaths from alcohol-related diseases, one-third of traffic accidents and 40 per cent of crime laid at drink's door, even a possible half of recent murders. "We are all very concerned about heroin," pronounced one medic, "but a visitor from Mars might think that alcohol was the greater problem. Millions of people are slowly poisoning themselves to death." The old bar-proppers' jest about not being in any hurry suddenly didn't sound so funny.

On a paper I once worked for the editor would send round memos exhorting us to watch out for references to PSYCHIC NEWS: "Every time we get their name wrong, I get a 'phone call next day complaining." It struck me that if the journal in question had truly been into premonitions, they would have rung up the day before.

Arthur C. Clarke, famous for scientific predictions and living in Sri Lanka, isn't into premonitions either. "I have never had a premonition," he announced at the start of Yorkshire TV's World of Stranger Powers (ITV), "and I rather hope I never do."

This did not debar him from acting as host to Adam Hart-Smith's catalogue of strange presciences, forewarning earthquakes, air crashes, and other natural disasters. Some, like the story of the now elderly lady who escaped from the "Titanic" because her mother was expecting catastrophe, were familiar. New to me was the chap who has logged all air crashes for the past 25 years and claims to predict the next one on a statistical basis.

Last word from Arthur C.: "Warnings come from our minds, not the future, but we should still take them seriously."

MUSIC / Portsmouth prize winners

THE ALEXANDER Quartet of the United States, whose members, the violinists Eric Pritchard and Kate Ransome, violist Paul Yarbrough and cellist Sandy Wilson, were awarded the first prize on Saturday of this year's Portsmouth International String Quartet Competition, took the opportunity of their prize-winners concert at the Wigmore Hall on Tuesday night to display their carefully nourished proficiency in three contrasting areas of the repertory.

In Mozart's "Dissonance" quartet their corporate sound was warm and mellifluous and finely blended, the music presented with a well studied elegance. It was also as yet a little bland and inhibited in expression, the musical detail always confidently worked while stopping short of any strongly communicative spontaneity or imaginative flair.

Bartok's fourth quartet similarly aroused admiration for their neatly projected grasp of the basic essentials of all five movements, of their technical needs and characteristic flavour and impulse. Here again, however, they seemed either unable or unwilling to fulfil their own thoughtfully laid expectations, the caution and restraint of their playing, for all its amiable virtues, smoothing down the music's abrasive edges and draining it of much of its vital physical energy.

And the as yet provisional nature of the unresolved contradications between the positive and negative aspects of their playing was finally confirmed in the second of Beethoven's "Razumovsky" quartets, in a performance in which everything had been securely prepared and attentively observed, but still more on the level of encouraging promise than of memorably individual achivement.

DANCE / Ballet de Montreal

THE QUEBEC Company Ballet de Montreal Eddy Toussaint, which opened a two-week season at Sadlers Wells on Tuesday night, has a lot going for it. Its dancers are lively, well-disciplined, good-looking and unpretentious; they include two remarkable soloists, and Eddy Toussaint, as choreographer, usually takes care not to give the other dancers movements which are outside their scope.

When Anik Bissonnette and Louis Robitaille were dancing together in a pas de deux—first in "Un Simple Moment," to very familiar music by Albinoni, and then in "Concerto en mouvement," an interpretation of Max Bruch's 1st Violin Concerto—they looked admirably sincere and spontaneous, with good line and skilful co-ordination between the two artists. But even those two pieces, so well danced, suffered from Eddy Toussaint's lack of inventiveness, and his habit of combining, rather awkwardly, very familiar patterns with gimmicks.

Tackling cantatas by Bach in "Cantates," Toussaint showed himself ill-at-ease using the vocal passages: here the music dominated the stage, which was peopled—very inappropriately —with men wearing long, flimsy white skirts.

Since Toussaint was born in Haiti, one would have expected him to show some imagination, in his ballet "Alexis le Trotteur," by the way he showed Alexis being "ridden" by a dream-woman symbolising a horse just as voodoo celebrants are "ridden" by devine creatures called Loa.

The trouble was that Jean-Hughues Rochette, tackling Toussaint's unimaginative choreography for the title role, could not suggest effectively the madness of Alexis, and Brigitte Valette got lost between movements suggesting the Haitian love-goddess Erzulie and those of a horse.

JOHN FERNALD

By JOHN BARBER

In public as relaxed and benign a theatre man as you could hope to meet, John Fernald, who has died aged 79, had been a president of the Oxford University Dramatic Society before becoming a theatre critic and in due course the director of a number of well known pre-war plays, including Michael Egan's "The Dominant Sex" and James Parish's long-running "Distinguished Gathering."

After war service with the Royal Navy, he worked for some years both at the Liverpool Playhouse and London's Arts Theatre. I recall with particular pleasure his witty production of Peter Ustinov's "The Loves of Four Colonels" and a moving "Saint Joan" with Siobhan McKenna.

In later years he ran the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, and subsequently worked and taught in Michigan and New York. He was always known for his encouragement of young and little-known players, and for the clarity of his staging of the difficult plays of Chekhov and Ibsen. He is the author of a book about his craft, "A Sense of Direction."

JOHN JOLLIFFE

Mr John Jolliffe, who has died aged 55, was Bodleys Librarian at Oxford. His 30 years as a professional librarian were divided between the British Museum, which he joined in 1955, and the Bodleian where he became sub-librarian and Keeper of the Catalogues in 1970.

A specialist in 16th century French literature, he also helped pioneer automated techniques of cataloguing older books.

Victor Lusinchi. In Switzerland. Aged 73. New York Times correspondent in Geneva. Founding member of United Nations Correspondents' Association and its first president in 1949. Covered League of Nations before war. Returned after war service to cover United Nations.

Wilhelm Brückner-Rüggeberg. In Hamburg aged 78, music conductor and teacher. Joined Hamburg State Opera 1938. Conductor Philharmonic Choir Hamburg 1940.

WAY OF THE WORLD

A Bad Business

"SPAIN should be able to make a great leap forward in the next 10 years," said Senor Felipe Gonzalez, the Spanish Prime Minister, after an agreement on Spain's entry into the E.E.C.

"Portugal will be unrecognisable within five years," said Dr Mario Soares, the Portuguese Prime Minister, after a similar agreement on the entry of Portugal.

What sort of people, Spaniards, Portuguese or foreigners who love and admire those countries, are supposed to be pleased by these odious announcements? What sort of people want a "great leap forward," with its disgusting Maoist associations, or hope to find their own country unrecognisable in five years' time?

We know, I think, what sort of people they are. We know them well in our own country. Who would have thought they would appear in countries hitherto comparatively blessed, such as Spain and Portugal, boasting of their greed and folly and expecting to be praised for it?

Idle Dreams

MY COLLEAGUE Peterborough jocosely suggests, in a paragraph about a Mrs Gladys Rigg, that a mistake by which she found herself addressed as "Gladys Pigg Esq.," may have been due to his answering machine having fallen into the hands of this column.

The columnar authorities accept this imputation in a suitably jocose spirit. What is an "answering machine"? But there are fears that columnar extremists, the dreaded "Black Hats" may take the incident for a provocation and use it to foment chauvinist feelings.

The "Black Hats" territorial ambitions are almost unlimited. Not only do they demand a protectorate over "Personal," leading to the annexation of that anarchic region and its colonisation by land-hungry columnar peasants, but they regard even this as only a step towards the occupation of the Woman's Page, with its fabulous mineral and other wealth.

Once the Woman's Page was incorporated in the column the territory of Peterborough itself could be threatened by a surprise attack (the so-called "Transpaginal Plan") from the rear, and once the occupation of this rich and fertile territory had been consolidated the way would be open to a final assault on the very citadel and administrative centre of the whole newspaper.

Such are the idle dreams which the "Black Hats" dream as they meet to conspire in obscure cafes and taverns in the capital and elsewhere. There are intermittent reports of illegal drilling and "field exercises" in remote mountainous areas, and of arms smuggling from "certain sources" in such minor paginal powers as Latest Wills.

I am taking a short holiday. This column will next appear on Tuesday, April 16. A Happy Easter to all readers.

Needless to say, the columnar authorities keep these people under continual surveillance. Any rumours of clandestine encouragement for them can be discounted. It would be in nobody's interest to encourage these misguided fanatics. But it cannot be too strongly emphasised once again that in the event of any threat to the balance of paginal or transpaginal power this column could not and would not stand idly by.

Juxtaposition

THE Tate Gallery announces that it has bought a painting by the surrealist Georgio de Chirico, "The Uncertainty of the Poet," for £1 million. It depicts a torso and a bunch of bananas.

The Guardian reports: "'The juxtaposition is one of the most bizarre and compelling inventions in the history of art,' the Tate Gallery says. 'It has given this picture something of the hold on the imagination of a wide public that is possessed by the Mona Lisa or Rodin's Thinker.'"

This statement is not attributed to any particular person at the Tate Gallery. It is as though the Tate Gallery could speak with a collective voice—perhaps audible only to the Guardian. Does this voice belong to the pictures in the Tate Gallery themselves? Are they the "wide public" whose imagination this picture has got such a hold on?

Now don't all start shouting at once. I am not going to grumble about waste of public money, piles of bricks, submarines made of rubber tyres and so on. This picture is not in that bogus category.

But it is not an outstanding example of Chirico's work, which at its best has great merit. His paintings of deserted cities, with their endless colonnades and unnatural noonday shadows, induce a feeling of timeless dread as no other paintings can. Not everybody enjoys this frisson, of course; but I do.

Chirico was a talented and original painter. But the Tate Gallery, by grotesquely overpraising this particular painting, has done him a disservice. It will make people think he is just one of the horde of bogus artists it does so much to cherish and encourage.

Incidentally, it is amusing (though not very) that in his later years Chirico himself forswore surrealism, condemned his own surrealist paintings and began to paint in quite a different style.

● Geraldine McEwan as Lucia raises her glass to her deadly social enemy.

THE author E. F. Benson wrote around 90 novels, most of which are infinitely forgettable. Not so Mapp and Lucia. The six novels, based on the 1920s' characters living in and around Rye, attained a cult following which has extended to the present day.

Revived in hardback by Heinemann in 1967, they have never since been out of print.

"They have been in con*stant demand," said Tim* Manderson, who reissued them and regards them as minor comic masterpieces. Until recently he felt that those who loved them wanted to keep them to themselves.

"It was rather a cliquey thing, like someone wanting to keep secret a favourite holiday place. Of course they are outrageously camp," he added. "And Benson was reputed to have said that he drew the character of Miss Mapp from himself."

Rye, where Benson lived for the last 20 years of his life and of which he was mayor between 1934 and 1937, is inordinately proud of him. "People have been coming to Rye because of Benson for years," said Cynthia Reavell, who has been running a Benson appreciation society since 1983.

Cynthia and her husband Tony, who runs the Martello Bookshop in Rye, uncovered so much information about the novels that they now send out a twice-yearly newsletter.

"We now have almost 200 members," said Cynthia. "We only have one annual meeting but, if the series takes off, there won't be enough room in Rye for all the Benson addicts."

Introducing two stylishly wicked ladies

● Prunella Scales, with the layers of padding that transform her into Miss Mapp.

BY PAULA DAVIES

PERHAPS it is a sign of the times that the social confrontation of two middle-aged English ladies is deemed worthy of not just one, but two, television series.

A stylish, if unlikely, antidote to "Dallas" and "Dynasty," the story of "Mapp and Lucia," based on the novels by E. F. Benson, is the first of two series on these extraordinary characters which starts on Channel 4 on April 14.

Set in a wealthy, 1920s' hothouse of village gossip, slander and virulent character assassination, it is frivolous, hysterically funny and liable to cause ructions among the many cult followers of the Benson novels, which numbered Noel Coward, Nancy Mitford and W. H. Auden among their devotees.

"We'll probably get an enormous number of letters saying we have got it wrong," said Michael Dunlop, the producer, obviously certain that they have not. He knew that Benson was popular but was amazed to discover a Mapp and Lucia society in Bangkok, where the idea for the series was born.

There is a cynical literary saying that the worse the novel the better the television adaptation. Michael agreed that there was a modicum of truth in the adage. But his two women stars — Prunella Scales and Geraldine McEwan — disagreed strongly.

Prunella claimed that the Benson novels are not mere frivolity but are full of social criticism. "I admit that I find a little of them goes a long way," she told me when we met during a break in rehearsals for the second series.

"But his criticism of the society of that time, although oblique, is very strong. There is a depth about it and he had an ear for hypocrisy, selfishness and snobbery."

On the surface all is sweetness and light, but the daggers are permanently drawn. Mapp and Lucia, aided by the satel*lite characters, which in*clude a brilliantly-portrayed Georgie by Nigel Hawthorne, who is seldom without his tapestry or painting, constantly vie with each other, although it is Lucia who usually comes out on top. The part is a gift for Geraldine.

"Lucia is very selfish and autocratic, but she has a terrific relish for *living, a terrific enthu*siasm, which is her attraction to people. Because she has so much vitality she carries people along. She is more than a bit dangerous, though."

Prunella has found the character of the scheming Miss Mapp both physically and mentally large. "This padding is very believable," said the actress, who is probably best-known for her portrayal of Sybil Fawlty in "Fawlty Towers." "I am three times my usual size," she laughed, patting the layers of padding which extend from her upper arms to her knees in an extraordinarily realistic fashion.

"I can't really talk about the character," she added. "There would be no point in acting her if I could. The character is acutely observed in the books."

Both actresses read the novels a few years ago and both claim that variations of Mapp and Lucia exist today. They had money and servants and didn't have to work but their lack of genuine kindliness and charity is alive and well everywhere.

As Prunella put it: "The way that Mapp says she forgives people because she is a Christian is really dreadful. She is extremely wicked, of course, but I play her as a thoroughly hard done-by Christian woman who is doing her very best in the teeth of appalling odds. As Mapp says: 'It is so wicked to *spread any breath of scan*dal until one has one's facts.'"

Geraldine agrees that the characters are wicked, but very human. "Lucia doesn't question anything; she is invariably right. Yet both characters never give up. They are always ready to start on something new. But they live in a very strange society," she continued. "There are no children and no young people at all; but this does give the series a rather special flavour."

Such a flavour seems hardly likely to appeal to many people. But Geraldine was asked recently by a young waiter the date of the start of the series. "He said he was fascinated because he was a member of the Benson Society."

It will be interesting to see what happens.

Double leg of lamb
Sauce Béarnaise
Lady Finger pudding

THE red orange is currently making its English debut. Thin skinned, crimson fleshed and with a most distinctive flavour, it bears little resemblance to the familiar blood orange and gives a tremendous fillip to costly early spring salads, sauces and main course dishes.

We illustrate a couple of examples with our Chicken Breasts Stuffed with Crab Meat and served with a real Crab and Orange Sauce. The chicken breasts can be bought separately, ready to use, or removed from chickens weighing not more than 5lb. They should always be skinned before use.

We also introduce an alternative main-course French family dish, essentially one for springtime when really small legs of lamb are obtainable. It comprises a pair of small, young, succulent legs of lamb joined together and so sawn off just above the tail.

This joint cooks either as a pot roast or in an ordinary meat baking tin surrounded, for either treatment, by small, peeled pieces of old potatoes, very young, small onions or whole baby carrots.

In France young lamb is frequently eaten blue but we do not imagine this will become an English favourite. This delicate joint can also be served with Sauce Béarnaise on special occasions or just roasted plain and served with new potatoes.

EATING IN WITH BON VIVEUR

HUNGARIAN MUSSELS

INGREDIENTS: 2 tablespoons finely-chopped shallots or very small onions; 1 sprig thyme; 1 small bay leaf; 2 quarts mussels, cleaned thoroughly in running cold water; 7fl oz dry white wine or cider; 7fl oz water or white fish stock; 1 heaped teaspoon paprika; 2 rounded tablespoons milled or chopped fresh parsley heads and 2 stalks.

METHOD: Turn the prepared mussels into a roomy pan, discarding any which have opened. Add the shallots, parsley stalks, thyme and bay leaf. Swill with the wine or cider and fish stock or water. Cover securely and cook over a high heat for a maximum of 2 min. after fluids have reached boiling point. By this time only the dead mussels will have remained closed. Discard them and drain off the liquor. Remove the empty shell half from each mussel. Strain the liquor through a fine sieve or butter muslin. Return to a saucepan and stir in the paprika and parsley heads. Arrange the mussels in a shallow heated dish. Pour over the liquor and serve with plenty of thin brown bread and butter or a flute of French bread wrapped lightly in aluminium foil and heated through in the oven for 5 min. at 375F (Gas 5).

CHICKEN BREASTS STUFFED WITH CRAB MEAT

INGREDIENTS: 4 medium-sized chicken breasts; 4oz flaked white crab meat; strained juice of half a lemon; freshly-ground black pepper; flour; 2 small eggs, beaten; and fine soft white or brown breadcrumbs; 1 red orange or a blood orange, sliced for garnish.

METHOD: Lay each skinned chicken breast flat on a working surface. Remove the little "fillets" which lie underneath. With a very sharp small, pointed knife pare a "mouth" back, working from the centre to within 1in at each end to make a pouch or pocket. Moisten the crab meat with half the lemon juice. Season generously with black pepper. Mix thoroughly and divide into four. Stuff one portion into each "mouth," draw chicken flesh over, turn in flour, pat firmly then dust off surplus. When all four are so treated draw them separately through the beaten egg, drain and bury in the crumbs. These may be frozen until required, packed in a plastic storage box on a bed of the surplus crumbs. To cook: heat oil in a deep frying pan to 390F. Slide in the prepared breasts, turn off the heat or, when using electricity, draw pan away from heat and try to a good golden brown for 5 to 6 min. in the slowly-diminishing heat. The time depends upon the size of the breast pieces.

CREAMED ORANGE POTATOES

METHOD: Peel and steam the potatoes until very soft. Sieve or put into an all-purpose blender, switch on and reduce to a smooth purée with salt and pepper to taste. Use the finely-grated rind of chosen orange and sufficient strained orange juice to moisten to the required consistency. Pipe as a border on to a serving dish. Lay the chicken breasts in the centre and arrange pieces of baked banana and little corn fritters in small heaps at each end.

BAKED BANANAS

INGREDIENTS: 2 bananas; the residue of strained orange juice from the potatoes; 1 small teaspoon ground ginger.

METHOD: Peel the bananas, cut each in half down the centre. Place in a small heat-resistant dish. Stir ginger into orange juice, swill over the fruit and bake at 350F (Gas 4) on mid-shelf until slightly puffy and just soft, about 15 to 20min.

CORN FRITTERS

INGREDIENTS: 3oz sifted flour; 1 small egg; 1 small tin strained sweetcorn; a little milk; a little sesame oil.

METHOD: These may either be *fried in a thick iron fry*ing pan or on an iron griddle, brushed lightly with sesame oil. Turn flour into a basin, drop the egg into a central well. Work up with electric or hand whisk, adding milk very sparingly to achieve a thick batter. Drain the corn, fold in and fry using 1 small tablespoon for each fritter. Cook over a low heat. When golden brown on underside flip over and repeat.

CRAB AND ORANGE SAUCE

INGREDIENTS: 4oz brown crab meat; 2fl oz dry cider; a little strained lemon juice; the chicken "fillets" removed from the breast pieces; salt and black pepper to taste; 2fl oz whipped cream.

METHOD: Chop the chicken "filets" as finely as possible. Put into a food processor or an all-purpose blender, switch on with the cider and reduce to a purée. Add all the other ingredients, beat until very smooth then divide between 4 small pots and set one on the rim of each plate for service. This avoids the properly heated main course plates causing the sauce to melt too rapidly.

DOUBLE LEG OF LAMB

INGREDIENTS: 1 double leg of spring lamb cut just above the tail to yield 2 very small, joined legs of lamb; 1 garlic clove, crushed; 1 pint lamb bone stock or ½ pint stock and ½ pint each red wine and water; 2lb old potatoes, cut evenly and fairly small; 2lb small shallots, peeled or small carrots, scraped; black pepper; a bunch of parsley stalks (when available); 6 bacon rinds (failing these use salt).

METHOD: Score the skin of the joints fairly lightly. Rub in the crushed garlic vigorously, set in an ordinary meat baking tin, run the potatoes and shallots around, add parsley stalks and bacon rind, swill with the chosen liquids and cover with a light tenting of aluminium foil. Roast in the oven on centre shelf at 350F (Gas 4). Time depends upon personal preference, for under*done or completely* cooked lamb. Serve with the strained vegetables arranged around the edges of a roomy meat dish and hand the liquid separately in a jug or sauce boat. This delicate joint can also be served with Sauce Béarnaise.

SAUCE BEARNAISE

INGREDIENTS: 1 rounded tablespoon finely-chopped shallot or onion; 1 sprig each of chervil and thyme; 1 small piece torn from a bay leaf; 2fl oz wine vinegar (ideally tarragon); 2fl oz dry white wine; 2 raw No 3 egg yolks; 4oz butter; lemon juice; salt; pepper; cayenne.

METHOD: Put shallot, chervil, thyme, bay leaf wine and vinegar into a tiny pan and reduce two thirds by simmering. Press through a tiny sieve into a saucepan. Cool down to blood heat. Set over a very low heat and beat egg yolks with 1 tablespoon of water. Add to pan contents and begin whisking. When mixture starts to thicken begin adding softened butter in small flakes, whisking continuously. A squeeze of lemon juice may be added together with a pinch each of salt, black pepper and cayenne.

LADY FINGER PUDDING

INGREDIENTS: 8oz Savoy Fingers; 7fl oz milk; 5oz currants; 3 No 3 eggs, separated; castor sugar; 2 oz glacé cherries, chopped; 1 oz angelica, chopped; 2oz chopped dates.

METHOD: Crumble the biscuits into a bowl. Break in the egg yolks and mix well. Boil the milk and sweeten to taste with castor sugar. Pour on to the biscuits and beat thoroughly. Draw and fold in the currants, glacé cherries, dates and angelica and beat again. Brush a plain round charlotte mould thoroughly with very little oil. Dust lightly with flour. Whip the three egg whites very stiffly, beat into the mixture. Turn into the prepared mould. Level off and stand in an ordinary meat baking tin two-thirds filled with boiling water. Bake on centre shelf at 350F (Gas 4) until the edges begin to show signs of shrinking away from the tin.

DINERS' DELIGHT

ARMAGNAC, that delicious digestif that has often wrongly been regarded as the poor man's answer to Cognac, is *becoming more fashion*able as an after dinner drink.

Ten years ago, less than 5,000 cases were being imported from France. This year around 50,000 cases are expected.

Distilled since the 15th-*century by the local farm*ers of Gascony, who poured their wine into travelling stills, Armagnac is one of the only two brandies, the other being Cognac, to which the rules of appellation contrôlée apply.

There are more than 250 producers in the region but only about five sizeable exporters. The oldest of these is Janneau which has been in operation since 1851. Matured from 5 to more than 30 years in the local "black oak" casks, Armagnac has a rustic, almost earthy flavour which can be as smooth and elegant as the finest cognac.

Janneau produces three qualities. Traditionally, the equivalent of a 3-star cognac is bottled after 5 years maturation. V S O P after 10 to 12 years, and X O after 15 to 20 years. But it is the Domaine de Mouchac, which is a classic. Only 5,000 bottles are produced in any one year.

WHEN FRIENDS MEAN EVERYTHING

When you are old and alone, the world can suddenly become very frightening. You need a good friend desperately, a good friend you can turn to for everything — for the rest of your life.

We have been looking after the elderly and needy since 1905 and now have eleven residential homes. Here, men and women from professional backgrounds find security and freedom, with expert nursing care. They are "at home" and not "in a home" — they never have to leave.

We also give financial help to old people from all backgrounds who wish to stay in their own homes. We would like to do more but urgently need the funds. Please help us by making a Covenant, or by remembering us in your Will, or write today with a donation to:

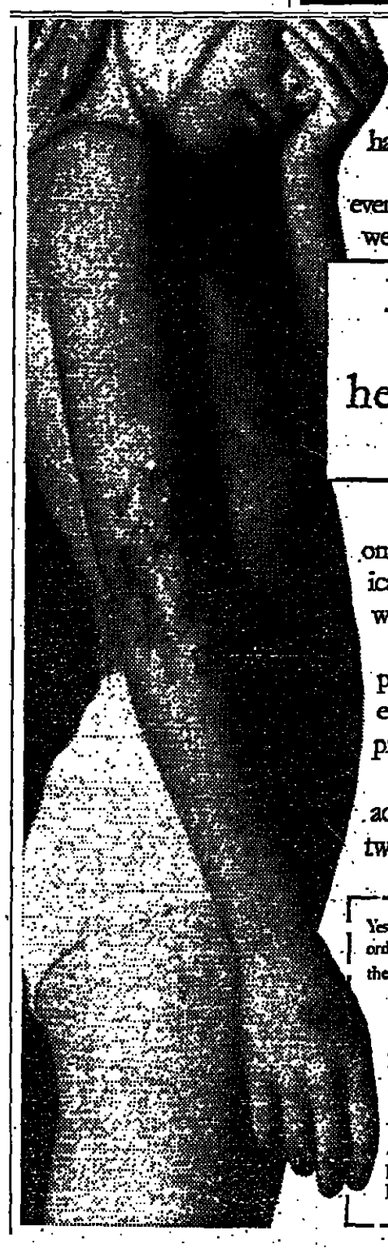
FRIENDS OF THE ELDERLY and Gentlefolk's Help.



We can't take away the pain this child has been through. But with your help, we'll do our best to make sure it never happens to her again.

Attacks like this, take place in your area everyday. And it's only with your donations that we can give aid and comfort to the victims.

Her father bruised, burnt and broke her arm. Now we want to twist yours.

Last year, over 40,000 children relied on us for help, and there's no sign of a significant reduction in the number of children who need help.

Anything you can send will be used to provide help immediately, for example even if you send as little as £15.48 it could protect a child for a fortnight.

When you realise what your money will achieve, you'll find that having your arm twisted doesn't hurt at all.

A TRADE WAR LOOMS

THE POSSIBILITY OF A TRADE WAR between the United States and Japan no longer seems as remote as it did once. For years there have been powerful voices raised in Congress supporting protectionist measures aimed primarily at Japan, but although they may have echoed the sentiments of many voters and industrial lobbyists they have been representative of protest rather than policy. Protectionism has nibbled away at the free trade consensus which has dominated Washington since the end of the Second World War, but successive Administrations, including the present one, have regarded the promotion of free trade as an intellectual if not always a practical obligation. Last week's 92-0 vote in the Senate in support of trade retaliation against the Japanese, the expectation that the Senate Finance Committee will approve legislation demanding specific retaliatory action from President REAGAN, and increasingly tough talking by high-level Administration trade officials are indications that, as far as Tokyo is concerned, the consensus has been shattered. American patience with Japan has just about run out.

It is easy to understand the reasons for American frustration. In 1984 the United States' trade deficit with Japan ballooned to $37 billion —more than double the figure of two years earlier. To add insult to injury, when President REAGAN decided not to ask Japan to renew its "voluntary restraint" on the export of cars, Tokyo responded by saying that it would maintain a quota but would raise it from 1·8 million to 2·3 million units a year. In Washington this has been interpreted as a crafty attempt by the Japanese to export very nearly as many cars to America as they would have done without restraints while being able to claim simultaneously that the Administration's gesture had been reciprocated and no more concessions would therefore be required. This is unquestionably tactless and shortsighted of the Japanese. It is also the case that Japan is a long way from applying to its own market the rules of open trade which it expects others to observe. However, at least two-thirds of the merchandise trade deficit between the two countries is directly attributable to excessive dollar strength and the Japanese cannot be blamed for the gaping budget deficit and high real interest rates which have helped to bring it about. Cutting the deficit would be a lot more sensible than starting a trade war.

THE END OF MAN

BISHOP PETER BALL'S views on a Western World in crisis (reported today on this page by GRAHAM TURNER) will strike deep chords of recognition in the minds of many. At a time when, more and more, our bishops seem to speak to us about the condition of our society in the tones of the party politician, it is good that we should understand that the problem is not that bishops have nothing to say about non-ecclesiastical matters and should not interfere, but that there is such a deep need that they should speak to our real spiritual longings that when they settle for being simply clones of Mr KINNOCK (or at best, Dr OWEN) those who look to them for bread resent being fobbed off with a stone.

One example will suffice. Bishop BALL points to a growing disparity between rich and poor as being a sign of a society in crisis. Few will disagree with this. Why is it, then, that when Bishop DAVID JENKINS of Durham speaks of this disparity in our own country, he arouses such resentment? Is it not because he is clearly speaking, not sub specie aeternitatis, but from the thick of the political battle: that he is simply making technical secular (and highly arguable) judgments and no more than that?

"The end of man," said that great priest Austin Farrar, "is endless Godhead, endlessly possessed." "Our only vision," says Bishop BALL, "is a vision of more." But our problem is not that we ask for too much, but that we do not ask for anything like enough. As C. S. Lewis put it, "Aim at Heaven and you will get earth 'thrown in,' aim at earth and you will get neither." Bishop BALL calls for a great spiritual renewal. There could be no better season for his call than this, when Christians await the resurrection of Christ. And unless, without qualification or evasion, the Church is prepared to proclaim that, it had better remain silent on all else.

A MATTER OF TIMING

LET US PICTURE, if we can, Mr SELWYN GUMMER, chairman of the Tory party, at breakfast on Tuesday morning. As he reaches for the marmalade pot, messengers arrive with news of the night's irregularities on the Loughborough campus. On the strength (it is said) of 700 cans of beer, 60 Scottish students, or some of them, have perpetrated a rather shabby imitation of the Bullingdon Club, immortalised by EVELYN WAUGH. In his briefcase the chairman has some formidable papers on the Federation of Conservative Students. The gist is that the political posture of some offers a hostage to the fortunes of the Tory party. Furthermore, propped against the marmalade jar, is a copy of Tuesday's newspaper, outlining the Prime Minister's plan for clipping the wings of football hooligans.

Whatever else is to be said about Monday night's behaviour by some of the FCS, their timing was inept, putting it at its mildest. Small wonder that Mr SELWYN GUMMER left (as we suppose) the remainder of his breakfast uneaten and repaired with aides to revise the draft of his speech. The relevant passages have now entered the English language and are easily summarised: "Bell, Book and Candle . . ." Mr GUMMER has, in course of political duties, practised the art of sermons. The staunchest Calvinist could not complain about the tone of this one. It received, we thought, a mixed reception from a stunned congregation. Timing apart, which by the students was execrable and by Mr GUMMER immaculate, we hesitate to enter a severe moral judgment. It is not logical to say, entering a minority view, that a campaign against football hooligans enjoins strict sobriety on all students and the eschewing of broken glass. Mr GUMMER has a certain amount of furniture to repair. And, as somebody or other said, timing is all.

GRAHAM TURNER meets Peter Ball, Bishop of Lewes, who believes that the Western world is facing the third of its greatest crises

A monk's-eye-view of the world

"EVERYTHING," said Peter Ball, Bishop of Lewes, "has gone stale for us. We have dead taste-buds, we're bored with anything that doesn't stimulate us more and more. Our only vision is a vision of more. I have a sense that the whole of Western Europe is struggling to slough off its old skin, like a snake, and grow a new one. We are desperately longing for a new way, a new inspiration, a new vision."

Peter Ball is an Anglican monk. For 20 years, he has slept on an old horsehair mattress on the floor, in a room which contains nothing other than a Bible and an alarm clock. He rises at ten past four every morning and prays alone for an hour-and-three-quarters, for the most part on his knees. He owns nothing and his episcopal salary is paid directly to his Order.

His view of our world and its present condition, spoken in a voice which is at once hushed, light and intense, like a scurrying flute, is both earthy and sublime, if not exactly anodyne.

He is convinced that the Western world is now in the throes of its third great crisis since the death of Christ. The first came with the break-up of the Roman Empire, the second at the height of the Middle Ages, in the centuries around 1200. Each of the three, he says, has been marked by four symptoms of cataclysmic turmoil.

The first is the existence of a massive external threat: the barbarians at the gates of Rome, the Magyars and Moslems at the gates of Christian Europe, now the nuclear threat. The second is a precipitous decline in moral standards: the depravity of the high Middle Ages, "almost led by the Church" and mirrored by the all-pervading sensuality of our own day.

THE third symptom which had marked all our mega-crises, Bishop Peter went on, was a growing disparity between rich and poor. The mere existence of a great external threat, the fear that civilisation was falling about their ears, probably sharpened people's instinct to grab. Normally, though, that disparity was like barometric pressure, it eventually produced a gale.

The fourth and final symptom was that, in such times of crisis, there was always a tremendous writhing among thinkers struggling to find new tools of thought, new ways of expressing old truths, because the old forms were no longer delivering the goods. Our society was full of such writhings.

What, then, had brought us to such a pass? The most important thing, said Bishop Peter, was that the philosophies of rationalism and objective realism, which had dominated Western Europe for centuries, had gradually seduced us into thinking of creation as a collection of objects outside ourselves which had nothing to do with God.

"By simple acts of surrender, we would rediscover our sense of belonging and our vision."

As soon as you said that God could not be aligned to His creation, both you and creation had had it, because reverence was taken away from it, and it was left to the ravishments of the lower man. Hence the way we abused the earth's bounty, and could even contemplate blowing it up.

That had been followed by rampant individualism, an individualism which, since the 1939-45 war, had been more intense and widespread than at any other time in human history. Our children were given separate rooms from the word go. Education had never before been so exclusively concerned with self-fulfilment. Within the family (where the family had survived) there was almost total self-dependence, with mum and dad both out at work.

That individualism, in turn, had brought in its train a tremendous sense of isolation and loneliness. Sex and possessions had become so important because people used them to try to quench that sense of loneliness. True friendship had almost disappeared. And the more you thought about yourself, the higher did the threshold of satisfaction rise. A kiss, or a Mini, was never enough.

He didn't want to call Western Europe decadent, said Bishop Peter, just terribly fragmented. We had become isolated particles of humanity, adrift on a sea of materialism. And because the connection between politics and spirituality had been shattered, politicians too seldom offered us a vision for the soul of our nations.

It made him think of what Jesus had said about Jerusalem: "If thou hadst known, in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace." If we wanted to regain our peace, the most important thing was to regain our sense of reverence — for people, for things, for the whole of creation. Doors were often made of beautiful wood, yet how often we slammed them — and the noise echoed round the universe.

When we stopped looking at other people as rivals or objects of possession, then we would be on the road back to sanity. And we would rediscover the marvel that marriage was meant to be. Once you belonged to someone else, and humbled yourself before each other, you were free to stop saying: "I want more" and could start looking out from yourself with confidence. In the best marriages, there was such deep unity that you were given an amazing freedom literally to throw love, real love, around to other people.

Then we somehow had to break into the escalation of violence and materialism which was engulfing our world. One simple way of doing that was sharing our wealth with the starving world outside. In his own diocese, 2,500 people had decided to give not from charity but by trimming their lifestyles, and handing over the money they saved to carefully-researched projects in the Third World — a school for the deaf in Tanzania, growing trees in Tigre, a leper village in India. Last year, these people had given £128,000.

By such simple acts of surrender, we would rediscover both our sense of belonging and our vision. Then, by totally surrendering the commanding heights of our personalities — the passion to possess, to love physically, to be independent — we could exchange the abandon which now went into immorality and materialism for the divine abandon which led to new life.

AFTER every great crisis in our civilisation, said Bishop Peter, there had always been a great spiritual renewal. First St Benedict, then St Francis had called around them a group of young people who had flung themselves upon God, and from whom had flowed everything we valued most — art, architecture, education, music. That was what God was planning again, if it was not too late.

Who would have dreamt, before Benedict saw his vision, that a cow herd in a field, like Caedmon, could — through education and the gift of God — become a great revealer of beauty through his poetry and music; or that a boulder in a field could be transformed into a great Gothic arch soaring us up to Heaven?

LONDON DAY BY DAY

Lifting the roof on Sainsbury's offer

THERE may be a little more than meets the eye to Sainsbury's generous offer to pay for the National Gallery extension in place of the "carbuncle" in Trafalgar Square which was designed by Ahrends, Burton and Koralek.

That distinguished architectural partnership has worked only once for the supermarket company—designing its new store in Canterbury, which opened last summer.

Almost immediately the futuristic roof—atttacked by local people as completely out of keeping with a cathedral city—began to leak. Paul Koralek, the partner who designed the store and worked on the National's plans, assured me yesterday that the problem had been resolved.

However, the entire profession was astonished three months ago when an eulogistic account of the Canterbury building appeared in ARCHITECTS' JOURNAL accompanied by this disclaimer.

"Sainsbury's has asked the ARCHITECTS' JOURNAL to make it clear that the company does not in any way associate itself with this article."

Casting aspersions

THE success of the "Jewel in the Crown" on American television played a crucial part in the award to Dame Peggy Ashcroft of her Oscar for best supporting role in David Lean's "A Passage to India."

Academicians chose her while Granada's adaptation of the Paul Scott novels was at the height of its American popularity and the award was given just after the screening of an episode in which Dame Peggy's portrayal of the downtrodden Barbie Batchelor figured prominently.

One emotion American viewers clearly shared with those in Britain was loathing for Capt. Ronald Merrick, played by Tim Piggott-Smith. One Washington television station staging a fund-raising apeal with members of the cast sent a tactful message saying they would raise more money if "Merrick" stayed away.

With the school holidays now under way a reader tells me of a conversation she overheard in a Bristol department store. A harassed mother emerging from a lift pushing a pram said to the six-year-old at her side: "Don't you ever speak like that again: where do you think you are—at school?"

Batting for Labour

THE ennoblement of Charles Williams, the former head of the Price Commission, not only brings to the Lords a Left-of-centre City financier at Neil Kinnock's recommendation, but also increases the Upper House's contingent of first-class cricketers.

C. C. P. Williams, an elegant if mercurial batsman, captained Oxford in 1955 and played occasionally for Essex for seven seasons, finally turning in his pads in 1959.

His love for the game endeared him to Roy Hattersley—even though Yorkshire and Essex are fierce rivals —during the late 1970s when he served as right-hand man to Hattersley, Price's Secretary. Hattersley indeed, is assumed to have originally put forward his name for a peerage.

Et tu, Boris?

WHILE Arthur Scargill was gamely claiming victory for the miners' strike on his visit to the Soviet Union, Radio Moscow was simultaneously explaining the need to shut uneconomic pits.

In a broadcast on March 25, sadly restricted to Turkish listeners, a programme was devoted to the old mining region of the Donbass. It was explained that "coal reserves in the mines do run out with time, exploitation becomes unprofitable and mines are closed down."

The broadcast went on to describe the problems of bussing miners far from their homes to new pits and of rebuilding communities. I therefore imagine that the 50,000 rouble donation "volunteered" by Donbass miners to their British comrades must have been truly heartfelt.

Carson's legacy

MY NOTES about pensions being paid to IRA men by both the British and Irish Governments has prompted a friend who visits Northern Ireland to tell me of his surprise at seeing signposts in Belfast to the "UVF Hospital."

The Ulster Volunteer Force is, of course, a proscribed organisation and it seemed strange that an eminently respectable institution should be so named.

The explanation is that the original UVF—Carson's militia—joined up in 1914 as the Ulster Division, and suffered terrible losses in the Somme. The hospital was set up to care for its veterans. The present-day terrorist UVF expropriated the earlier name.

Restoring the balance

MY prediction a fortnight ago that Bryan Cartledge would be our next ambassador to Moscow was confirmed yesterday in a formal announcement from the Foreign Office.

The out-going ambassador, Sir Iain Sutherland, expects to leave his post in June and he speaks of his departure with typical dry Scottish humour.

"Perhaps it is time to leave," he told my colleague in Moscow, Nigel Wade. "After all it is the first time for many years that the British ambassador has been older than the General Secretary of the Communist Party."

Sir Iain is 59. The new Kremlin leader, Mikhail Gorbachev is 54, only three months older than Cartledge, who is 53.

Musical walls

A CERTAIN amount of rehanging has been going on at the National Portrait Gallery to accommodate its newest pictures. Not least is the lateral movement of the recently acquired portrait of three trades union leaders which yesterday gave way to a painting of three Cabinet secretaries.

The new picture by Royal Academician John Ward, shows Lord Trend, Lord Hunt and Sir Robert Armstrong, the present secretary of the Cabinet. I am told that it was at Sir Robert's instigation that Ward was allowed to work in the Cabinet Office to provide an authentic background.

Other personalities are on the move. Sebastian Coe has been hung in the 20th-century section and Bryan Organ's painting of Prince Charles has gone up one floor to the Royal landing to join the Princess of Wales.

High spirits

COMPETITORS in this summer's Cognac Air Rally in France will have an extra hazard to negotiate in completing the competition — a tasting test of the most famous local product.

Fortunately for those taking part in the competition at the Cognac Aero Club, whose president is Réné Martell, the head of the brandy house which bears his family name, the brandy test comes at the end of the flying. Suitably, too, the winner will receive his own weight in cognac as a prize.

Forbidden fruits

A READER was in a delicatessen in north Oxford the other day and noticed a board headed "Selection for Your Passover" which listed a number of seasonal and suitable delicacies.

Just then another customer entered the shop, studied the board intently for a moment, and then said to the assistant: "What I really fancy is a few slices of your cold roast pork."

Peep show

A READER reports that the brochure for the hotel he stayed in at Amalfi near Naples promises: "Suggestive views from every window."

PETERBOROUGH

PLANS FOR DISASTER RELIEF

SIR—Ten years ago, in the wake of the cyclone in Bangladesh and the East African famine, Hugh Hanning (March 28) and I were endeavouring, in our separate ways, to persuade United Nations, the international non-government organisations and the United Kingdom Government that disaster relief was most effectively and cost-effectively addressed through disaster preparedness.

Things have changed little for the better. The suffering has increased. Preparedness has not improved. Environments deteriorate. Social and economic systems are even more under threat.

My particular area of interest is in those forms of staff training for administrators and planners in disaster-prone developing countries which can lead to improved capabilities and standards relating to:

1—Analysis, forecasting and the planning processes related to disaster preparedness.

2—Crisis and logistics management.

3—Analysis of development strategies and projects against the dangers of increased levels of disaster preparedness.

These effectively reflect those points and criticisms made by Hugh Hanning of current situations. Nothing has yet been done.

Now, however, the Royal Military College of Science supported by the Cranfield Institute of Technology and our sister Faculty of Agricultural Engineering at Silsoe, Beds, are in the process of implementing such a programme.

This will carry out the research, develop appropriate training materials, mount staff training programmes where they are required in the developing countries and provide support to those staff colleges, universities and institutes of public administration in the Third World where such programmes will be developed.

The benefits of such programmes in comparison with their costs, for the mitigation of the suffering of victims, are immense. Their costs, in comparison with those of even minor relief programmes are insignificant.

The programme which we are now planning is budgeted at £150,000 a year. We are confident that the logic of our proposals, supported throughout by both hard economic arguments backed by the dangers of social and economic collapse, inherent in the disaster threat, and the fundamental needs, will attract the funding which we require.

The RMCS (Cranfield) is now in active collaboration and consultation with the Irian Institute of Technology in Bangkok and the Zimbabwe Institute of Management Development, both of whom are setting up similar programmes in co-ordination with our own.

In a visit to Geneva recently I found very great interest and support for our plans. Certainly there is an opportunity now for the United Kingdom to take a low-cost initiative which offers many benefits both to those who suffer and those providing relief.

A pound spent now in furthering disaster preparedness will be multiplied one hundred fold in the more effective deployment of resources in the event.

Boat paint and the health of an oyster

SIR—Just when small boat sailors thought they were keeping marine life entertained by painting the bottoms of their craft in a rainbow of pretty colours (report April 2) along comes the Department of the Environment to suggest that the Pacific oyster doesn't like it.

Might it be that this maligned mollusc, a stranger to these shores, just can't stomach our muddy, silted waters with their cocktail of industrial and agricultural chemicals? Or could it be that some of our oyster farmers, looking for a scapegoat for their own failures, are pointing the finger at the boat owner to settle past scores?

Tin-based paints are not just pretty. They are also the best to prevent marine growth which makes craft using them more efficient and seaworthy. Banning them will only make life harder for boat using fishermen and increase the risk to those who sail for pleasure.

All the facts

SIR—Lord Hailsham complains that some Press reports of court cases are misleading and incomplete (March 30).

One of his worries is that, because important details of mitigation are sometimes excluded, the public may be given the impression that a sentence is excessively lenient. That this impression is created is not always the fault of the reporter.

As a journalist who regularly covers courts I know that I, and many of my colleagues, are also worried that the public is not given the full facts of some cases, the reason being that reports written by probation officers, which have an important bearing on the sentence, are handed to the Bench and not read out in court.

There are sound, humane reasons why this should be so but I think it unfair to accuse journalists of creating a false impression when they may simply have reported what was said in open court.

Perhaps, when addressing magistrates, the Lord Chancellor should have taken the opportunity of suggesting that those on the Bench more frequently exercise their prerogative of explaining their reasons for passing a particular sentence.

Ticketing progress

SIR—In reply to Mr Bernard Glanville's letter about his preference for buying theatre tickets at the box office, not every member of the public wishes to make a special journey to buy theatre tickets in advance and a computerised system for the sale of tickets makes them easy of access.

For telephone transactions, the computerised system is not only faster and more efficient than any manual system, but row and seat number can be offered to the patron, before he has decided to purchase.

While the computerised system may break down, this is a rare occurrence, and of short duration, and our staff are trained to serve the patron manually.

Mr Glanville may prefer "the old and trustworthy ticket book system" but this point of view can be likened to only using horse-drawn transport in case the motor-car breaks down.

Early waves

SIR—I am now in my eighties. As an apprentice in the early 'twenties, I became excitingly interested in (as it was then known) wireless.

When I constructed a four-valve receiver for my father-in-law, he told me an interesting story, relating to the use of wireless on naval vessels. During the later part of the last century Senor Marconi wished to carry out tests with wireless telegraphy and, with the aid of the Admiralty arranged that a naval ship be sent into the Atlantic to receive signals transmitted by Marconi from Cornwall.

My father-in-law was a member of the crew of the ship in this experiment.

What the bishop said

SIR—Either the Bishop of Durham has been misquoted or he has got it wrong (April 1).

Though I was in the Navy, I am pretty sure the expression he was trying to recall went "nil carborundum," i.e. don't let 'em grind you down!

Manchester Airport as a gateway to the North

SIR—While appreciating the support you gave (leader, April 1) for the principles of airlines being able to serve Manchester whenever they perceive sufficient demand, I feel I must correct some of your misconceptions concerning the wider issue of future airports policy.

Manchester Airport, and indeed the whole North of England Regional Consortium, does not seek to set itself up as the "Third London Airport" by any forced diversion of genuine London-bound passengers.

Rather the aim of the Airport Authority is to end the needless, forced diversion of northern-bound travellers to the London system: for example, in 1983 94 per cent. of foreign tourists were forced to fly into the United Kingdom via the London airport system although 32 per cent. did not wish to visit London at all.

Think how much greater the regional penetration of the lucrative tourist market would be if it was made easier for them to fly direct to the regions.

Northern business travellers are increasingly rebelling against this forced diversion over London and using the European hubs such as Amsterdam which have enhanced transfer facilities.

It would surely be in the interests of the United Kingdom if this loss of traffic could be reversed by providing improved connections at Manchester, the better gateway to the North.

It is the needs of the consumers which must be taken into account and this leads the Airport Authority to the same conclusion as you that Singapore Airlines should be allowed to fly to Manchester.

It is in this way, by better satisfying regional demand, that Manchester Airport can contribute to relieving pressure in the South-East airport system, not by forced diversion of passengers, but by welcome facilitation of their direct flight from a catchment area of 20 million people.

Heathrow pressures

SIR—There is an unfortunate ambiguity in my letter concerning the continual growth of Heathrow as published (April 1). In my full letter I wrote that single plots were being sought at up to £100,000 each, this being for large, prime, residential plots. The figure of £400,000 an acre which you quoted should include all building land, including some industrial. Mea culpa.

Nonetheless the current figure for residential land of around £300,000 is bad enough and an indication of the pressures on us.

Animal suffering

SIR—The letter from Prof. N. M. Hancox (March 29) on the 1876 Cruelty to Animals Act implies that this act guarantees the avoidance of all unnecessary suffering (sic) in laboratory animals.

In fact, what constitutes "necessary" (and hence "unnecessary") suffering is a highly contentious issue. In addition, the Home Office itself has never defined suffering, and leaves such judgment to the experimenter.

A Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' report compiled in 1983, and submitted to the Home Office, showed that some experiments conducted within the law nevertheless led to levels of suffering which were unacceptable to the RSPCA and its scientific advisers.

Significantly, Prof. Hancox made no mention of impending Government legislation (a White Paper is imminent) which will replace the 1876 Act. The Government itself and the Home Office which administers the 1876 Act freely admit that existing controls are inadequate to meet modern demands and require tightening up. Had they not done so, the new proposals would never have come about. These include an entirely novel system of project licensing which is intended to exert control both over suffering and the purpose for which research is carried out.

'Greedy' farmers hurt countryside, claims Prince

By ROBERT BEDLOW Estates Correspondent

THE PRINCE OF WALES said yesterday that because of the greed of farmers, Britain had lost some of its most beautiful countryside.

He told a conference on future land use that 45 years of maximising production had led to butter mountains, milk lakes and surpluses of almost every major commodity.

The Prince, who as Duke of Cornwall is one of Britain's largest land owners and farmers, said: "Food surpluses have gained but the countryside and nation have been the losers."

He told the conference at Seale Hayne Agricultural College, Newton Abbot, Devon: "Fascinating places, wetlands, moorlands and hedgerows have been lost often in response to greed.

"It would be foolish not to remind ourselves that for many years times have been very good. Some of us, indeed, may have become a little profligate in our attitudes.

"In response to stimuli, we have come to look on the land as an almost endless source of increasing income, without too much regard to the old conventional view of giving back to the land."

Young generation

The Prince said that some types of farming, such as the livestock - based enterprises, were not doing too well. There had to be prospects for the younger generation and "belt-tightenin. resilience and determination are not enough."

He said: "There is a possibility of what, in the jaron, is called multiple job-holding, which makes actual farming as such part-time."

Farmers, particularly in the South West, were involved in tourism, leisure activities, light industry and forestry, and there were possibilities of part-time employment in the service industries.

The Prince added: "Farmers in the UK are traditionally very single-minded and tend to regard part-time farmers as people who have failed to make a living from farming. I believe that this is an attitude which should be changed."

Mr Simon Gourlay, deputy president of the National Farmers' Union said: "To say we have been greedy and not giving back to the countryside is fundamentally incorrect.

"Farmers have been putting consistently more into the land than they have been taking out, and on that basis it has led to higher productivity which has been to the nation's benefit."

He said that the Prince had acknowledged that he had been part of the system himself. Mr Gourlay added: "We are reacting to the situation. We really want to farm in a way that makes the countryside acceptable to all groups."

PLANNING PLEA

Agriculture's future

OUR ESTATES CORRESPONDENT writes: Mr Peter Giffard, president of the Country Landowners' Association, yesterday urged the Government to produce a White Paper on the future of agriculture in Britain.

Speaking at the Council for the Protection of Rural England in Staffordshire he said: "The future of agriculture is an integral part of rural life, but with costs rising and prices falling we need help."

The Government should create the right climate for long-term decisions to be made and to encourage young men into an industry

The future of the Wildlife and Countryside Act was in jeopardy, he said, because of the "dilatory way" the Environment Department had treated proposed amendments to the Act aimed at closing loopholes in the system of approving Sites of Special Scientific Interest.

BRONZE TRIBUTE TO OLIVIER

Lord Olivier, founding director of Chichester Festival Theatre, is to have a bronze relief from actors in both Britain and America mounted in his honour at the theatre.

The bronze, depicting 28 of Olivier's multiple acting faces, will be unveiled at the theatre on May 5. It is a gift from Equity, Actors Equity and the American Federation of Television and Radio Actors.

FARM CARE POLICY DEFENDED

By Our Estates Correspondent

THE Govenment's farming and conservation policy was strongly defended yesterday by Mr Jenkin, Environment Secretary, who said that more Common Market subsidies should be directed to farmers who preserve the countryside.

But he said that a balance had to be achieved "between those who seek change and improve the economy and those who resist in order to protect our heritage."

Writing in the CONSERVATION REVIEW, he said: "We want farmers to preserve hedgerows, to use fewer insecticides and chemical fertilisers but we still take cheap food for granted.

"We might be distressed at the environmental damage caused by the construction of a reservoir yet every year we use more water in our homes.

"We demand new roads to take traffic out of towns and villages then we complain about the intrusion of motorways into the countryside."

£64bn con

Prof. David Bellamy, university lecturer speaking before the CONSERVATION REVIEW and television botanist said that while 60 to 65 per cent. of farmers were good at conservation, the rest had "conned" the Government and the E E C out of £64 billion.

Farmers had accused others of living off social security, Mr Bellamy said but "the wages to buy their Range Rovers and tractors have come mainly from us, the taxpayers. They are the real paupers because they are dependent on national relief."

He added: "If I was a farmer I would be pretty proud that I had conned £64,000 million out of the Government, but I would be very ashamed that I had put half the farmers and half the farmworkers off the land."

The move to larger farms had decimated the countryside and led to a rationalisation of the farmers and workforce.

He said: "People have to be persuaded to stand up for their rights and demand a beautiful countryside which is their heritage, and a decent place to live in, and no one has the right to take this away from them."

The farming revolution of the last 20 years had alienated people from the countryside. Where there used to be hedgerows and birds and places to walk, today all one saw was barbed wire.

BYPASS PROTEST VICTORY

By Our Political Staff

CONSERVATIONISTS won a victory yesterday when a joint committee of both Houses of Parliament upheld objections against the officially-preferred route for the planned Okehampton bypass, which would have cut through Dartmoor National Park.

By four votes to two the committee rejected the southern route approved by a Government inspector and called for the road to pass to the north of the town.

It is nw up to Mr Ridley, Transport Secretary, to decide whether to modify the plan to meet the committee's wishes or wheher to push through compulsory purchase orders to take the road along the officially-preferred route.

Intense controversy

The by-pass issue has aroused intense controversy ot Westminster, both because of disagreement between MPs who want the road built quickly and those with doubts over the route and because of arguments over procedure.

Having lost their case at the public inquiry, the conservationists exercised the rarely-used right to petition a jont committee of both Houses against implementing the coampulsory purchase orders.

*This enraged MPs for far-*West constituencies who were anxious to see work on the road begun after years of delay. Sir Peter Mills, Conservative MP for Devon West and Torridge, tabled with Government backing a Commons motion which would have short-circuited the process.

This prompted a backlash from conservationist MPs, one of whom, Mr Anthony Steen (C, South Hams), discovered that the 1945 Labour government had promised that petitioners to a joint committee would never be overridden by the Commons.

The motion was withdrawn and yesterday the committee concluded that the northern *route was a "reasonable alter*native"

Race-row headmaster is suspended

By JOHN IZBICKI Education Correspondent

A meeting of Drummond Middle School governors is to be called to "consider his future as a head teacher."

Yesterday's decision, delivered by hand to Mr Honeyford's home at Prestwich, Greater Manchester, brings to a head the year-long campaign waged against him after an article he had written in the Right-wing Salisbury Review.

Mr Honeyford, father of two, passed the news on to his union, the National Association of Head Teachers, which decided immediately to put the matter into the hands of lawyers and brief a barrister to defend him.

Mr Eric Pickles, Bradford education committee chairman, said this was by no means the end of the Honeyford saga.

"This treatment of Mr Honeyford will be a stain on the record of Bradford council as an employer. That stain cannot now be removed," he said.

Mr Pickles, a Conservative councillor, said the Tories on the schools' subcommittee, which had put the headmaster through a six-hour hearing last month, had voted against the motion expressing no confidence in him as a headmaster, swung the "hung" committee to an eight votes to seven decision against Mr Honeyford.

"The sub-committee should not have used a man's career as a political football," Mr Pickles said.

Mr David Hart, the teachers' union general secretary and its former solicitor, is going to Bradford today to see Mr Honeyford and other interested parties. "We shall certainly defend him and shall be briefing a barrister."

Mr Honeyford will be suspended on full pay. A headmaster at the top of a Group 7 school in a special priority area, he will be on a salary that exceeds £15,000 a year.

Mr Marcus Fox, Conservative member for Shipley, voiced his anger and disgust at yesterday's development and said he would call for a full debate in the House of Commons.

Mr Honeyford has always maintained that he is no racist. His SALISBURY REVIEW article and subsequent articles in other journals, made a number of statements on multi-racial education.

They included the claim that English children as well as English as a language suffered when the overwhelming majority of children in a school came from ethnic minority home backgrounds. Drummond's 550 boys and girls are 90 per cent. Asian.

MAN DIED DRUNK ON WATER

A FORMER inmate of Rampton hospital drank himself to death with water, an inquest heard yesterday.

RICHARD COX, 31, drank gallons every day. He was once seen to gulp 15 half-pint glasses in succession.

He insisted it was good for his kidneys.

Dr JOHN BALL, a pathologist, told the Great Yarmouth inquest that a post mortem showed severe excess fluid in the brain tissues, fluid in the lungs, and the stomach greatly dilated and filled with fluid.

Death was due to water intoxication.

Only 100 such cases had been recorded worldwide. When water entered the brain tissues, the effect was similar to drunkenness.

A verdict of misadventure was returned on Mr Cox who lived in a residential home at Walpole Road, Great Yarmouth.

After the hearing a medical specialist said: "vast quantities of water can dilute the blood, overwhelm the kidneys and lower the salts in the blood. Patients can become drowsy and die.

"People involved regularly drink 35 or 40 pints a day. Anyone drinking up to eight a day isn't at risk."

BEER OUTPUT DOWN

Beer production fell by more than nine per cent. in February compared with a year earlier, the Brewers' Society said yesterday.

Farm monks cleared of cruelty

By GUY RAIS

ROMAN CATHOLIC monks who raised calves for export to Europe as veal were cleared by two High Court judges yesterday of cruelty ill-treating the animals.

But a spokesman for the monks said "hate" mail could lead them to take a decision about the farm's future.

Lord Justice STEPHEN BROWN, sitting with Mr Justice STOCKER in the Queen's Bench Divisional Court, rejected an appeal by an animal rights group against a magistrate's decision in March last year that the calves had not been caused unnecessary suffering.

Mr PETER ROBERTS, a director of Compassion in World Farming, claimed that the calves on Gerston Farm, Storrington, West Sussex, run by the Norbertine White Canons were kept in conditions which caused the animals distress.

Chains and slats

He claimed the calves were chained in pens which were too small, tethered by a chain round their necks, with only hard, wooden slats to stand on and no roughage in their food.

But magistrates at Steyning, Sussex, found the farm manager, Mr LUIGI RUGGIERIO, not guilty of nine charges under the 1911 Protection of Animals Act and the 1968 Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act.

Lord Justice STEPHEN BROWN said the case was an attack on intensive farming.

But experts, including those from the RSPCA who had inspected the farm, said no unnecessary suffering or distress was caused.

Both judges agreed that the magistrates had not erred in law, dismissed the appeal and ordered Mr Roberts to pay the estimate £10,000 costs of the hearing.

After the hearing Father Joye of the White Canons, said: "We hope this is the end of the matter. However, recent hate mail we have received lead us to believe this will not be so.

"The last year has been hell for our parishioners. A decision will be taken soon about the future of the farm and whether to dispose of it or alter its purpose.

"It will not be because we have abandoned our principles, but because we have compassion for our parishioners."

PIE EYED

Saxby Brothers, the pork pie manufacturers, of Wellingborough, Northants, are employing a hypnotist to help choose the right calibre of employee. "We have made some mistakes in the past," a spokesman said yesterday.

National park plan on Broads

By JOHN SHAW

THE special character of the Norfolk Broads is to be protected in a Parliamentary Bill promoted by Norfolk County Council and seven other local authorities in East Anglia.

The region, a 120-mile river network attracting thousands of visitors, would be accorded status equivalent to a national park following recommendations by the Countryside Commission in February last year.

But the scheme ran into almost immediate opposition from the Great Yarmouth Port and Haven Commissioners who control much of the river navigation. They would be required to give up their powers which go back 300 years.

Details of the draft Bill were released by the local authorities at County Hall, Norwich, yesterday. The area would be administered by a new and more powerful Broads Authority.

Mr Richard Phelan, a county councillor and member of the commissioners, said they were "rock-solid against it. This new organisation has to hold the balance between conservation and recreation in everybody's interest.

"But the Royal Yachting Association, private yachtsmen and commercial boat owners, believe it might lead to some waterways being closed in the interest of conservation.

"They are also worried that the number of boats might be restricted, and that speed limits could be controlled. The wash from some of these craft causes erosion damage

Mr Phelan, 64, said: "That's what htey feel it comes down to, and they are against it. I don't think it's true, but I feel it's going to cause some awful problems.

The new authority will not have the powers to restrict navigation permanently. It is interested in recreational uses for the area."

Mr John Alston, chairman of the steering group promoting the Bill, said: "I think the new organisation, with greater powers than at present, will preserve the unique character of this area.

WITH few investors wishing to take up new positions ahead of the Easter holiday, London stock markets were mainly dominated by small sellers yesterday. Sentiment in blue chip industrials was disturbed by signs that the dollar could be coming under renewed pressure and the shares of companies with big export business were again on offer, hence losses in Imperial Chemical Industries, 7 down at 762p, Glaxo 1⅛ lower at £10¾ and Jaguar 6 easier at 297p.

Another dull feature in the leaders was Blue Circle Industries, which ended 28 down at 488p as the market expressed uncertainty about the company's wisdom in paying $145 million to acquire Atlantic Cement.

These and other smaller losses brought reactions in the main market indices, the "30" index closing 12·9 lower at 956·5 and the "100" index 12 down at 1274·8.

Tax-loss selling was a contributory factor in the overall dull performance, with stockbrokers again reminding their clients that all business for the old financial year must be completed by 3.30 p.m. today.

It was noticeable that recent market casualties such as Burnett & Hallamshire, which has fallen from grace against the background of worries about the Californian property interests, were under some pressure. Burnett shares were finally 10p down at 65p, a far cry from their 1984/85 peak of 205p.

Although gilt-edged dealers expressed some disappointment with the ¼-point cuts in base rates from Barclays Bank and Midland Bank, there was no pressure on government securities, but quotations were easier for choice in the absence of investment interest. Late prices were often £⅛ lower than official closing levels.

Selling of Barclays Bank rights set the tone in the clearers; Barclays "old" fell 12 to 362p, while the "new" finished 13 lower at 210p premium. National Westminster reacted 15 to 612p, Lloyds 5 to 527p and Midland 3 to 324p.

Despite the general gloom, there were fairly numerous bright features on company news and other special factors. The results from Cookson Group exceeded best expectations and the shares jumped 65p to 640p, while other good results encouraged Blockleys, 28 higher at 568p, and Wm Morrison Supermarkets, 20 up at 240p, the later also reflecting a proposed 100 p.c. scrip issue.

On the takeover front, J H & B Jackson closed unchanged at 120p, after touching 125p on the revised terms from Williams Holdings. Thos. Robinson, in which Jackson owns a stake, advanced 11 to 65p on hopes of follow-through bid developments.

Ocean Transport were 1p firmer at 190p, after 194p, following the announcement that P & O has a 8·03 p.c. stake in the company; speculators were suggesting that P & O will make a full-scale bid in due course. P & O Dfd, also depressed by conditions in the leaders, were 10 off at 541p.

Further consideration of the forthcoming Government offer of shares made for dullness in British Aerospace, which reacted 20 to 413p. British Telecom again saw offerings from small shareholders and eased 2p to 141p, while losses of about 6p were sustained by B T R, at 684p, Hanson Trust, at 204p, Beecham Group, at 365p, and Trusthouse Forte, at 154p.

B A T Industries, resisting the downward trend, met some bargain hunting at 340p, a rise of 7p, while buyers were also nibbling in Grand Metropolitan, at 286p. Awaiting the outcome of the important negotiations for a helicopter contract from India, Westland moved irregularly around the 105p level.

The day's three newcomers all suffered disappointing debuts. The new shares of Blagden Industries were a particular casualty and ended at 113p, after 100p, compared with the tender striking price of 130p. Sintrom were 170p, against the tender price of 175p, while Shorrock, offered at 100p, opened and closed at 92p.

Allied Textile, which jumped 140p to 570p on Tuesday following the surprise takeover offer from London & Midland Industrials, were quoted ex the previously announced one-for ten scrip issue and ended 8 easier at 510p: dealers were again suggesting that L M I will meet substantial opposition on its bid terms. Still reflecting the Dutch deal, Valin Pollen advanced 25 more to 505p.

What seemed to be fairly satisfactory company statements failed to help Amec, 10 down at 238p. Higgs & Hill, 4 off at 315p, Associated British Ports, also 4 easier at 246p, and Glywed, 1 lower at 204p. There was disappointment with the results from Portals and the shares reacted 30 to 540p in a thin and sensitive market, while profit-taking after Tuesday's good figures left Eastern Produce 21 down at 362p.

Beter price levels were seen in Weir Group, at 57p, Albert Martin, at 65p, Beauford Group, at 74p, and Senior Engineering, at 25½p, all reflecting satisfactory results.

There was a sudden flurry of interest on London & Northern Securities, 6½ better at 87p, while Consultants (Computer & Financial) gained 12 to 62p and J Wilkes 10 to 265p.

Cable & Wireless were another 10 higher at 525p, after 530p, on hopes of a major Chinese contract. Eurotherm were again in demand and closed 8 better at 365p, after 368p, but tax-loss selling affected Racal Electronics, 10 down at 196p, and C P U Computers, 7 lower at 45p.

Following the respective results, Guardian Royal Exchange ended 28 down at 665p and Sun Alliance 14 lower at 465p, but London & Manchester were 4 firmer at 729p. Elsewhere in the insurance sector, takeover speculators were taking profits in Commercial Union, which slipped to 208p before closing 3 easier at 211p.

Among foods, Tesco responded to some solid investment demand to close 6 higher at 255p, while other firm spots included Hillards, at 334p, Bassett Foods (an old favourite in the takeover stakes), at 175p and J Sainsbury, at 322p.

Foster Brothers rose to 220p on news that the Sears takeover offer was not to be referred to the Monopolies Commission before closing 8 better at 218p. Empire Stores hardened afresh to 104p on Tuesday's satisfactory results, but Marks & Spencer eased to 138p and Woolworth to 775p.

In the oil sector, Lasmo held the stage following the results and the rights issue announcement and closed 15 down at 330p, after 328p. British Petroleum eased 5 to 545p and Tricentrol 3 to 233p, but Ultramar were the turn better at 245p. Falcon Resources were 15 down at 435p.

Tailpiece

A GOOD illustration of the importance of a wide spread of business interests in uncertain times was provided by the recent results from Grampian Holdings. Despite the effects of the miners' strike on the transport division, Grampian was able to increase pre-tax profits by nearly 19 p.c. to £1·72 million in 1984.

Good performances by retail and pharmaceuticals and a turnround in sporting goods certainly took the sting out of the sharp reduction in profits experienced by the transport and construction interests. A return to the peak profits of 1976 (£2·7 million) may be delayed until 1986, but earnings are now of better quality, with steady growth on the cards for all divisions in the current year.

The feeling is that profits will emerge at around £2·5 million, indicating a prospective price/earnings ratio of 6. The shares look worthy of support at 118p.

Pound bogged down after early gains

By CLIFFORD GERMAN

THE approaching long Easter weekend made markets highly nervous and traders reluctant to take exposed positions yesterday.

The pound lost almost all its early gains against dollars and Continental currencies to close just 38 points better on balance at $1·2120, and the belated and apparently reluctant decision by Barclays Bank followed by the Midland, to cut interest rates by only a token ¼ p.c. added to the uncertainty.

Sterling, which improved on overnight gains at first, later drifted gradually down to close two cents down on its best levels against the dollar. The pound also lost early gains on Continental currencies and the effective sterling index closed just 02 better on balance at 77·1 after opening at 77·9 p.c.

Earlier the Bank of England had provided generous help to the London discount market to ease a shortage initially estimated at £1·25 billion, buying £217 million worth of bills outright and injecting £1,041 million through sale and repurchase agreements maturing on April 29 and May 1 and 2 at 12¾ p.c.

Barclays cut its base lending rate to 13¼ p.c. soon after midday, leaving it ¼ p.c. above the level set by National Westminster and Lloyds last week. Barclays' seven-day deposit account is also reduced by ¼ p.c. to 10¼ p.c. gross, also ¼ p.c. above the others. Midland Bank, which had also deferred a decision last week, then fell into line with Barclays.

Barclays was reluctant to move last week and appears now to have made a token gesture in response to urging from the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Bank of England's decision to move its own dealing rates into line with the lower base rates last week.

But conditions in the London money markets have not changed significantly since last week. sterling is no stronger and the recent upward adjust*ment in National Savings* and building society interest rates makes the banks cautious about competition.

Barclays and Midland are also concerned about the strong demand for bank credit, which rose by 4½ p.c. in the three months to February 20 in spite of the sharp rise in base rates in the last three weeks of the period. Total sterling lending to the private sector after adjustments rose by £5·35 billion, around £200 million more than in the previous quarter.

Lending to the chemicals and, electrical engineering industries, wholesale distribution, leasing and financing sectors all rose by more than 10 p.c. Farming, food, drink and tobacco and other retail distribution sectors paid off debt during the quarter.

Foreign currency lending to British residents also rose during a period when sterling was weakening against the dollar and Continental currencies.

TWO LINKED preoccupations run through the latest Bank of England QUARTERLY BULLETIN published yesterday — monetary control and inflation.

The Bank more or less admits that it got things wrong late last year in the statistical fog surrounding the British Telecom issue. In the end it was forced to agree with the markets as sterling plummeted and money rates rose sharply and accept that maybe financial conditions had been looser than thought or planned.

The Governor made it clear on Monday, in evidence to the Commons Treasury Select Committee, that a continuing strong pound would provide a basis for interest rate cuts even if the money supply was running at the top, rather than well within, its target range. A sterling index rate of between 75 and 80 would certainly suggest that the current level of interest rates was higher than necessary to keep downward pressure on inflation.

But the Bank, unlike the Treasury, is clearly jittery about what is happening to bank lending and the problems this is causing for monetary control. Bank lending has accelerated sharply since last summer, the BULLETIN says, for reasons not wholly clear. Over the past six months lending has risen at an annual rate of 20 p.c., more than twice the target path for the money supply over the coming year.

The Bank is hoping that some of the underlying factors are reversible, including borrowing to finance imports to beat the accelerated V A T payments at the ports and the holding back of equity issues until after the British Telecom flotation. In addition bank lending should be dampened to some extent by the current high levels of interest rates, and by the Budget proposals to facilitate short-term company debenture issues.

But with an £8 billion a year balancing item of unidentified company transactions, even the Bank is not wholly clear why corporate borrowing is so buoyant.

Rapid growth of bank lending implies — if money targets are to be met — rapid growth of the Bank's already massive holding of bills, which is already posing severe problems in managing the short-term money markets. The BULLETIN is silent on this problem, but it is likely that some change in procedure will be announced later this year.

CITY COMMENT

Lending surge causes jitters at the Bank

BAe seeking a balance

A SOPHISTICATED private investor is one who is already involved in Ordinary shares and is an avid reader of the financial Press. That at least is Britain's Aerospace's definition.

The company and Her Majesty's Government have made it quite clear that the forthcoming issue of British Aerospace shares is not aimed at the same market as was the British Telecom issue.

Television advertising is to play no part in marketing BAe's pro*posed offer for sale and rights issue*, which should together bring in around £600 million gross. The company on its own admission, has no immediate need of extra funds.

That looks an intelligent cost saving. Demand for BAe shares is already high and has increased diately prior to the preliminary *results for 1984 last week. Imme*diately prior to the premilinary announcement the shares were selling at 380p each, but even after losing 20p in a dull market yesterday they closed at 415p.

The dummy prospectus published a month ahead of the flotation — a straight steal from the British Telecom marketing strategy — carried no useful investment information that was not in last week's statement.

But it has emphasised that foreign ownership of shares will continue to be restricted, that sub-underwriting will not be necessary.

At the last accounts date only 4·85 p.c. of shareholders were classified as individuals, sophisticated or otherwise, so there is plenty of scope for an increase on that score.

What BAe is really looking for is a large number of private and institutional investors prepared to stay with the shares over the long term. The absence of any solid indication of current year prospects could deter many short-term punters, but the market is looking for between £145 and £150 million pre-tax for 1985, which drops the prospective earnings multiple to a modest six times.

Assuming the group floats its new shares on a 10 p.c. discount, that rating will become even more attractive, and it could attract a large number of very special sophisticated investors, often referred to as "stags."

Cold shoulder all round

THE sun may have been shining in the City yesterday, but three companies discovered that it was still possible to get a frosty reception for a market debut.

Most intriguing of the trio of new issue flops was that of Blagden Industries which was aiming to raise at least £16·7 million through an extraordinary complex two-tier tender scheme. With the offer for sale of a total 14·95 million shares oversubscribed around eight times, the striking price was set at 150p. This led to considerable consternation yesterday when dealings commenced and the price fell at one point to 100p before recovering to close at 115p. Investors who had paid 130p were not best pleased, although Rothschilds, which devised the ingenious tender scheme, was insistent that the disappointing reaction was due to unusual market conditions.

The popular market theory that the scheme was simply too ingenious for its own good has been strenuously denied by the merchant bank.

Another tender offer, this time of 2·4 million shares by computer peripherals group Sintrom, was also a victim of rampant market unenthusiasm. The issue was oversubscribed — and the striking placed at 175p, but trading started at a lowly 170p and stayed there. This time the tender was a relatively straightforward affair and, with successful operations of this kind such as last month's offer for sale by estate agents Mann & Co in evidence, it seems unlikely that it was simply the tender approach which caused the flop.

Perhaps the reason lay more in the reservations on investment grounds as expressed by our own Questor column in March.

But it wasn't only tender offers that got the cold shoulder yesterday. The more conventional £6·5 million offer for sale by security systems group Shorrock led to the shares closing at 92p against the offer price of 100p. That reaction seems to reflect some disenchantment with the security business rather than any particular prejudice against Shorrock itself, together with the general feeling in the market yesterday that, whatever anyone was selling, very few people felt like buying it.

Sun Alliance and GRE raise payouts

TWO MAJOR composites have sugared the pill of disappointing annual results with higher-than-expected dividends.

Guardian Royal Exchange's pre-tax profits for 1984 fell from £122m to £92·2m and Sun Alliance's from £73·4m to £47·6m.

The latter's included an exceptional post-acquisition profit of £15·1m on the termination of the Phoenix's liabilities on its withdrawal from the Continental Corporation's United States pool.

GRE is lifting the dividend total from 23p to 26p with a 17·5p final on July 3, while Sun Alliance is paying a 9·75p final on July 5 for a 15·5p (14p) total.

Both reported growth in premium income—GRE's up 19 p.c. in sterling terms, 10 p.c. after currency fluctuations, and Sun Alliance's up 15·5 p.c. or 7·4 p.c. after currency changes.

Underwriting losses of the former were £111m (£63·5m) while the latter's were £199m (£126m).

Life assurance group London & Manchester, meanwhile, reports attributable profits of £5·79m against £4·68m for 1984. The dividend goes up from 16·45p to 19·81p, a 14p final being payable May 30.

Lasmo £67m rights

LONDON & SCOTTISH Marine *Oil (Lasmo) is making a one-for-*four rights issue at 285p a share to raise a net £67·3m, which will be used to support the group's active development programme.

It plans to participate in 250 exploration, appraisal and development wells and is now involved in 10 countries worldwide.

For the year ended Dec. 31 Lasmo reports a net profit of £31·6m against £24·9m. Profits were helped, in part, by the June production from the Lalang oil field, Malacca Straits, and increased production from the Beatrice oilfield.

The final dividend rises from 7p to 7·7p a share, payable May 22, making 12·2p (11·5p) for the year.

Questor—P24

Cookson at £55m

COOKSON GROUP*, the diversified chemicals and paints concern, reports pre-tax profits of £55·8m for the year ended December compared with £21·7m on sales of £815·2m (£547m). There is to be a one-for-one scrip issue.

The final dividend rises from 6·5p to 8·25p a share, payable July 2, making 12·5p (10·2p) for the year.

Questor—P24

Amec ahead

CONSTRUCTION group Amec has raised its 1984 pre-tax profits from £26·1m to £27·1m on turnover reduced from £715m to £687m. The final dividend is to be increased from 6·5p net to 7p, payable July 1, for a total of 11p against 10p.

Compagnie Francaise de Television had claimed that the system used in Britain infringed their patent.

Cater purchase

CATER Allen Holdings, the discount house, is buying an interest in Lloyd's of London. It is paying £2·4 million for Three Quays Underwriting Management, a Lloyd's underwriting agency in the Sedgwick group. Three Quays manages one of the largest non-marine syndicates at Lloyd's.

Logan for Montagu

MIDLAND Bank's merchant banking subsidiary Samuel Montagu yesterday announced the appointment of Robert Logan as its new group chief executive following the abrupt departure last December of Staffan Gadd.

Mr Logan, until recently group chief executive at Grindlays Bank, is also to join the group executive committee of Midland Bank in what is seen as a move to bring Montagu into the Midland fold.

Ocean hits peak on interest from P&O

By JOHN RUDOFSKY

OCEAN Transport and Trading shares hit a new peak of 190p yesterday as Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation emerged with a stake of just over 8 p.c. in the group, half the forecast holding.

The shares have risen from lower than 150p this year in anticipation of the interest shown in the company by P & O chairman Sir Jeffrey Sterling. The business is now valued at £215 million on the stock market.

It is believed Sir Jeffrey's real target is not so much Ocean Transport itself, but Ocean's biggest profits source, its 33 p.c.-owned Associate Overseas Containers.

Overseas Containers (OCL) is the consortium group owned by P & O (48 p.c.), Ocean Transport and British & Commonwealth (20 p.c.). Its con*tainer line operations enjoyed a* particularly good time last year, especially on Far East routes. Results were also boosted by exchange gains.

P. & O. now eyes O C L and might win control either by bidding outright for Ocean Transport or via another bidder for Ocean Transport emerging who would have to offer its stake first to the two remaining consortium members. Either way Sir Jeffrey, who is chairman of the consortium takes control.

Yesterday P & O declined to comment in detail on the situation, but described its 8 p.c. Ocean Transport stake as "a trade investment."

Most of the shares were bought some time ago by Sir Jeffrey's Sterling Guarantee Trust, which was recently merged into P & O. The remaining shares have come from recent purchases, but the stake as a whole has cost considerably less than its current market value.

ICI setback on backdating tax parity

IMPERIAL Chemical Industries yesterday suffered a setback in its efforts to get tax parity with Shell, Esso and British Petroleum when a High Court judge ruled that a decision in the company's favour could not be backdated.

Two months ago Mr Justice Woolff ruled that the Inland Revenue had acted unlawfully in the way tax had been assessed on ethane gas to help Shell-Esso build a petrochemical complex at Mossmorran, Fife, and B P to expand its Grangemouth operations.

But the judge yesterday refused to make the ruling retrospective or allow an I C I appeal against his decision that the company could not have access to documents relating to the Shell, Esso and B P cases.

I C I has warned that its Wilton complex on Teesside is in jeopardy, saying it will be at a competitive disadvantage because of the tax concessions.

Engineering sector looks for recovery

A CONTINUED recovery in engineering, largely on the back of buoyant exports, into next year is forecast in a report out today.

The electrical and instrument sector of the business will continue to grow at a faster rate than the mechanical side, *according to the latest predic*tions in Engineering Short Term Trends, produced by the Engineering Employers Federation for a working party of employers, trade unionists and civil servants.

The report shows that the industry's recovery has slowed since the middle of last year but is now set to pick up again.

Forecasts for sales volume growth in the two years up to the second quarter of next year are 11 p.c. for industry overall, 6 p.c. for mechanical, 13 p.c. for electrical, 5 p.c. for home sales and 26 p.c. for export business.

Tighter controls on bank balance sheets

By ANNE SEGALL

THE Bank of England is to tighten its controls over the off balance sheet business of British banks. It comes against a background of mounting concern over the boom in new forms of banking activity for which banks may not be setting aside enough capital in case of loss.

The Bank said yesterday that similar moves are under way in other countries after a series of discussions by banking supervisors from all over the world.

In a letter to all British banks, the Bank of England explains its concern at the growth in banking activities which do not show up on the balance sheet and which may not be taken into account when the authorities review the liquidity and capital adequacy of institutions.

The Bank believes that this lack of capital constraint may also have led to banks engaging in off balance sheet activities "which do not properly reflect the risks involved."

The type of activity which has aroused "particular concern" is the provision of note issuance facilities and revolving underwriting facilities. Instead of making a straight loan, banks promise customers to provide them with money when thei rown attempts to raise funds directly by issuing notes fail.

Until the bank is called on to fulfil its promise, the existence of such contingent liabilities may not even be reflected in its accounts.

The Bank says it has been watching the explosive growth in these new forms of banking with concern for some time before yesterday's decision to pounce. It estimates that banks have done roughly $15 billion worth of note issuance and revolving underwriting business altogether, most of it from London.

From now on, the Bank says all such business will have to be treated as a contingent liability in the accounts of banks *and will be taken into considera*tion when supervisors calculate the risk asset ratios of individual institutions.

Banking worries upset Wall Street

Wall Street's attention turned to Washington yesterday where lawmakers began to grapple with problems in the American securities market and banking industry.

The activity in Washington served to re-ignite fears over the health of the banking system and the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell sharply. The Dow was off 7 points at 1259·19 an hour before the close.

In the wake of the Ohio building society crisis, Congressional attention has focused on the volatile and currently unregulated government securities market. It was the collapse of a government securities firm that led to the run on Ohio's savings and loans and forced the emergency closure a fortnight ago.

Securities and Exchange Commissioner John Shad yesterday told congress that his agency has begun a complete review of the government's role in regulating the highly specu*lative government securities* market.

Lloyds lines up Royal Bank sale

seek a buyer for its entire 21·34 p.c. stake in Royal Bank of Scotland instead of simply reducing its stake to the 16·4 p.c. level demanded by the Office of Fair Trading last summer

Sale of the Royal Bank stake would bring in £166 million at yesterday's price of 278p a share. But City experts believe Lloyds could sell above the market price

Standard Chartered has also decided to reduce its investment in Stanbic, its South African subsidiary, from 50·5 to 41·9 p.c.,

Ports dividend despite loss

ASSOCIATED BRITISH PORTS is maintaining dividends and is bullish for the current year despite a £6·4 million 19x4 loss on turnover of 138·2 million shown yesterday due to strikes and severance costs. Pre-tax profits were £14·5 million in 1983 on turnover of 154·3 million.

*rade is coming back fast fol*lowing ending of the pit strike, said chairman Keith Stuart. And a tax credit reduces actual losses to £700,000.

A B P has shed 1,600 surplus staff in the 15 months just ended, taking all the 8·6 million redundancy costs into the 1984 accounts. It cuts the wage bill by at least £12 million in a normal year.

Another £2 million a year is being saved by replacing its own police with commercial security guards. And Southampton is now competitive with Felixstowe after a long dispute

So the final dividend is held at 5·5p, making an unchanged 8·5p for the full year, payable May 28.

Dock strikes and loss of coal traffic hit most of its ports, but the extra container-berth dispute made things worse at Southampton which went from an operating profit of £2·5 million to a loss of £6·3 million.

Bids sought for Swan Hunter

TAKEOVER bids for the Swan Hunter shipyards on Tyneside were invited by British Shipbuilders yesterday via Lazard Brothers merchant bank.

It comes within days of G E C buying the Yarrow shipyard on the Clyde in a deal worth £34 million to British Shipbuilders.

Swan Hunter is a less attrac*tive prospect, despite having* some naval work. While Yarrow has been a consistent profit-maker, Swan Hunter showed trading losses of more than £45 million over the last two years.

Closing date for bids is May 31.

Sturla deficiency put at over £11m

THE full scope of the financial disaster at Sturls Holdings was revealed yesterday at a meeting of shareholders called to place the finance group in voluntary liquidation. The total estimated deficiency was given as just over £11 million, with the final straw proving to be a VAT liability of more than £1 million.

A winding-up petition from Customs and Excise put paid to last-minute efforts to save the company.

Accountant ePter Phillips, of Messrs Arthur Andersen who were called inby the two-man Sturla board only a month ago described the events since April 1982 when former chairman Robert night reported, just prior to the completion of a £1·7 million rights issue, that the company was "on target" to meet its forecast profits of £1·2 million for that year.

The first indication that anything was wrong was in October 1982, when a bank creditor (Bremar Holdings, itself now in liquidation) presented a bill of exchange for £250,000 which the company was unable to meet.

Mr Knight told the board in 1982 that he was negotiating new funding and had arranged the receipt of £9·8 million worth of J. C. Penney zero*rated bonds.*

Mr Phillips added that, since criminal charges have since been brought in connection with this, he could say no more apart from the fact that "in November 1982 the company

Longman pays £18m for Pitman

THE Pitman training, publishing and examination business is being broken up. Longman Holdings, part of Pearson, is paying £18 million for the profitable publishing and examinations side.

Shareholders will get £12·5 million and the balance goes to pay off preference shares and other liabilities.

But Mark Pitman is the one member of the family who does not want to cash in. He will *take over the loss-making short*hand training side of the business he has run for the last three years.

WESSANEN

1984 RESULTS	1984	1983
Sales (Dfl m)	4,136	3,588
Profit before taxation (Dfl m)	90.6	76.9
Net profit after taxation and before extraordinary items (Dfl m)	48.1	38.7
Net profit after taxation and extraordinary items (Dfl m)	48.1	36.8
Earnings per Ordinary share (Dfl)	16.70	15.39
Dividends per Ordinary share (Dfl)	6.80	6.20

For Wessanen, 1984 was a year of continued growth. Sales passed the Dfl. 4 billion mark. Net profit rose by more than 30 per cent, and the forecast made at the time of the placing in London in October 1984 was exceeded. All the divisions of the Group contributed to this very satisfactory result. Earnings per Ordinary share increased by over 8 per cent, after taking into account the placings of Bearer Depositary Receipts representing new Ordinary shares in November 1983 and November 1984.

The proposed final dividend is Dfl. 4.60 per Ordinary share, which is payable in cash or, at the shareholder's option, Dfl. 0.40 in cash and Dfl. 0.60 nominal in Ordinary shares.

Copies of the 1984 Annual Report are available in the United Kingdom at the offices of Morgan Grenfell & Co. Limited, New Issues Department, 21 Austin Friars, London EC2N 2HB.

The Wessanen Group

Established in the Netherlands in 1765, Wessanen is now one of Europe's largest food manufacturing groups. The group has a philosophy of decentralised management, and is currently organised into six autonomous divisions: edible oils and fats, animal feeds, flour, meat products, dairy products and US consumer food products.

Over the last ten years, Wessanen has pursued a strategy of product specialisation and geographical diversification, increasing the proportion of European sales in higher added value specialty products and developing through acquisitions a successful consumer products business in the dairy sector in the United States.

1985 Annual General Meeting

The Annual General Meeting will be held at the Okura Hotel, Ferdinand Bolstraat, Amsterdam at 2.30 p.m. on Thursday, 25th April, 1985.

The Meeting is open to holders of Priority shares, Registered Ordinary shares and Bearer Depositary Receipts, and to representatives of the Press upon presentation of their press pass. As provided for in Article VIII.4, clause 6 and 7 of the Articles of Association of the Company, holders of Bearer Depositary Receipts for shares of Koninklijke Wessanen N.V. issued by the Stichting Administratiekantoor van aandelen Koninklijke Wessanen N.V. are entitled to attend the Meeting in person, or to be represented by a proxy appointed in writing, and may address the Meeting, provided that they have lodged their Bearer Depositary Receipts or a receipt given therefor with the Amsterdam-Rotterdam Bank N.V., Herengracht 597, Amsterdam, The Netherlands by 22nd April 1985 and have obtained a receipt which will serve as a card of admission to the Meeting.

AGENDA

1. Opening of the Meeting.
2. Nomination of a Shareholder to approve the Minutes.
3. Approval of the Minutes of the Ordinary General Meeting of Shareholders held on 25th April, 1984.
4. Report of the Board of Managing Directors for the financial year 1984.
5. Adoption of the Accounts for 1984 as approved by the Supervisory Board, including the appropriation of profit for the financial year 1984; announcement of the date of payment of the final dividend for the financial year 1984.
6. Extension of the special voting rights conferred on holders of Priority shares in the matter of the issue of shares and the limitation or suspension of preferential rights.
7. Authorisation of the Company to acquire shares or depositary receipts for shares in its own capital.
8. Reappointment of retiring members of the Supervisory Board.
9. Any other business.
10. Closure

The Board of Managing Directors. 4th April, 1985

COMPANIES

Glynwed at peak £26m pre-tax

DESPITE the miners' strike, which the board estimates cost £750,000, Glynwed International has pushed 1984 pre-tax profits on from £21·2m to a peak £26·3m on turnover £26·9m ahead at £514·1m. Net borrowings fell £22·8m to £40·1m.

The board intends to concentrate on its core businesses in 1985 which could also include a major acquisition on the plastics side. They add that the current year has started soundly, despite a reduction in the market for construction products.

Final dividend 6p (5·4p) on July 4 for a 9·25p (7·85p) total from earnings of 22·45p (17p).

AB Electronic

THE good improvement that A B Electronic Products Group anticipated for its first half has materialised, with the pre-tax profit outturn up 68 p.c. to £3·42m (£2·04m) on more than doubled sales of £59·9m.

With a good overall order position the board is confident second-half profits will again top the first's, though not to the same extent as in recent years.

It points out that its micro-computer business with Acorn and Sinclair is now much reduced and that the launch of the Jaguar ZJ40 car, for which it is making the switching system, has been postponed until 1986. Diversification, however, has I B M, Saab and British Telecom.

Earnings are 2·6p up at 11·7p and the interim is 2p (1·5p) on June 3.

Blockleys

RECORD results are reported by Blockleys, the Telford-based brick maker and building products company. On the back of turnover of £7·52m against £4·68m, pre-tax profits for 1984 are ahead from £1·01m to £1·56m.

Earnings emerge at 69·9p against a re-stated 39·08p and a 15p final dividend on June 12 makes a 21p (15·5p) total.

Current demand for the group's extensive range of facing bricks and paviors is encouraging.

Higgs and Hill

HIGGS and Hill, the international construction and property group, has had another record year with pre-tax profits on 18·6 p.c. to £7·19m on a near 12 p.c. turnover advance to £189·6m, and is looking for another satisfactory one this time.

On the British contruction side the market is still difficult but the steady growth of the business provided an improved level of turnover for 1984 and a good base for 1985. Housebuilding had another highly successful year with profit up substantially.

A 7·8p final on June 14 makes 12·5p (11p) from earnings of 42·6p (44·5p).

Industrial Scotland

INDUSTRIAL Scotland Energy, the oil and gas explorer, has topped its August USM prospectus pre-tax profits forecast for the 15 months ended December of at least £5m by producing £5·75m. In the previous 12-month period it lost £151,000.

The group has gained from the strength of the dollar, which has more than compensated for the fall in oil prices. With interests in six offshore and seven onshore licences and with interests pending in a further 14 onshore licences, the company has an active exploration programme in Britain. It also has interests in two Paris Basin exploration permits.

There is no dividend.

Newarthill

NEWARTHILL, the civil engineer and building contractor, has weighed in with full year pre-tax profits down from £16·9m to £16·4m.

Investment income was £1·66m up at £7·55m, but the income from related companies dipped £165,000, while the interest charge increased by £698,000.

Portals

WITH the second half producing £10·3m against £9·6m, Portals Holdings ended 1984 with pre-tax profits on 5·7 p.c. to £17·5m on a 12·5 p.c. rise in turnover to £201·7m. The water treatment side led the way with an advance from £9·16m to £10·7m pre-interest on the back of good order books.

Declaring a 12p final on July 1, making 18·5p (17·25p), from earnings of 48·35p (35·45p), chairman Julian Sheffield says he is confident of an improvement in real terms in 1985 with higher profits from all divisions.

Albert Martin

A FASHION presentation of its products before analysts and fund managers accompanied the full year results from Albert Martin (Holdings) showing pre-tax profits of £1·12m (£715,000) from this clothing maker whose trading ranges right across the British retail spectrum and many leading stores overseas.

The British side made the running with operating profits up from £446,000 to £932,000 on a 12 p.c. turnover gain and better margins.

Level of orders in hand is encouraging: the group is well placed for further progress: gearing is six points down at 35 p.c. and a 2p final makes 3p (2·25p) fro mearnings of 9p (4·4p).

Senior Engineering

SENIOR ENGINEERING Group, where opening half pre-tax profits were lagging by £250,000 at £1·05m, went on to £2·87m (£2·16m) for the full year. This was despite a jump from £545,000 to £616,000 in exceptional charges due to a United States law suit and a £627,000 rise in interest charges to £2·55m on the strength of the dollar.

The cost base has been much reduced, enabling profits to be made on lower activity levels, and the opening months of 1985 have continued overall both in Britain and overseas at similar trading levels to 1984.

The dividend is again 1·5p, with a 0·75p final on June 3 from earnings of 2·19p (2·12p).

Weir Group

A STRONG second-half contribution, up by £1·64m to £4·42m, enabled Glasgow engineer Weir Group to increase the pre-tax outturn for 1984 from £4·94m to £6·85m. Earnings are 8·6p (4·4p), or 5·6p (5·6p) fully diluted, and a 2·125p final dividend on May 24 lifts the total to 2·5p (2·125p).

Market conditions remained difficult, the board says, particularly for the foundry division, though order intake for desalination was encouraging. In the current year, the company expects to maintain and build on the progress made in 1984.

Wm Morrison

THOUGH turnover at Wm Morrison Supermarkets rose 24·3 p.c. to £536m in the 55 weeks ended Feb. 2, a jump of £485,000 to £633,000 in interest payable trimmed the pre-tax gain to one of 17·4 p.c., up from £9·98m to £11·7m.

Higher tax leaves earnings marginally ahead at 13·85p against 12·74p, but the dividend is lifted to 2·2p (1·8p) with a 1·65p final, and there is also a one-for-one scrip issue.

IN BRIEF

Bodycote International: Full year pre-tax profit £1·76m (£1·02m). Turnover £51·5m (£26·3m). Eps 14·21p (8·64p). Final dividend 2·5p, payable July 1, making 4·5p (3·5p).

Bruntons (Musselburgh): Full year pre-tax profit £517,000 (£1·1m). Turnover £10·5m (£10·5m). Eps 4·1p (11·5p). Final dividend 1·5p, making 5p (10·5p). With miners strike over, demand for product range is good but margin pressure continues.

Beauford Group: Full year pre-tax profit £710,000 (£558,000). Turnover £8·39m (£7·04m). Eps 11·8p (10·4p). Final dividend 3p, payable May 16, making 4·5p (4p).

A. Bekman: First half pre-tax profit £734,000 (£735,000). Turnover £6·9m (£7·24m). Eps 4·2p (4p). Interim again 1·95p, payable June 3.

BIDS AND DEALS

Nationwide Leisure

NATIONWIDE Leisure is to acquire the three home parks and two caravan sales businesses of the Rank Organisation's Butlin's subsidiary for £2·37m, and raise about £995,000 via a one-for-five rights issue at 95p—equivalent terms after proposed consolidation of five Ordinary 5p shares into one 25p share.

On completion, the company will seek a full listing. Consideration of the acquisition will be satisfied as to £2·3m by 2·42m new Ordinary shares—all conditionally placed at 95p—and the balance in cash.

Pre-tax profits of the enlarged group are forecast at not less than £1·25m (£845,000) for 1984-85, and dividends totalling 3·75p (0·5p) are expected.

Matthew Brown

SCOTTISH & Newcastle has bought more Matthew Brown shares taking its stake to more than 15½ p.c. Its formal offer document sent yesterday stresses the commercial logic and the financial gains for Matthew Brown shareholders accepting the £100m offer. But Scottish & Newcastle makes no reference to rival buying of Brown's shares by Whitbread which opposes the deal.

GRA Group

THE G R A Group has confirmed its sale of the bulk of its land and buildings at Harringay Stadium, London, to J. Sainsbury for £10·5 million. The agreement also gives Sainsbury an option to buy the remainder of the properties at the stadium for an additional £1·5 million.

The agreement for both acquisitions is conditional upon the granting of planning consent for the redevelopment of the whole site, which will include a superstore. The transaction also requires the consent of the shareholders of G R A.

G R A is unable to say for what the proceeds will be used, although it is the intention of the directors to invest the bulk of the cash in the existing business. G R A's shares closed 1p up at 62p yesterday.

Bramall–Manor

MOTOR dealers C D Bramall and Manor National, which earlier this week called off their agreed £2·3m merger following lack of approval from Ford, have now agreed fresh terms — albeit reduced. Instead of £4 cash and one new Bramall Ordinary share for every 40 Manor, Bramall is now offering £3·15 cash and one new Ordinary for every 40 Manor, valuing the latter at £1·88m.

Both companies, meanwhile, give estimates of their 1984 results, Bramall's taxable profits being £2·68m against £2·31m, and Manor's pre-tax losses swelling from £55,000 to £713,000.

FNFC

TAKEOVER favourite First National Finance Corporation increased its appeal to potential bidders yesterday by paying off its final £32m of support group borrowings, thus freeing itself from a long dependence on clearing bank funds.

The finance house group said the repayment is being made with the proceeds of a £56m medium-term credit facility from a consortium of British and international banks.

Guardian Royal Exchange plc acquired the entire issued ordinary share capital of Guardian Royal Exchange Assurance plc on 9th November 1984. To reflect the substance of the transaction, the above results include the results of the Guardian Royal Exchange Assurance Group for 1984 and the corresponding results for 1983 are stated accordingly.

Trading conditions showed a marked deterioration in the second half of the year which affected particularly our Northern American operations, while the United Kingdom showed a continuation of their poor half year trend. The deterioration arose from an increasing frequency of claims and inadequacy of premium rates generally rather than major catastrophes. In comparison with 1983, improved underwriting results were achieved in Australia, Hong Kong and the Republic of Ireland.

The effect of underwriting results on cash flow has restricted the growth in investment income.

Long-term business profits for 1984 are marginally lower since they do not include any special bonus which for 1983 amounted to £4.0m.

Written premiums and investment income have increased by 19% and 11% respectively. During 1984 and with the exception of the South African Rand sterling has weakened against the currencies of the major territories in which the Group operates; in local currency terms written premium growth was 10% and investment income growth was 5%.

Dividend

The Directors recommend the payment of a final dividend which, with the interim dividend paid in January 1985, will constitute an increase of 13.0% compared with the dividend paid by Guardian Royal Exchange Assurance plc in respect of the year 1983.

If approved at the Annual General Meeting to be held on 29th May 1985 a payment at the rate of 17.5p per share (gross equivalent 25.0p) in respect of the final dividend will be made on 3rd July 1985 to holders of Ordinary shares whose names appear on the register at 3 p.m. on 31st May 1985 making, with the interim payment in January last, a total of 26.0p (1983: 23.0p) per share (gross equivalent 37.14p; 1983: 32.86p).

The audited Annual Report and Accounts will be posted to shareholders on 2nd May 1985 and subsequently delivered to the Registrar of Companies.

Dividends

The Directors have declared an Interim Dividend for the year to 30th June, 1985 on the Ordinary Share Capital of 1·55p per Ordinary Share (1·4p) absorbing £2,050,000 (£1,734,000). The Interim Dividend will be paid on 3rd June, 1985 to Ordinary Shareholders on the Register at the close of business on 3rd May, 1985. A Preference Dividend amounting to £7,700 (£7,700) was paid in the six months' period to 31st December, 1984.

Note 1

The Hotel Division and Wellington Importers—U.S.A. were brought into the Group in February 1984 and consequently no comparative figures are presented for the half-year to 31st December, 1983.

Note 2

The fully diluted earnings per Ordinary Share take account of the ultimate conversion terms of the 9½% Convertible Unsecured Loan Stock issued in December 1980.

To the Shareholders:

Dear Sir or Madam,

3rd April, 1985

EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROPOSED OFFER OF ORDINARY SHARES

Introduction

I last wrote to shareholders on 13th March, 1985 to bring them up to date on the proposals for the sale by HM Government of its remaining 48.43 per cent. shareholding in the Company and for the Company itself to raise new equity capital under a combined offer of shares (the "Offer"). I was also able to give shareholders further details of the structure of the Offer and of the marketing of the shares.

Preparations for the Offer are proceeding and you will find enclosed with this document a copy of the Preliminary Prospectus, which is a draft, subject to updating, completion, revision and amendment, of the final Prospectus for the Offer and which includes information about the Company and the Offer.

I am now writing to seek your approval of certain matters necessary for the Offer to proceed, including changes to the Company's Articles of Association (the "Articles") which would provide for the preservation of the United Kingdom control principle currently embodied in the Articles. The opportunity is also being taken to make certain other changes to the Articles and to the British Aerospace Employee Share Ownership Scheme.

Issue of New Ordinary Shares by the Company

The Company proposes to raise new equity capital by the issue of 50 million new Ordinary Shares by way of subscription under the Offer. This will require an increase in the Company's authorised share capital. It is therefore proposed, conditionally upon the Offer proceeding, to increase the authorised Ordinary Share capital from £115 million to £150 million by the creation of 70 million Ordinary Shares of 50p each (and one Special Share as mentioned below). This will provide sufficient unissued Ordinary Shares for the Offer as well as giving some flexibility for the future. Authority is being sought for the Directors to allot the Ordinary Shares for the purposes of the Offer. The relevant Resolution, set out in the Notice of Meeting, also provides that the Directors shall have authority to allot the balance of authorised but unissued share capital (amounting to approximately 50 million Ordinary Shares), but limits that authority in respect of allotments for cash, otherwise than in connection with a rights issue, to 15 million Ordinary Shares, which will represent 5 per cent. of the enlarged authorised Ordinary Share capital. In any event, no issue of these Ordinary Shares will be made which would effectively alter the control of the Company without the prior approval of shareholders in General Meeting. The authority to the Directors will expire on the earlier of the date of the Company's Annual General Meeting in 1986 or 31st May, 1986, unless renewed.

Further Details of the Offer and Shareholders' Preferential Entitlements

Shareholders will (in the case of overseas shareholders, subject to any applicable legal restrictions) be given preferential entitlements to acquire the new Ordinary Shares to be offered for subscription by the Company under the Offer, on the basis of one new Ordinary Share for every four Ordinary Shares held at the close of business on 30th April, 1985. These preferential entitlements will be personal to shareholders and will not be transferable. HM Government has informed the Company that it does not intend to take up its preferential entitlement to subscribe for new Ordinary Shares. Shareholders will not have any preferential entitlements over either the existing Ordinary Shares being sold by HM Government or the new Ordinary Shares to which HM Government would have been entitled. All of these shares, together with any other new Ordinary Shares not taken up by shareholders, will be available under the Offer. Any shareholder wishing to acquire shares additional to those which he is entitled to apply for on a preferential basis, can apply to do so by using a public application form.

Subject to market conditions and to the passing of the necessary Resolutions at the Extraordinary General Meeting, the Offer is intended to take place in early May when the final Prospectus will be published and sent to shareholders together with special pink application forms in respect of their preferential entitlements to acquire the new Ordinary Shares. The offer price, which will be fixed and announced at that time, will be payable in two instalments, one on application (expected to be within the first half of May) and the other by 10th September, 1985.

Government Directors

HM Government has at present the right, under the Articles, to appoint two non-executive Directors. In future, as holder of the Special Share referred to below, it will have the right to appoint or nominate only one non-executive Director (the "Government Director"). The Government Director will have no special powers and his duties, like those of all Directors, will be to the Company as a whole. He will generally not be entitled to vote at any Board meeting on any issue relating to a contract or proposed contract with the Company to which the Crown (or a person acting on behalf of the Crown or a company of which the share capital is wholly-owned by or on behalf of the Crown) is a party. HM Government has informed the Company that its present intention is to exercise its right to appoint or nominate a Director only so long as any contingent Government liability in relation to British Aerospace's participation in Airbus Industrie programmes exists or is in prospect and that the Government Director and his alternate will continue to be chosen for their financial, commercial or industrial experience outside the aerospace industry. Details of the provisions regarding the Government Director are set out in the Notice of Meeting below and your approval is being sought for the proposed changes.

As a result of these arrangements, the Board is pleased that HM Government has asked Mr. K. M. Bevins to continue as the Government Director. Sir Kenneth Durham will cease to be a Government Director, but I am pleased to say that he has agreed to be appointed as a non-executive Director.

The Special Share

The Articles state that it is a cardinal principle that the Company should be and remain under United Kingdom control. Accordingly, the Directors of the Company are required to maintain a separate register of holders of Foreign-held Shares (as defined in the Articles) and to ensure that the aggregate number of votes exercisable in respect of Foreign-held Shares does not exceed 15 per cent. of the votes which are ordinarily eligible to be cast on a poll at a General Meeting of the Company. Consistent with this principle, certain amendments to Article 40 are being proposed, further details of which appear below. In addition to these provisions, all Directors of the Company (and their alternates, if any) are required to be British citizens, British Dependent Territories citizens or British Overseas citizens.

HM Government is at present able to prevent any changes to the Articles since it owns Ordinary Shares in the Company which, in aggregate, carry more than 25 per cent. of the votes ordinarily eligible to be cast on a poll at a General Meeting. It can thus effectively block any Special Resolution to change the Articles if it so wishes. In order to enable HM Government to continue to be in a position, following the Offer, to prevent any changes to the specific provisions in the Articles relating to Foreign-held Shares, to the citizenship of the Directors of the Company and to the Government Director, it is proposed that one Special Share of £1 (the "Special Share") be created by the Company and that the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, or his nominee, subscribe for it. The Special Share would require the Company to obtain the written consent of HM Government before any of the provisions of the Articles relating to these matters can be altered. It would, however, confer neither any financial benefits nor any control over the Company's ordinary commercial dealings. The Special Share can be redeemed at its par value or converted into one Ordinary Share at any time at the option of HM Government. HM Government has informed the Company that, if the right of conversion is exercised, it intends to dispose of such Ordinary Share immediately.

Full details of the rights attaching to the Special Share are set out in the Notice of Meeting below. Your approval is now being sought for the creation of the Special Share and its allotment. If for any reason the Offer does not proceed, the Special Share will not be created or allotted.

Article 40

As mentioned above, the opportunity is being taken (conditional upon the Offer proceeding) to modify the provisions of Article 40 relating to the limit on Foreign-held Shares so that it can be applied to any new class of shares which carry votes only in specified circumstances, as well as to shares which ordinarily carry the right to vote on a poll at General Meetings of the Company. Unless the Directors shall have previously determined that all the provisions of Article 40 shall apply to the shares of such other class, these shares will not be taken into account in any calculation of Excess Foreign-held Shares until the time at which the votes in respect of those shares become exercisable and they will then be deemed to have been entered in the register of Foreign-held Shares at that time.

Furthermore, votes in respect of Foreign-held Shares which the Board has decided are, or may be, Excess Foreign-held Shares will not be exercisable if a notice has been given to the holder of the Shares, as is required by Article 40, and a General Meeting of the Company is held before compliance with the notice. Details of the provisions relating to Foreign-held Shares, assuming that these proposed amendments are approved, are set out in the Preliminary Prospectus.

Other Matters

(a) Amendments to the Articles

(i) It is proposed that shareholders adopt a new Article giving the Company power, subject to the provisions of the Companies Acts, to purchase its own shares. At the present time the Company has no intention of exercising this power.

(ii) Article 62 currently provides, inter alia, that votes attaching to shares in the Company cannot be exercised at General Meetings if information about interests in those shares has been requested but is not forthcoming. A proposed new Article 62 will repeat that restriction if information is not given within 28 days (or such longer period as the Directors consider reasonable) and, will also enable it to continue to operate if information has been given to the Company but the Company knows or believes that the information is not correct.

(iii) It is also proposed to amend Article 84 relating to the retirement of Directors by rotation so that any Director so retiring shall, if he wishes to be re-elected, give notice of his willingness to continue in office before the date of the Notice of the Annual General Meeting at which he is due to retire.

(b) Amendments to the British Aerospace Employee Share Ownership Scheme

Shareholders are being asked to empower the Directors to enter into arrangements with the Trustees whereby the present offer for subscription by the Company can be made direct to Participants in the British Aerospace Employee Share Ownership Scheme (the "Scheme"), rather than through the Trustees. Participants will be entitled to subscribe for the same number of new Ordinary Shares as they would have been entitled to subscribe for had the offer been made through the Trustees, but the new Ordinary Shares will not be subject to the provisions applicable to Scheme Shares. In addition, shareholders are being asked to amend the Scheme so that the beneficiaries under the Scheme are able to take up some only (rather than all) of the shares which they may be offered in circumstances such as the present offer for subscription by the Company under the Offer. At present they have to take up all their rights or none at all, which is disadvantageous to them as compared with the rights of other shareholders. Provision will also be made for the rounding down of fractional entitlements.

Extraordinary General Meeting

Attached to this letter is a Notice of an Extraordinary General Meeting of the Company to be held at The Royal Aeronautical Society, 4 Hamilton Place, London W1 at 11.00 am on Monday, 29th April, 1985. At the Meeting, Resolutions will be proposed to approve the various matters and to give the authorisations referred to above.

Action to be Taken

You will find enclosed a form of proxy for use at the Extraordinary General Meeting. Whether or not you intend to be present at the Meeting, you are requested to complete and return the form of proxy, in accordance with the instructions printed thereon, as soon as possible and in any event so that it is received not later than 11.00 am on Saturday, 27th April, 1985. Completion and return of the form of proxy will not prevent you from attending the Meeting and voting in person, should you so wish.

Recommendation

Your Directors (other than Mr. C. J. Wells who is severely indisposed through illness) and their advisers, Kleinwort, Benson Limited, consider that the proposals set out in this document are in the interests of the Company. Accordingly, your Directors (other than Mr. Wells) recommend you to vote in favour of the Resolutions to be proposed at the Extraordinary General Meeting and intend to do so in respect of their own beneficial holdings of Ordinary Shares.

HM Government has informed the Company that it intends to vote in favour of the Resolutions.

Yours truly,

Chairman.

British Aerospace
PUBLIC LIMITED COMPANY

NOTICE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that an EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of British Aerospace Public Limited Company will be held at The Royal Aeronautical Society, 4 Hamilton Place, London W1 at 11.00 am on Monday, 29th April, 1985 for the purpose of considering and, if thought fit, passing the following Resolutions which will be proposed, as to Resolutions (1) and (2), as SPECIAL RESOLUTIONS and, as to Resolution (3), as an ORDINARY RESOLUTION:—

RESOLUTIONS

(1) THAT, conditional upon the Company and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, on or before 31st December, 1985, entering into an underwriting agreement in connection with the proposed offer for subscription of new Ordinary Shares in the Company and the offer for sale of Ordinary Shares in the Company by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (such offers together being referred to as the "Offer") and the said underwriting agreement becoming unconditional and not being terminated in accordance with its terms:—

(a) the authorised share capital of the Company be increased from £115,000,000 to £150,000,001 by the creation of an additional 70,000,000 Ordinary Shares of 50p each and by the creation of one Special Share of £1, the said Special Share to have the rights set out in paragraph (f) (iv) below;

(b) the Directors be generally authorised pursuant to and in accordance with Section 14 of the Companies Act 1980 to exercise for the period ending on the date of the Annual General Meeting to be held in 1986 or on 31st May, 1986, whichever is the earlier, all the powers of the Company to allot and to make offers or agreements to allot relevant securities up to an aggregate amount of £49,987,403.50 provided that equity securities allotted or offered or agreed to be allotted:—

(i) in connection with the offer for subscription by the Company shall not exceed the aggregate nominal amount of £35,000,000; and

(ii) otherwise than pursuant to (i) above or in connection with a rights issue shall not exceed the aggregate nominal amount of £7,500,001;

(c) the Directors be empowered to allot and to make offers or agreements to allot equity securities pursuant to and during the period of the authority contained in paragraph (b) above as if Section 17(1) of the Companies Act 1980 did not apply to any such allotment;

(d) the authority contained in paragraph (b) above and the power contained in paragraph (c) above shall allow and enable the Directors to make offers or agreements which would or might require the making of allotments after the expiry of the period referred to in paragraph (b) above;

(e) for the purposes of paragraphs (b) to (d) of this Resolution and this paragraph (e):—

(i) "rights issue" means an offer of securities, open for acceptance for a period fixed by the Directors, to holders of Ordinary Shares on the register on a fixed record date in proportion to their then holdings of such shares (but subject to such exclusions or other arrangements as the Directors may deem necessary or expedient in relation to fractional entitlements or legal or practical problems under the laws of, or the requirements of any recognised regulatory body or any stock exchange in, any territory); and

(ii) words and expressions defined in or for the purposes of Part II of the Companies Act 1980 (as modified by the Companies Act 1981) bear the same meaning.

(f) the Articles of Association of the Company be altered as follows:—

(i) by inserting in the definition of "Government Director" in Article 2 the words "or nominated" after the word "appointed";

(ii) by inserting after the definition of "Securities Seal" in Article 2 the following definition:—

"Special Share The one Special Share of £1 in the share capital of the Company and the expression "Special Shareholder" shall mean the holder for the time being of the Special Share.";

(iii) by deleting the existing Article 3 and substituting therefor the following new Article 3:—

"The share capital of the Company is £150,000,001 divided into 300,000,000 Ordinary Shares of 50p each and one Special Share of £1.";

(iv) by inserting after Article 13 the following new Article 13A entitled "Special Share":—

"(A) The Special Share may only be issued to, held by and transferred to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry or his successor or a nominee on his behalf.

(B) Notwithstanding any provision in these presents to the contrary, the amendment, removal or alteration of the effect of all or any of the following Articles or, where specified, the relevant parts of the following Articles shall be deemed to be a variation of the rights attaching to the Special Share and shall accordingly only be effective with the consent in writing of the Special Shareholder:—

(i) the definitions of "Government Director", "Special Share", "Special Shareholder" and "The United Kingdom" in Article 2;

(ii) this Article 13A;

(iii) Article 40;

(iv) the first sentence of Article 71 so far as it imposes requirements as to the citizenship of Directors and their alternates;

(v) Article 72;

(vi) Article 81(e);

(vii) the words in brackets in Article 81(h);

(viii) the words in the first set of brackets in Article 89(f); and

(ix) the second sentence of Article 137.

(C) The Special Shareholder shall be entitled to receive notice of and to attend at any General Meeting or any meeting of any class of shareholders of the Company, but the Special Share shall carry no right to vote nor any other rights at any such meeting except that, at any such meeting at which any matter mentioned in this Article ("relevant business") is dealt with, it shall carry the right to speak in relation to any business which is, or includes, relevant business.

(D) In a distribution of capital in a winding up of the Company, the Special Shareholder shall be entitled to repayment of the capital paid up on the Special Share in priority to any repayment of capital to any other member. The Special Share shall confer no other right to participate in the capital or profits of the Company.

(E) The Special Shareholder may require the Company at any time, either (i) subject to the provisions of the Statutes, to redeem the Special Share at par, or (ii) to convert the Special Share into one ordinary voting share (within the meaning of Section 8 of the British Aerospace Act 1980) in the Company ("ordinary voting share") by serving written notice upon the Company requiring such redemption or, as the case may be, conversion and delivering the share certificate for the Special Share to the Company, whereupon the Company shall, in the case of a redemption, redeem the Special Share for cash at par and, in the case of a conversion, issue to the Special Shareholder a certificate in respect of the share into which the Special Share is converted, in each case within 21 days of the receipt of the share certificate for the Special Share by the Company.

(F) If an ordinary voting share has a nominal value in excess of £1 and if the Special Shareholder shall have required the Company to convert the Special Share into an ordinary voting share, then the Special Share shall carry the right to subscribe for one ordinary voting share for cash at par. In any such case, the Special Share shall be treated as converted and the nominal value of £1 shall be applied in part payment of the nominal value of the ordinary voting share and the Special Shareholder shall pay up the balance of the nominal value in cash.

(G) If the Special Shareholder shall have required the Company to convert the Special Share into an ordinary voting share, the Directors may effect such conversion in any manner they consider appropriate and, without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing, may redeem such Special Share and apply the proceeds of redemption in payment or, if paragraph (F) above applies, in part payment of the nominal value of the ordinary voting share into which the Special Share is to be converted."

(v) by amending Article 40 as follows:—

(i) by deleting the definition of "Share" and substituting therefor the following:—

"Share" means any share in the capital of the Company (not being a Scheme Share) which carries the right to vote on a poll at General Meetings of the Company whether ordinarily or only in specified circumstances;"

(ii) by deleting the first sentence of the second paragraph of clause (i) of paragraph (D) and substituting therefor the following:—

"If at any time the aggregate number of Foreign-held Shares of which particulars are entered as aforesaid results either

(i) in more than 15 per cent. of the votes which are ordinarily eligible to be cast on a poll at General Meetings of the Company or

(ii) in more than 15 per cent. of the aggregate of:—

(a) the votes which are attributable to all Shares carrying a present right to vote and

(b) the votes which are attributable to all other classes of Shares in respect of which the Directors have made a determination under clause (i) of paragraph (I) below being exercisable in respect of Foreign-held Shares ("the Permitted Maximum"), Excess Foreign-held Shares shall be dealt with in accordance with paragraph (C) of this Article."

(iii) by inserting in clause (i) of paragraph (D) after the words "Foreign-held Shares have been, or are to be," the words "or are, pursuant to clause (ii) of paragraph (I) below, deemed to be,";

(iv) by deleting the first two sentences of paragraph (G) and substituting therefor the following:—

"The Directors shall give notice in writing to the holder (or to any one of joint holders) of any Share which appears to them to be an Excess Foreign-held Share requiring him within 21 days (or such extended time as in all the circumstances the Directors shall consider reasonable) to transfer such Share to another person so that it will cease to be a Foreign-held Share. On and after the date of such notice and until registration of a transfer of the Share to which it relates pursuant to the provisions of this paragraph the Share shall not confer any right to receive notice of or to attend or vote at General Meetings of the Company. If within 21 days after the giving of such notice (or such extended time as in all the circumstances the Directors shall consider reasonable) such notice is not complied with to the satisfaction of the Directors, the Directors shall arrange for the Company to sell such Share at the best price reasonably obtainable to any other person so that the Share will cease to be a Foreign-held Share."

(v) by re-lettering paragraph (I) as paragraph (J) and by inserting after paragraph (H) thereof the following paragraph:—

(I) (i) For as long as any Foreign-held Share which carries a right to vote on a poll at General Meetings of the Company only in specified circumstances does not carry a present right to vote at any General Meeting of the Company, the Directors shall in relation to such Share not be bound to comply with the provisions of the second paragraph of clause (i) of paragraph (D) or the provisions of paragraph (G) above, but the Directors may, at their discretion and at any time, determine that all provisions of this Article shall apply to any such Foreign-held Share.

(ii) If at any time such a Foreign-held Share as is referred to in clause (i) above carries a present right to vote at General Meetings of the Company, such Share shall, if the Directors have not previously determined that all the provisions of this Article shall apply to it, thereupon be treated as a Foreign-held Share for all the purposes of this Article.

(iii) For the purposes of deciding whether a Foreign-held Share is an Excess Foreign-held Share, any Foreign-held Share which is the subject of a determination by the Directors pursuant to clause (i) above or to which all the provisions of this Article have been applied by virtue of clause (ii) above shall be deemed to have been entered in the separate register referred to in paragraph (D) on the date of such determination or of such application, as the case may be."

(vi) by deleting the existing Article 72 and substituting therefor the following new Article 72:—

"72. (A) The Special Shareholder shall have the right from time to time to appoint (which right shall include the right to nominate an existing Director for such appointment) one Director and to remove the same and appoint another in his place and may appoint any person (including another Director) to act as the alternate of any such Director and at any time terminate such appointment. Any such appointment, removal or termination shall be in writing, served on the Company by leaving the same at the Office and shall be signed by or on behalf of the Special Shareholder.

(B) Save as provided in this Article 72 and Article 81 (vi), the provisions of these presents shall apply to the Government Director as they apply to other Directors.

(C) Neither the Government Director nor his alternate shall hold any executive office or the office of Chairman or Deputy Chairman.

(D) The provisions of Articles 82 to 88 (inclusive) and of Article 89 (A) and (B) shall not apply to the Government Director and the Government Director shall not be required to retire or be taken into account in determining the number of Directors to retire pursuant to the provisions of Article 83.

(E) Neither the Government Director nor his alternate (unless the alternate be another Director who is not acting as alternate) shall vote on any issue relating to a contract made or proposed to be made which is a contract (other than for the purpose only of providing any guarantee or indemnity) to which the Company is a party and the Crown or a person acting on behalf of the Crown or a company of which the share capital is wholly owned by or on behalf of the Crown is also a party. Neither the Government Director nor his alternate (unless the alternate be another Director who is not acting as alternate) shall be counted in the quorum at a meeting in relation to any resolution on which they are debarred from voting under this paragraph."

(vii) THAT the Articles of Association of the Company be amended as follows:—

(a) by inserting after Article 8, the following Article 8A:—

"8A. Subject to the provisions of the Statutes the Company may purchase any of its own shares (including redeemable preference shares)."

(b) by deleting the existing Article 62 and substituting therefor the following new Article 62:—

"62. No member shall, unless the Directors otherwise determine, be entitled in respect of shares held by him to vote at a General Meeting either personally or by proxy or to exercise any other right conferred by membership in relation to meetings of the Company if any call or other sum presently payable by him to the Company in respect of such shares remains unpaid or if he or any person appearing to be interested in such shares has been duly served with a notice under Section 74 of the Companies Act 1981 and is in default in supplying to the Company within 28 days (or such extended time as in all the circumstances the Directors shall consider reasonable) the information thereby required. For the purpose of this Article a person shall be treated as appearing to be interested in any shares if the member holding such shares has given to the Company a notification under the said Section 74 which fails to establish the identities of those interested in the shares and if (after taking into account the said notification and any other relevant notification under Section 74) the Company knows or has reasonable cause to believe that the person in question is or may be interested in the shares."

(c) by deleting sub-paragraph (ii) of Article 84 and substituting therefor the following new sub-paragraph (ii):—

"(ii) Where such Director has not given notice in writing to the Company by the date of the Notice convening the Annual General Meeting at which he will retire by rotation that he is willing to be re-elected."

(viii) THAT:—

(a) the British Aerospace Employee Share Ownership Scheme (the "Scheme") constituted by a Trust Deed dated 16th December, 1980 and made between the Company and Lloyds Bank Plc (the "Trustees") be amended as follows:—

(i) in Rule 23(A) the words "to take up all (but not part only) of such rights or to sell his rights" shall be deleted and the words "to take up all or part only of such rights or to sell all or part only of his rights" shall be inserted in substitution therefor; and

(ii) a new sub-paragraph (D) shall be inserted in Rule 25, as follows:—

"(D) in making the notification referred to in sub-paragraph (A) of this paragraph, if such rights relate to the acquisition of shares, the Trustees may round down to the nearest whole share the entitlement of any Participant to such rights, when calculated in relation to his Scheme Shares.";

(b) the Directors be authorised to enter into a supplemental Trust Deed, and such other arrangements as they consider necessary or expedient, with the Trustees in relation to the proposed offer for subscription by the Company (the "offer for subscription") to the intent that, notwithstanding Rule 25 (A) of the Scheme:—

(i) the Trustees shall, as registered holders of the Scheme Shares (as defined in the Rules of the Scheme), receive the offer for subscription in proportion to their registered shareholding on the same basis and subject to the same terms and conditions as other holders of Ordinary Shares in the Company provided that they shall only accept such offer if directed so to do by the Participants in the Scheme;

(ii) the Company shall make to each Participant in the Scheme the offer for subscription of such number of new Ordinary Shares as would have been made to him by the Trustees under Rule 25 (A) of the Scheme and the making of such offer shall be deemed to satisfy the Trustees' obligations under Rule 25 (A); and

(iii) the Trustees shall rely on a direction contained in any application form used by any Participant pursuant to the offer for subscription referred to in paragraph (2) above to the effect that the Trustees shall not accept the offer referred to in paragraph (1) above in respect of any new Ordinary Shares as would be required to be offered to him by the Trustees pursuant to Rule 25 (A) of the Scheme;

and that the Directors be empowered to do all further acts and things as they consider necessary or expedient to implement the said arrangements.

By Order of the Board,
B. COOKSON
Secretary

1. Any member entitled to attend and vote at the Meeting is entitled to appoint one or more proxies (who need not be members of the Company) to attend and, on a poll, to vote instead of him. Forms of proxy should be lodged with the Company's Registrars, Lloyds Bank Plc, Registrar's Department, Goring-by-Sea, Worthing, West Sussex BN12 6DA not later than 48 hours before the time for which the Meeting is convened. Completion of a form of proxy will not affect the right of a member to attend and vote at the Meeting. Members of the British Aerospace Employee Share Ownership Scheme are able, if they so wish, to direct the Trustees of the Scheme to vote in respect of their Scheme Shares in accordance with their instructions.

2. The documents referred to in this advertisement are being posted to shareholders.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company and of the Trust Deed dated 16th December, 1980 constituting the British Aerospace Employee Share Ownership Scheme will be available for inspection at the offices of Linklaters & Paines, Barrington House, 59-67 Gresham Street, London EC2V 7JA during usual business hours on any weekday (Saturdays and public holidays excluded) up to and including 29th April, 1985.

THE QUESTOR COLUMN

The lure of Lasmo's rights

LASMO, one of the oil sector's most talked about takeover candidates, turned the tables on market chatter yesterday when announcing its £67·3 million rights issue. Not only does it want funds to finance an active exploration and appraisal programme, it wants to be ready itself when suitable acquisition opportunities come along.

Whatever the success of its overseas fields, the North Sea, and especially the areas where Phillips acts as operator, could be the focus of attention if there is much change from its 1985 capital expenditure of £152 million. In addition it has the flexibility of £40 million of unissued preference capital to bring into play.

The one-for-four rights issue at 285p is, therefore, one to follow, and with a 70 p.c. success rate in the first two months of this year from 23 completed oil and gas wells 1985 looks off to a promising start. An industry feeling that the oil price has touched bottom, coupled with 1984 net profits of £31·6 million after £24·9 million also enhances investment status.

A year ago Lasmo was dull and boring. But then overseas discoveries started to hit the headlines — Australia, Indonesia, North America and recently Sicily — and the exploration acreage increased significantly.

In the nature of the business there will be some dry wells, but on balance production should increase, proven reserves rise and net cashflow improve.

Last year group cashflow was £117 million compared with £50 million, and though 1984 oil and gas production was largely unchanged at 35,698 barrels of oil equivalent per day, Lasmo established a new production record in January at an average rate of 50,567 barrels.

The 1984 dividend increase is hardly generous, but Lasmo intends an effective 25 p.c. rise as it holds the pence payment on the increased capital. The rights issue, which Lasmo first thought about last November, will help improve the debt equity ratio.

As with other oil shares, much lies in the lap of the gods with oil prices, tax and exchange rates the wild cards. But Lasmo should be on course for a net income of between £35 million and £38 million this year.

The shares were 15p down at 350p yesterday where the prospective price-earnings ratio of around 10 rates with other mature issues. Further confirmation that its exploration programme is going well would nicely justify a buy at current levels.

Geoffrey Searle, Lasmo chairman — £67·3 million cash call for exploration and possible acquisitions.

Cookson Group rates a 'buy'

COOKSON Group made all the right noises yesterday to give its shares a positive glow. It is coping with the recession, being aggressive in the United States, the current year has started well and there is a one-for-one scrip issue.

Little wonder then that Cookson closed 65p up on the day at 640p, and on projected profits growth this year the shares still have steam in them.

Pre-tax profits at £55·8 million compare with £21·7 million, and though there has been some help from currency movements there was underlying growth and generally improved profitability.

Established United States businesses, ignoring the dollar, improved their performances and in related companies (whose pre-interest contribution rose from £19·5 million to £34 million).

Tioxide improved its trading margins from 11 p.c. to 15·4 p.c. Other related interests to shine include Dulux Australia, and Electrovert which turned from a loss to a profit.

In the United Kingdom stronger demand complemented cost reduction and acquisition. In Europe ceramic supplies advanced, and the recently acquired electronic solder operations gave additional help.

The spread of interests and areas of operations makes today's Cookson Group less cyclical, and the three-year record which shows profits rising from £11·5 million looks entrenched. This year £70 million is not out of sight.

Amec for the long term

THE rationalisation of the William Press part of Amec has extended further than anyone anticipated. Almost three years after the merger with Fairclogh Construction profits are still falling below host expectations.

The pre-tax outcome for the year to December 31 1984 is up from £18 million to £19·1 million on turnover down from £715 million to £687 million. But by now shareholders must have expected substantial merger benefits to be showing through.

In some areas they certainly are, but last year this was obscured by a £3·9 million above the line loss at Major Construction Services in the United States.

This was set-up by Press just ahead of the merger in 1982 to run as a non-union firm in parallel to the successful closed shop union business Fisk. It has proved a disaster ever since and Amec hopes that the latest losses will be the last. Break-even or close to it is anticipated for this year.

If the Major Construction loss is ignored several encouraging signs can be discerned. Orders are strengthening — the group has just acquired a joint £100 million contract in partnership with Balfour Beatty — and short term liquidity has improved. Under the group's own definition of this, last year saw a cash-inflow of £7·8 million taking short term liquidity up to £48·4 million.

Following yesterday's disappointment some downgrading of market estimates for 1985 seem inevitable but the group should still be on course for about £32 million before tax and after a 10p correction yesterday the shares at 258p are on an undemanding earnings multiple of around 6.

Sooner or later the potential offered by the merger should emerge at the pre-tax line but anyone buying now should be prepared for a two-year wait.

GROUP ACCOUNTS – CONSOLIDATION OF PHOENIX

The Phoenix's results for 1984 reflect certain changes made to conform with Sun Alliance accounting policies. On this basis Phoenix incurred a net loss of £4.0m for the 7½ months' period prior to acquisition compared with a reported estimated net profit of £4.6m for the 6 months ended 30th June, 1984.

The Group results for the year include an exceptional post-acquisition profit of £15.1m arising from the termination of the Phoenix's liabilities on its withdrawal from the Continental Corporation's U.S.A. pool.

Including this exceptional U.S.A. credit the consolidated pre-tax profit of Phoenix for 1984 amounted to £21.3m: after charging taxation and minority interests its net profit was £12.0m.

GROUP UNDERWRITING RESULTS

General business premium income increased by 15.5% in sterling terms. After adjustment for the effect of changes in exchange rates the increase was 7.4%.

At Home, property results were seriously affected by heavy fire losses, increased subsidence claims and the severe weather early in the year: motor experience was also highly unsatisfactory and there was a significant increase in claims frequency.

In Europe, better results were achieved in Belgium, Denmark and Germany but in France and Holland there were again increased losses.

The poor results in the U.S.A. reflected market conditions and commercial lines were especially unprofitable.

In Canada, increasingly adverse underwriting conditions resulted in heavier losses in most classes: changes in legislation affecting bodily injury claims also contributed to a severe deterioration in the automobile account.

In Australia, where experience remains largely unfavourable, the result suffered from heavy fire losses and from flooding in Sydney. Weather claims also adversely affected a number of territories including New Zealand and South Africa.

The reduced inwards reinsurance loss reflects the measures already taken to curtail this class of business.

LONG-TERM INSURANCE

Substantial growth was achieved in individual pensions business which to some extent offset the impact of the abolition of tax relief on life assurance premiums.

Shareholders' profits totalled £18.1m compared with the combined Sun Alliance and Phoenix profits of £15.9m for 1983 — an increase of 16%.

INVESTMENTS

Investment income was reduced by the financing costs of the Phoenix acquisition, amounting to some £14m. Allowing for this and for changes in exchange rates the underlying growth was 10.1%. The Group's solvency margin again benefited from good stock market performances in many parts of the world and notwithstanding the acquisition of Phoenix's business stood at 79% at the end of the year.

DIVIDEND

The Directors have resolved to declare at the Annual General Meeting on 22nd May 1985 a total dividend for 1984 of 15.5p per share. An interim dividend of 5.75p per share was paid on 7th January 1985 and the final dividend of 9.75p per share will be paid on 5th July next.

The above statement is a summary of the year's results. The full Report and Accounts, which contain an unqualified Report of the Auditors, will be posted to shareholders on 30th April, 1985 and delivered to the Registrar of Companies after the Annual General Meeting.

You're going to make us the fastest moving company in the High Street

Granada TV Rental is already one of the fastest expanding companies in the High Street. We now have 650 showrooms across Great Britain. And we're not slow when it comes to introducing new products and marketing concepts. We've gone into business communications systems (including cellular radio) in a big way. And we have broken into retailing with home computers. In the future, satellite broadcasting and cable hold out more intriguing possibilities.

So, it's quite natural that we should want our distribution, logistical planning and buying functions to be the most efficient, quickest and most sophisticated in the market. Which is why today, we're looking for the 3 senior management personnel who will be designing, implementing and developing these functions, in close liaison with each other, and with the full resources of Granada available.

Distribution Manager

Your first task will be to analyse the present distribution networks of the recently merged Granada and Rediffusion companies, and integrate them into an expanded network that can cope with expected future growth in business. You'll already have experience of multi-site fincg operations, have a graduate's ability to assess and administer, and be able to work as part of a close-knit management team, many of whom, like you, are in their thirties. Ref: G1

Stock Materials/Logistics Manager

With Granada already moving into retailing, widening our product range and assessing the potential of dramatic new product areas, your role in forecasting the integration of developments into the distribution network and developing credible solutions for stock requirements, rental allocations and disposals, is a vital one. You must be an innovator and an implementer, have a degree and excellent numeracy, and be used to using computers and communicating with a wide range of personnel. You'll probably be in your thirties. Ref: G2

For both these management roles, candidates currently earning less than £15,000 are unlikely to have sufficient experience.

Buyer/Consumer Electronics

Buying in products for a variety of our product groups, you will create and implement innovative plans for their profitable resourcing and their introduction into the existing operation.

A proven negotiator with a degree or equivalent business qualification, you'll have at least 5 years' impressive retail buying experience - preferably within the brown goods sector. Sound business acumen and the ability to develop and maintain close contact with relevant manufacturers and markets are essential. You'll probably be aged between 25 and 35 and unlikely to be earning less than £13,000. Ref: G3

These roles are of the utmost importance to our development, and competitive salaries will be offered, together with company cars, and many other benefits including relocation expenses. That a successful performance in these roles will lead to career progression almost goes without saying: certainly Granada has the scope for ambition.

Please send a comprehensive CV, quoting reference number of position for which you are applying, to:- Vic Eltringham, Manager - Personnel and Employee Relations, Granada TV Rental Limited, PO Box 31, Ampthill Road, Bedford MK42 9QQ.

Young Graduate Hi-Fliers

With Granada, you can really spread your wings. If you have 2 years experience in purchasing, distribution, marketing or any other area of commerce, please write with short CV to the address above.

SPARES MANAGER

Electronics Products

Our client, a household name in the field of electronic consumer goods, manufactures and markets an extensive range of products including television, audio and video equipment. They also market specialised industrial products in such areas as computer peripherals, telecommunications and advanced automation systems.

With rapid technical developments and market pressures combining to make this an exciting and dynamic environment, our client has an exceptional opening for a Spares Manager within a team based at the Company's Service Centre conveniently near Watford and the M1. The Manager will be responsible for running the purchasing, stock control and sales functions for spare parts, aided by a workforce equipped with modern computerised systems.

Applicants must have several years relevant experience, ideally gained in the electronics industry, and a good business or electronics qualification. Salary will be open to negotiation, depending on age, experience and qualifications, a Company car will be provided, and other benefits include a pension scheme and free BUPA cover.

Please write or telephone (quoting ref: 360), for an application form: Susan Witty, Deansgate Management Services, 63 St. Martin's Lane, London WC2N 4JX. Tel: 01-240 9555

Sales Engineer

COMPETITIVE SALARY + CAR

Hawker Siddeley Dynamics Engineering Limited

We supply marine propulsion control and monitoring equipment to ship builders worldwide. Our Marine Systems Division includes a small but highly specialised group of sales and commercial staff, responsible for securing orders and maintaining on-going dialogue with existing and new customers.

We seek a Sales Engineer to join this group, based at Welwyn Garden City. Educated to HNC level, an appreciation of microprocessor and computer systems applications is desirable and previous sales experience plus Royal Navy MoD contacts would be useful. The position will involve UK and overseas travel.

Excellent terms and conditions are offered, together with a company car and relocation expenses, in approved cases.

Please contact Philip Delafield on Welwyn Garden City (0707) 331299 or evenings (0582) 873181, alternatively write enclosing a CV to: Hawker Siddeley Dynamics Engineering Ltd., Bridge Road East, Welwyn Garden City, Herts AL7 1LR.

Senior Buyer

MIDDLESEX

Put your experience to work in Pharmaceuticals

Glaxochem Limited — Glaxo

Glaxochem Limited is a member of Britain's largest pharmaceutical group and is responsible for the manufacture of bulk pharmaceuticals and fine chemicals for worldwide distribution.

A challenging opportunity exists at our Greenford Head Office for an experienced purchasing professional to join the small, highly motivated central buying team who service our four manufacturing locations in the North of England and Scotland.

Reporting to the Company Purchasing Manager, your responsibilities will include sourcing, and negotiation of supply agreements for a group of centrally managed raw materials, chemicals and other items of high value and strategic importance.

Probably in your late 20's early 30's, you should be educated to degree level or equivalent with at least five years' proven purchasing experience. Personality, the ability to work under pressure and a strong proficiency in negotiation are essential attributes for this position. A knowledge of the chemical industry would be an advantage.

We offer an attractive salary which is negotiable depending on your qualifications and experience, together with a package of benefits which includes generous bonus schemes and a non-contributory pension scheme. Relocation assistance is also available, where appropriate.

Please write in full to the Personnel Officer, Glaxochem Ltd., Greenford Road, Greenford, Middlesex UB6 0HE.

Young Statistician to join SAINSBURY'S

CENTRAL LONDON: c.£9000

SAINSBURY'S

Sainsbury's sell more than any other UK grocery chain, serve more than six million customers per week and over the past four years have doubled profitability in real terms.

The company's current and future success is backed by a highly efficient Marketing Services Group in London and it is within the Management Statistics Section that we now need a young Statistician, to deal with practical management problems.

In this role, you will be making a key contribution to the strength of marketing and other Sainsbury's departments, in particular through the development and interpretation of management information from all available Company sources. Wide ranging duties will include statistical analysis of company data, the writing of new computer programmes and the maintenance and running of existing programmes.

A graduate or equivalent in a numerate subject, you should have a high level of numerical awareness plus a knowledge of mathematical statistics, computer programming and the management information requirements of a large company. Some experience in the practical application of statistical techniques and programming would be an added advantage.

A salary of around £9,000 will be supported by excellent benefits and first class career development prospects.

Please contact Les Thompson, Assistant Recruitment Manager, J. Sainsbury plc, Wakefield House, Stamford Street, London SE1 9LL. Tel: 01-921 6576.

Senior Expeditor

MANCHESTER: UP TO £12,500 & ATTRACTIVE BENEFITS

. . . with a technical/purchasing background in Electronics

FERRANTI Computer Systems Cheadle Heath Division

As a major British company with a worldwide reputation for engineering excellence in advanced real-time computer systems technology, we are constantly pioneering and developing new innovative products and systems to meet the increasing demands of a very diverse range of customers.

With the recent acquisition of further major contracts, our rapid rate of expansion continues. This has created an excellent opportunity for an experienced person with a technical/purchasing background in electronics to liaise and co-ordinate with suppliers to expedite component and material supplies for the manufacture of computerised equipment.

The position demands a high degree of initiative and the ability to negotiate effectively at senior management level and to make positive decisions on particular procurement problems.

Starting salary is negotiable up to £12,500 and will depend upon qualifications and depth of relevant experience. Benefits are those associated with a company of Ferranti's standing and international reputation, including generous relocation assistance in suitable cases.

Please write with a detailed CV, quoting ref. 168, to: Colin Roberts, Ferranti Computer Systems Ltd., Bird Hall Lane, Cheadle Heath, Stockport SK3 0XQ.

Production Design Engineers

WASHINGTON, TYNE AND WEAR

To build the highest quality vehicles in Europe, we need the highest quality engineers – people accustomed to working in a high technology environment who will influence from the planning stage the shape and success of a new car manufacturing operation.

Construction of the first phase of the Nissan plant in Washington is well under way heralding the production of 24,000 units per annum by mid-1986 and 100,000 units in phase 2. Throughout this development our product design team will play a key role in the design and testing activities associated with the localisation of vehicle and component parts. This is a unique opportunity to make your own personal mark as an engineer.

Process Engineering

Aberdeen

MARATHON

The sophisticated process systems installed on Marathon's Brae-A platform is one example of the advanced engineering that has been applied throughout this project. To ensure the optimum performance from this equipment, we are establishing a small team of highly skilled engineers who are equally well-versed in the practical and theoretical aspects of process engineering.
Process Engineers are involved in all aspects of process development. Your responsibilities would include process start-ups, optimisation and trouble-shooting. You will also evaluate and propose solutions to process problems, and review design documents for the Brae-B platform and future installations. Although based in the Aberdeen office, you will occasionally spend a portion of your time offshore.
We would like to hear from engineers with a BSc Degree in Chemical Engineering. You should have a minimum of five years' practical experience with major hydrocarbon processing systems within the petrochemical or offshore oil industries.
A very competitive salary is combined with an excellent benefits package, including free BUPA membership, non-contributory pension scheme and a free staff restaurant. Generous relocation assistance is available if required.
Please telephone or write for an application form to: Brian McDonald, Employee Relations Representative, Marathon Oil UK Ltd, Marathon House, Rubislaw Hill, Anderson Drive, Aberdeen AB2 4AZ. Tel: (0224) 576133.

Exceptional career opportunities

National Accounts Managers

Mars

Top-quality products and an aggressive approach to marketing have made Mars a leading manufacturer within the UK's biggest packaged-goods market.
To build on our success in the highly competitive confectionery market, we now seek to appoint two very high-calibre national accounts managers capable of developing substantial, £multi-million areas of the business.
You will be responsible for the strategic development of your sector of the business and for directly influencing the marketing policies of your accounts at the most senior levels, resulting in profitable volume growth. These high-profile roles will involve extensive liaison with field sales, marketing, finance and other key functions, and undoubtedly represent a stimulating career challenge for ambitious young men and women with the commercial flair of first-class business managers.
A graduate aged 25-28, you must be able to demonstrate an outstanding record of achievement to date in a demanding commercial environment — probably consumer sales and/or marketing. Your ability to 'make things happen' allied to your excellent communications skills will already have marked you out as a 'high flier' in your present company — and you will therefore be ready for the increased responsibilities and rewards that these opportunities with Mars can provide.
Our progressive management development policies require people who aspire to senior management positions to gain broad experience within the business. Excellent opportunities for further career development also extend to other companies within the international Mars Group, both in the UK and overseas.
Our excellent salary package is backed by an extensive range of non-contributory benefits including, if appropriate, assistance with relocation.
Please write enclosing a full cv, to Rob Sawyer, Management Resourcing Manager, Mars Confectionery, Dundee Road, Slough, Berkshire SL1 4JX.

Recruitment Advertising

A new dimension for talented professionals

Austin Knight, No. 1 in the recruitment advertising field — and expanding fast. With worldwide billings of around £40 million and the largest number of stand-alone agencies in the UK where creativity, service and administrative back-up all combine to provide a first-class client service.
We're now on the look-out for additional talented professionals for various locations. Graduate-level, mid 20's, and, ideally, in-depth experience of account management in a similar environment. However, we're also prepared to consider men and women with a really strong track record in a commercial setting, seeking the opportunity to change direction.
At present, you're probably in advertising, personnel, marketing, publishing or public relations. You're successful, self-confident, ambitious and unafraid of hard work, with that special energy which distinguishes the go-getters from the stay-putters.
Our philosophy is to look after our key people. To develop their skills with on-going training and to give them free rein on a heady mix of recruitment accounts.
And to provide the kind of career opportunities that have led to young professionals heading up agencies as far apart as Sheffield and San Francisco; Southampton and Sydney.
It's a great future for us, and for you. So start now by phoning Mike Daglish on Egham (0784) 33962 for an initial discussion. Or write to him, enclosing a c.v. (including current salary details) at Austin Knight Advertising UK Limited, 66a High Street, Egham, Surrey TW20 9EY.

Opportunities in Dorking

Situated just off the M25, by the lovely Surrey Downs, Dorking is the location of the modern Head Office of Croxton & Garry, a leading and fast-growing manufacturer and distributor of chemicals specialising in the production and marketing of raw materials, fillers and additives. Our customer base spans a wide range of industrial sectors from plastics and rubber to surface coatings to food and pharmaceuticals - and we are growing fast! We are extending our Head Office and we opened a new factory in Wales in March. This expansion has led to the creation of the following opportunities:-

Technical Sales Representative - Rubber & Adhesives Industry (additives, dispersions and fillers)
To £12,000 including profit share + car

Aged from your late twenties to early thirties, you will have the qualifications and the necessary industrial/commercial experience in the rubber and adhesives industry to sell our rapidly increasing range of distributed and own-manufactured products to the UK and Eire. You will be enthusiastic and tenacious with good communicative skills and the ability to work as part of a well-organised team.

Technical Sales Assistant to Sales Director
Attractive negotiable salary + profit share

The formula for a successful sales career in our industry is a blend of what you have - and what we can give you. You will be a literate, numerate and personable chemist or technologist with good communicative ability and HNC/degree. We will provide you with the role of assisting the Sales Director in the sales development of new products, train you thoroughly, and encourage your progression through field technical sales to sales management.

Benefits for all posts include a generous profit share scheme, free family BUPA, non-contributory pension/life assurance scheme and, where appropriate, assistance with relocation. An added attraction is an informal family atmosphere and a very pleasant working environment.

Please send your cv in confidence together with a hand-written letter of application, to Max Hart, Croxton & Garry Ltd, Curtis Road, Dorking, Surrey RH4 1XA.

PA to Finance Director
Based at Watford

A Belgian group needs a high-calibre PA to assist the Finance Director and Company Secretary of its UK companies in all aspects of his work. The job requires total involvement, the ability to think clearly, to work under pressure and flair for the development of new ideas and systems. Preferably aged 24-30, the successful candidate will ideally be a graduate and have at least three years' relevant experience in any of finance, treasury, corporate planning or a similar function, and be prepared to travel. Applicants will be able to liaise effectively within and outside the company and have the confidence and tact to make a positive impression. The remuneration package for this appointment includes a salary commensurate with age and experience, BUPA, contributory pension scheme, removal and relocation allowances and five weeks' annual holiday.

Production Management
Food Manufacture
Ross Foods' growth in the frozen food market underlines the need to develop and effectively utilise our manufacturing facilities - and we believe able and innovative production management is the means by which we will achieve this aim. We are seeking a high calibre Manager who can take responsibility for a production shift employing up to five hundred people, processing and packaging a wide range of frozen foods. Experience in food or a related industry is therefore a clear advantage. Above all you must be able to demonstrate not only a sound track record in line management but also the potential for career development in a growing company. It is unlikely that anyone under 28 years of age will have the necessary breadth of experience. The post is based at our largest manufacturing unit in Grimsby within easy reach of rural Lincolnshire. Salary and benefits are attractive and include shift allowance. Relocation expenses will be paid where necessary.

Please apply in writing with full career details to: Andrew Maltby, Personnel Manager, Ross Foods Limited, Ross House, Grimsby, South Humberside DN31 3SW.

TRAINING MANAGER

Another excellent trading year has proved that investment in capital projects, merchandise, promotional activity and people are the keys to success. Investment in one major resource — people — is recognised as crucial to the future profitability of the Company.

In the fast-moving and fashionable environment of the West End, the Training Department has a responsibility for the training and career development of 2500 staff, many of whom can be rated as the 'brightest stars' within the industry.

Because of the almost unique size of the organisation and its decentralised autonomy, Selfridges is one of the last bastions of buyer/manager entrepreneurship.

It is, therefore, able to attract high calibre graduates and staff for its training programmes and these must reflect the Store's need for dynamic and responsible contributors.

We now require a Training Manager to head the department and take full responsibility for this important function.

The successful candidate will possess the initiative to undertake considerable delegated authority, the intellect to use and design training programmes incorporating the best of modern practice, and the personality to support management and maintain the department at the hub of the Company's activities.

A salary indicator of c.£16,000 will not be inhibitive to the recruitment of an outstanding candidate.

Please send full career details to: Derek Gooddy, Personnel Controller, Selfridges Limited, 400 Oxford Street, London W1A 1AB.

OFF-KEY ARIAS KNOCKED OUT BY WESTPHAL

By JOHN PARSONS in Monte Carlo

NEARLY a year after being intimidated by a typically unnerving crowd in Rome, Jimmy Arias, hailed as the finest American clay court prospect for a decade, is still struggling to find the confidence he needs to become a winner again.

From being the fifth seed at Wimbledon last year, the American has dropped to 25th in the world rankings and he must be in danger of falling further still after his 7-6, 6-4 defeat by Michael Westphal, of West Germany, in the third round of the Monte Carlo Open lawn tennis tournament yesterday.

Worse still, this latest setback for Arias, who has won only four out of nine singles this year, could have damaging repercussions on his hopes of joining the United States team for their next Davis Cup tie against West Germany, including Westphal, on clay in Hamburg in August.

On one of those idyllic, cloudless Monte Carlo days, when in between the tennis, the large crowd could admire the hang-gliders above or the sailors skimming the gently swaying waters of the Mediterranean, all was clearly not yet well in the Arias world.

Doubt over McEnroe

"It all started to go wrong in the Italian championships in Rome last year," said Arias, recalling how, as the defending champion, he lost to Claudio Panatta in the third round, despite leading 5-3 in the final set. "I think now I'm playing well again, but have to win some matches to get some confidence."

Although surprisingly ignored by the American captain, Arthur Ashe, when John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors refused to play in the first round of the Davis Cup in Japan, Arias would have certainly come into the thinking for Hamburg, especially as there is doubt over McEnroe's willingness to sign a good behaviour code.

Now, however, Arias will have to make a complete return, not least in Rome next month, to the sternly competitive play he sustained in 1983 while winning four Grand Prix titles, all on clay.

The key to his defeat by Westphal was that the West German not only persisted in the rallies, but vollied with unexpected skill and composure.

The sun did not entirely shine on the West Germans. Their young prospect, Boris Becker, 17, running a temperature, not surprisingly also looked out of sorts when he was beaten 6-4, 6-3 by Jose-Luis Clerc, despite promising a come-back by rallying from 0-3 to 3-3 in the second set.

Ivan Lendl is a somewhat reluctant top seed in Monte Carlo. He is scornful of an international calendar—soon to be revised in line with his thinking—which forces him to spend this week on clay between playing on hard courts in Florida last week and a carpet court in the WCT finals in Dallas.

Tentative start

After a tentative start, however, Lendl, who this year has had to contend with injuries, car smashes and an arson attack on an old mansion he hopes to renovate, soon settled into a rythym to beat a refreshing American newcomer, Lawson Duncan, 6-4, 6-4.

Duncan, 20, who hails from a poor mountain town in North Carolina, joined the tour last summer. Since then he has qualified for seven out of nine events.

He was confident and willing enough to take on Lendl at his own game, with the occasional ferocious foreband or drop shot slipped into marathon rallies.

At 5-4 in the second set, after leading 3-1, he was unlucky to lose the third break point after an 82-stroke rally.

Sundstrom through

Henrik Sundstrom, the defending champion, was among the first through to the last eight, but it took him more than three hours to quell the experience and stubborn resistance of Guillermo Vilas, a former champion.

Sundtrom won 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, but looked in trouble when he was a break and a set down.

2ND RD.—J. Lendl (Czech) bt L. Duncan (U.S.) 6-4, 6-4; J. Gunnarsson (Sweden) bt G. Forget (France) 6-1, 6-3; T. Smid (Czech) bt F. Segarceanu (Romania) 6-4, 6-2; A. Krickstein (U.S.) bt J. Frawley (Australia) 6-3, 6-2; J. Higueras (Spain) bt D. Perez (Uruguay) 7-5, 6-1; J-L. Clerc (Argentina) bt R. Becker (W. Germany) 6-4, 6-3; V. Pecci (Paraguay) bt R. Arguello (Argentina) 4-6, 7-6, 6-3.

3RD RD.—W. Westphal (W. Germany) bt J. Arias (U.S.) 7-6, 6-4; R. Sundstrom (Sweden) bt G. Vilas (Argentina) 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.

Niepel and Fisher in surprise victories

By BILL EDWARDS

ALEX NIEPEL, of Formby, and the Welsh boy, Andrew Fisher, of Llangollen provided major upsets in the Prudential British Under-16 Hard Court Championships at West Hants, Bournemouth, yesterday. Both beat seeded players to reach the quarter-finals.

Miss Niepel had the outstanding result in beating Teresa Catlin of Cambridge, the favourite, 6-4, 7-6. This was a fine display against a much more experienced opponent, who was the Prudential Under 14 champion two years ago.

Miss Catlin looked listless and was certainly not at her best, but that in no way lessens the performance of Miss Niepel.

Sapsford drops set

After pulling back from 3-5 to lead 6-5, Miss Catlin threw her chance away, dropping her serve to love, then scoring only three points in the tie-break. She started that crucial game with a double fault, followed by a weak return, then an attempted drop shot which failed to cross the net.

Fisher had much tougher opposition from Ulli Nganga, of Norfolk, who never really settled in the gusty conditions, which made it difficult for everyone.

Even Danny Sapsford, the boys' favourite, dropped a set before recovering to beat Daniel Ahl, of Devon, 4-6, 6-2, 6-0. Once Sapsford had adjusted his game, he took control and lost only two of the next 12 games.

Simon Booth, winner at this age in the LTA winter series last week, had a comfortable 6-2, 6-4 win over James Mercer, of Bristol, but Colin Beecher, whom Booth had beaten, found the going tough against Daniel Bishop, losing the first set and eventually winning 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

BOYS' SINGLES.—3rd rnd: N. Pashley (Surrey) bt S. Byrne (Hants) 6-1, 6-3; A. Fisher (N. Wales) bt U. Nganga (Norfolk) 1-6, 6-3, b. Booth (Warwickshire) bt J. Mercer (Avon) 6-2, 6-4. D. Sapsford (Surrey) bt D. Ahl (Devon) 4-6, 6-2, 6-0; M. Petchey (Essex) bt M. Loosemore (S. Wales) 7-6, 7-6; N. Smith (Lancs) bt S. Cornish (Somerset) 6-0, 6-3; R. Wilkins (Herts) bt J. Hunter (Surrey) 4-6, 6-3, 6-4; C. Beecher (Kent) bt D. Bishop (Yorks) 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

GIRLS' SINGLES.—3rd rnd: A. Niepel (Lancs) bt T. Catlin (Cambs) 6-4, 7-6; N. Entwistle (Dorset) bt C. Batchan (Essex) 7-5, 6-4; S. Godman (Surrey) bt J. Pearson (Herts) 6-1, 6-1; A. Gregory (Notts) bt L. Howden (Yorks) 7-5, 6-3; S. Timms (Essex) bt A. Randall (Leics) 6-4, 6-2; A. Fleming (Leics) bt C. Nee (Cambs) 6-3, 6-1; A. Nall (Avon) bt S. Eve (Berks) 6-4, 6-3; S. McCarthy (Avon) bt L. Stern (Cornwall) 6-1, 6-1.

World Table Tennis Championships

Chinese look like sweeping board

EUROPE'S leading table tennis players have only a slim chance of stopping the all-conquering Chinese from winning more titles when the World Championship singles start in Gothenburg today.

Sweden's rising young star, Jan-Ove Waldner, and in-form Andrzei Grubba, of Poland, are the only Europeans in the men's event with realistic prospects of surprising China, who took both team trophies on Tuesday.

Two former European champions among the most experienced singles competitors have contrasting views on Waldner's chances, but both consider Grubba's hopes are remote because he has to face China's Chen Xinhua.

'Grubba will fail'

Milan Orlowski, of Czechoslovakia, said last night: "Waldner has a good chance, because he has a good draw and can adapt his play, but Grubba will definitely lose to Xinhua."

Dragutin Surbek, of Yugoslavia, said: "In Waldner's section, there are too many Chinese and he would have to beat four of them to win the title. Grubba will fail against the chopping tactics of Xinhua."

Mikael Appelgren . . . the Swede who could surprise the Chinese.

Mikael Appelgren, Sweden's former European champion, could be the unexpected success among the non-Asians because he has a favourable draw which includes two of the weaker Chinese, Teng Yi and Xie Saike.

Swedish coach, Tomas Berner, said: "After his fine performance against China's Jiang Jialiang in our team final last night, Applegren could beat one of the Chinese, perhaps more."

Jiang, the world No. 1, a hard-hitting penholder, leads the assault by China, whose immense strength in depth is underlined by having all eight of their top players among the 32 seeds.

WORLD CH'SHIPS (Gothenburg).—Men, category 3 (late results): Faroe Islands bt Papua New Guinea 5-1; Venezuela bt Zimbabwe 5-4; Malta bt Palestine 5-3; Costa Rica bt Colombia 5-1; Iceland bt Jersey 5-2; Lebanon bt Bermuda 5-1; Libya bt Trinidad 5-3; Jamaica bt Ireland 5-3.

Bowls

WARD IS EAGER TO PLEASE FANS

By Our Bowls Correspondent

Chris Ward, twice England's singles champion, is unusually eager to capture the £5,000 Open triples at North Walsham, his home club, over the weekend.

Defaulted in the recent national fours championship semi-finals because of arriving late, his eagle eyes will not leave his colleagues, brother David, and Trevor Webb.

They will meet strong resistance from 95 teams which include 20 internationals and the formidable Stanley national champions, Jim and Ian Lambert and John Thirlbeck.

ABA Boxing

Douglas & Hylton advance

By KEN MAYS

ROD DOUGLAS, the St George's, London, light-middleweight, went a step nearer retaining his ABA title when he stopped Steve Piggott in the third round at the George Wimpey national finals at the Gloucester Leisure Centre last night.

Douglas, the only reigning champion among the 48 boxers in the tournament, did not have things all his own way against a courageous Devon-born opponent.

In the end, though the skill of Douglas, 20, a Commonwealth Games gold-medallist, came to the front and the referee did well to stop the contest after Piggott had taken two standing counts.

Harold Hylton, the 1982 heavyweight champion, having only his fourth contest in 18 months after a ban by the Medical Council took less than two rounds to stop Dave Morris, of Cowes, who took three compulsory counts.

Early finish

Melfah, 24, campaigning as a middleweight for the first time, had to overcome the problem of an opponent who was at least six inches taller. He finished it with a right to the jaw four seconds from the end of the opening round.

Colin McMillan, the stylish Barking featherweight, scored a majority decision over Colin Day, of the Royal Navy, who threw punches from all angles but seldom scored.

McMillan now avoids Newcastle's John Davison until the Wembley finals and this could be one of the highlights—if it happens after the semi-finals at Preston later this month.

FEATHER.—C. McMillan (Barking) bt C. Day (Royal Navy) pts. J. Davison (Granger Pk) bt C. Lynch (Trumpers) ko 1. LIGHT-MIDDLE: G. Phillips (Sunderland) bt J. Ashton (SAPA) pts. R. Douglas (St George's) bt S. Piggott (Torbay) rnd 3. MIDDLE: D. McCartin (St Pancras) bt J. Smith (Tunbridge Wells) pts. J. Melfah (Wimp) bt M. Core (Moss Side) ko 1.

LIGHT HEAVY: M. Lee (Hartcliffe) bt C. Edwards (Manco) disq. 3. J. Beckles (Islington) bt J. Moran (Austin) rnd 2. HEAVY: H. Hylton (Ulim) bt D. Morris (Cowes) rnd 2nd. R. Parkes (Repton) bt A. Squash Rackets

BRIARS DEFENDS

Most of the world's top squash rackets players are competing in the £14,000 ICI Open which starts at Stockton on Tuesday. Such is the strength of the entry that the holder, Gawain Briars, is seeded No. 8.

YOUTH T'MENT (Marlow, Bucks). Under-16: Qtr-finals.—S. Meads (Berks) bt P. Ward (Wilts) 9-5, 9-3, 0-9, 9-0; M. Baker (Surrey) bt P. Frankland (Surrey) 9-5, 3-9, 9-6, 9-0; D. Simpson (Lancs) bt G. Badminton

INJURY BLOW FOR BUTLER

Steve Butler, second seed in the men's singles, has scratched from the English National Badminton Championships to be played in his home town of Coventry from April 12 to 14. He injured an ankle in practise last week.

It is the second time in close succession that Butler, last year's runner-up, has twisted the same ankle. His withdrawal provides Kevin Jolly, champion two years ago, an excellent chance to reach the final. D.J.R.

A good performance at Greensboro will buy Sandy Lyle peace of mind in next week's Masters.

United States Golf

Lyle aims for a few dollars more

By MICHAEL WILLIAMS in Greensboro

SANDY LYLE'S cat-and-mouse existence on the American golf tour does not quite come to the crunch even he though was likely when the Greater Greensboro Open begins at the Forest Oaks Country Club, North Carolina, today.

Originally it was understood that Lyle would need to win at least £496 this week to pass the £18,200 earnings mark that would give him admission to more American tournaments this season.

This is the figure laid down by the United States tour for players such as Lyle, who have not yet qualified for their player's cards but can make the grade by their performances as special invitees in 10 tournaments.

Season's target

The Greensboro is Lyle's 10th invitation, but a stay of execution has come to light in that he is one of 17 golfers who has also been invited to compete in next week's Masters at Augusta.

Consequently the Greensboro is not after all Lyle's last fling, though many bridges would still have to be crossed before he can become fully qualified.

Everything is geared to money in golf these days, and to become a bona fide US card-holder, as opposed to just a temporary one, Lyle would need to finish the season among the top 125. The minimum estimate for that is set at £57,190.

Ken Brown had just the same struggle last year, and it was not until the last event of all, the Pensacola, in which he finished joint second, that he rose to 112th place in the final money list to obtain his card.

As a member of the less privileged classes Lyle will need to set his alarm for around 5 a.m. today. He is due on the tee at 7.30, the first of the early worms. At least the greens will just have been cut.

Minds on Masters

The "G.G.O.", as it is called, lacks the sparkle of last week's Tournament Players' Championship and next week's Masters. It nevertheless has been a regular event on the U.S. tour since 1938, and the locals treat it as an excellent excuse for leaving their offices as early as possible, if indeed they go in at all.

The bigger names in the game tend to make their excuses as they turn their minds towards the Masters, and advance appraisals of Augusta before the gates are opened to the public.

However, absence from Greensboro by no means guarantees success at Augusta. Only last year Ben Crenshaw played in the "G.G.C.", and not particularly well at first with rounds of 75, 72 and 73.

But on the last day, he had a 67, and something slotted into place. A week later, Crenshaw was Masters champion which, from him, was a dream fulfileld.

England six ahead in tough conditions

By A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT in Paris

ENGLAND made a fine start to their attempt to retain the Vilmorin Cup for the sixth successive year when their team of four took a six-stroke first-round lead at Saint Cloud, Paris, yesterday.

The trophy is contested in tandem with the two qualifying rounds for the French Women's Junior Championship, for players under 22, and Trish Johnson, the Welsh-based English international, led the opening round with a one over par 74.

It was outstanding golf in a high wind with bumpy greens creating putting difficulties. Only a shot behind Miss Johnson came Nicola McCormack, playing an admirably steady round on her international debut.

Claire Waite, the Curtis Cup player, was five over par after 10 holes but rallied to play the remaining eight in par figures for a 78. The fourth member of the English team, Clare Hall, recorded 81, dropping most of her shots on the greens.

Hopes bettered

Nevertheless, with scores soaring in the difficult conditions, Miss Hall finished the day in joint 13th position and still has an excellent chance of being among the 32 qualifiers for tomorrow's matchplay stages.

Their aggregate of 227 left England six shots ahead of France, with Spain two further shos in arrears on 235 and Italy on 237. Considering that only Miss Waite has played in the event before, it was better than England had dared hope for.

Behind the two English girls in the individual scoring came E. Pamard (France) and E. Garadi (Italy), both on 76.

SCHOOLS EVENT LOSES BACKING

Aer Lingus are to end their 14 years' sponsorship of the international schools team golf championship. The Golf Foundation are to fund the nationwide event themselves from 1986 at an estimated cost of £25,000.

The airline will back the 1985 final at Ballybunion next month, but next year all countries wishing to participate will be asked to finance their schools' champions travel to London for the final.

However, the Golf Foundation will benefit by more than £9,000 from an entry of more than 600 clubs for the British Airways national club team championship.

And almost 600 clubs have responded to a nationwide 18-hole putting competition with the final being held on the last day of the Lawrence Batley Tournament at the Belfry on July 13. Each competitor will pay a 50p entry fee with the proceeds being divided between the Golf Foundation and the Greenkeepers Association.

N. IRELAND SCORE 3 FOR TITLE

By NANCY TOMKINS

NORTHERN IRELAND retained the British Universities Women's Hockey title by defeating England B 3-0 in the final match of the group tournament at Cardiff yesterday. Williamson, Smeaton and the captain, Fusco, were the scorers.

When England A went out to play the combined London-Oxford-Cambridge team at the start of the day they were level with Northern Ireland in points and goals and in theory faced the easier task.

But LOC had been spoilers throughout the tournament, unexpectedly drawing with both Scotland and Northern Ireland to boost England A's earlier hopes. But having built up England "A", LOC destroyed their best championship chance since 1981 with a 0-0 draw.

Northern Ireland alone were on target, Scotland and Wales playing the fourth goalless draw of the tournament. Interest was already transferring to the selection of the BUSF team to compete the European tournament at Loughborough next week.

Players unavailable

There, in the women's section of a joint tournament, BUSF will play All-Ireland and ADH of West Germany. The all-Irish team determined the unavailability for BUSF of some of the best players at Cardiff.

The BUSF selectors lost some 20 players who for various reasons were unavailable. Assisted by the BUSF ruling to consult widely with coaches, team managers and captains, the selectors retained five of last year's squad.

Sally Cockerill, the England A captain from Loughborough, Manson and Monaghan (Scotland), Alistone (LOC) and Moore, the England A goalkeeper, keep their 1984 places.

BUSF SQUAD.—J. Dale (Wales), V. Moore (England A), M. Nicholl (Wales), S. Cockerill (England A), Capin, J. Russell, H. McDonald, L. Manson, L. McMurrich (Scotland), E. Chatfield-Roberts (LOC), G. Barr, G. Cede (England A), J. Crowe, A. Alistone (LOC), L. Monaghan (Scotland).

BRITISH UNIVERSITIES TOURNAMENT (Cardiff).—England A 0, London-Oxford-Cambridge 0—Scotland 0, Wales 0—England B 0, N. Ireland 3. Final placings: N. Ireland 16pts, 1; England A 13, 2; England B 9, 3; LOC 6, 4; Scotland 5, 5; Wales 2, 6.

Angling

SAY CHEESE FOR BASS

By DEREK FLETCHER

Spring bass often fancy fish baits. A thin strip of herring used either on float tackle from rocks, or towards dusk from a beach with plenty of surf rolling in are the places to cast.

Some anglers have been successful using cheese, a bait often used in freshwater, but mainly ignored for salt water use.

The "salmon of the sea" will sometimes go for odd baits. A chicken leg was found inside one, a piece of carrot in another and one which was opened contained a small boiled botato thrown overboard from a ship.

Not too far

At the moment it is unwise to cast too far from the shore. Bass are more likely to be in the breakers, or around pier piles or near breakwaters.

Running leger gear, with one hook is more likely to be productive from the shore than a two or three-hook rig.

Single hook gear will move around with the surf, and bass favour a moving bait rather than a stationary one.

MULLET HOOKED ON MINCED BEEF

A record 11 lb 14 oz 6 gm grey mullet has been caught by Richard Simonet, of Alderney, who made the catch at Longis Bay, using a ground bait of minced beef.

BIG ENTRY FOR TEAM EVENT

By BILL MEREDITH

More than 600 clubs throughout the United Kingdom have entered for the inaugural British Airways Golf Club Team Championship, and knock-out matches in eight different regions will be played until mid-July.

Club teams consist of five players, who can be male or female, and among the entries are the Royal and Ancient of St. Andrews, Royal Troon, Carnoustie, Prince's and Royal Dornoch.

Two clubs from each of the eight qualifying regions will go forward to the stroke-play regional finals, and the final eight will compete for the major prize at St. Pierre on Oct. 5-6.

S. Africans at Folkestone

By CHRIS MOORE

A team from South Africa, discreetly calle dthe Nomads, will play in the Folkestone Festival over Easter — and the organisers claim their presence has the agreement of a West Indian team which is also taking part.

"All foreign teams were asked if they had any objections to playing in the same event as a South African side," said Nevill Miroy the tournament organiser, yesterday. "The West Indian team has not objecte din any way."

The Queen's Park club from Trinidad will not play against the Nomads in the 40-team Festival.

English opposition

The South Africans' six matches will all be against English teams — Amersham, Cambridge University, Chalfont St. Peter, Essex Scimitars, Coventry and The Ladykillers.

One potentially embarrassing situation has been avoided by the withdrawal of the England under-21 squad which had been due to take part in the Folkestone event.

Competing alongside South Africans could have resulted in serious reperoussions for international players, but the squad has withdrawn on financial grounds.

London League

CRUCIAL WIN FOR SLOUGH

Slough ... 2 Southgate ... 1

SLOUGH took a major step towards regaining the Atari London League title with a 2-1 victory over Southgate, the reigning champions, in the fading light at Chalvey Road last night, writes Chris Moore.

A brilliant goal from Ravinder Laly, aided by Suti Khehar, two minutes before half time, made sure of all three points for Slough to keep them firmly at the top of the Premier Division.

In a fast, open game Southgate took a 10th minute lead through David Craig who scored from a short corner.

Within five minutes, Slough were level. Paul Barber's shot from their fifth short corner found Craig's foot and Chris Maskery made no mistake with the penalty stroke.

Southgate, without John Shaw and their captain, Andy Wallace, were too predictable against Slough's fast-moving forward line with Maskery, Kuljit Dak and Ken Partington all going close in the second half.

First Test—Fifth Day

New Zealand run into trouble

By a SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT in Port of Spain

NEW ZEALAND struggled against the West Indies fast bowling on a pitch of unpredictable bounce and were in danger of defeat at tea on the final day of the First Test in Port of Spain yesterday.

The West Indies declaration after three quarters of an hour set New Zealand 307 to win, a purely academic equation. More realistically, they had to set themselves the task of surviving through a minimum of five hours for a draw.

They lost two wickets before lunch, one in the very first over, and three more between lunch and tea to be 115 for five entering the final session of the match.

West Indies had a formidable position at the start of the day, 275 ahead with six wickets standing, but steady bowling by Chatfield and Cairns restricted them to the addition of 33 runs before Richards declared.

The hard-working Chatfield, 34, took three of the four wickets to fall—and his innings return, 6-73, and his match return, 10-121—were his best in his 20th Test appearance.

It was obvious New Zealand woud be hard-pressed against the experienced and high quality West Indies bowling on a pitch affected by a tarpaulin leak—two days ago, and the immediate loss of Rutherford, 19, did not help their cause.

Rutherford had the rare indignity og being out for a duck the second time in his first Test. He responded to Wright's call for a single off the last ball of the opening over unable to beat Harper's return to the keeper.

Ball keeps low

Wright was leg-before playing back to a ball from Holding that kept low a quarter of an hour before lunch when New Zealand were 47 for two.

Marshall, reducing his speed to exploit the pitch, tightened West Indies' grip after lunch. In 11 overs, he dismissed the Crowe brothers and Howarth a cost of 25 runs. Martin was surprised by one which lifted and sparred it to shortleg. Howarth had no chance against a shooter that took his offstump and Jeff sliced an outswinger to gully.

BOWLERS TO TOE THE RIGHT LINE

BOWLERS who overstep the mark — or are wide of it — will be penalised in first class and club cricket in England this season.

The Test and County Cricket Board have decided to follow the growing practice all over the world of crediting wides and no-balls to the bowlers' analysis in all domestic cricket.

The move will not be welcomed by new ball exponents such as Derek Pringle, of Essex, and Middlesex paceman Neil Williams who are plagued by no-balling—a factor which cost Williams his place in last September's NatWest final against Kent.

Overseas practice

It has been implemented in domestic competitions abroad as well as in Test matches and is presently in force in the West Indies-New Zealand series.

No balls not scored off, plus wides will be added to the runs conceded by the bowler and the only extras shown at the bottom of an innings analysis will be byes and leg byes.

Aston in last eight as winds take toll

By TONY FAIRCHILD

ASTON, the defending champions, came safely through to the men's quarter-finals of the British Universities Championships yesterday when the programme was considerably delayed on windswept Axbridge Reservoir, near Bristol.

In winds of between Force 4 and 6, racing was possible only in two flights of Laser II dinghies with storm sails, and progress was further hindered by damage and protest.

But with competition yesterday involving mainly the remaining League matches for the women's teams, Aston are expected now to contest their quarter-final today against Cambridge.

The draw is: London v Oxford, Cambridge v Aston, Edinburgh v Birmingham, Wales I v Trinity College, Dublin.

Meanwhile, as protests and matches to be re-sailed were still being organised late yesterday, it seemed that Southampton, in Group Two, would be the only unbeaten women's team after two days of racing

Likely qualifiers

Birmingham were the first squad to make sure of completing the preliminary rounds in Group One, with Leeds, Wales I and Bristol the other more likely qualifiers.

While racing was generally very even in Group One, with no clear favourites bar Birmingham, two teams dominated the second group, Southampton and Oxford, whose only defeat was against Southampton.

PROVISIONAL RESULTS

MEN.—Lge 1: London 7 wins, Cambridge 5-2. 3: Lge 2: Aston & Oxford 6-1, equal 1; Lge 3: Wales & Birmingham, 6-1. 1; Lge 4: Edinburgh 7-0 1. T.C.D. 6-1. 2.

WOMEN.—Lge 1: Birmingham & Wales 7-2, equal 1. Lge 2: Southampton 8-0. 1. Oxford 7-1. 2. Manchester & Nottingham 4-4 equal 3.

IRISH EYES ON BROOKES

By A Special Correspondent

THE five days, 1,500 miles and 52 high-speed special stages over closed public roads of the Rothman's Circuit of Ireland may not be everybody's idea of a way to spend Easter.

But to Russell Brookes it could be the ideal opportunity to pull ahead in this year's Shell Oils RAC Open Rally Championship.

Brookes, 37, is already a three-times winer of the rally and acknowledged as one of the best drivers on tarmac.

If he can pull off his fourth victory in the event then, added to his second place in the opening round of the series, he could be on his way to winning back the title he last held in 1977.

Ideally suited

Though not the most powerful car in the rally, Brookes' Opel Manta 400 is ideally suited to the roads of Ireland. Last year a similar car took Cork's Billy Coleman to victory.

Brookes and co-driver Mike Broad face tough opposition. GM Dealer Sport team mate Jimmy McRae defends the British title he won last year for the third time with his AC Delco Manta while Coleman has one of the two 300hp Rothman's Porsches entered.

Motor Rallying—Kenya Safari

Peugeot-Audi duel on cards

TIMO SALONEN and Ari Vatanen, of Finland, who lie first and second in the world rally drivers' table after three events, will be favourites to extend their positions when the Kenya Safari motor rally gets under way in Nairobi today.

They are both driving Peugeot 205s, a car which has won six successive rallies but has never taken part in a "Safari."

Even so, this rally appears to be shaping into a duel between the French Peugeots and the Audi stable of West Germany.

More than 70 cars, including eight works teams, will take part in the fiveday 3,231-mile event and most will be happy to finish, for the Kenyan terrain usually forces out at least 50 cars.

For many experts, including Kenya's five-time winner Shekhar Mehta, the other cars to watch are the Audi Quattros of Hannu Mikkola, of Finland, and Stig Blomqvist, the Swedish world champion.

Mehta competes today in a Nissan 240 RS, an improved but ageing two-wheel drive, non-turbo machine, contrasting sharply with the four-wheel drive turbo-charged vehicles which lead the manufacturers' table.

Today's first leg covers 1,023 miles from Nairobi to Mombasa and back, with an overnight drive through the Taita hills and bush beneath Mount Kilimanjaro.

HANBURY PAIR GO STRAIGHT FOR CLASSICS

By HOTSPUR

TWO pieces of work on the Newmarket gallops yesterday convinced trainer Ben Hanbury that Christian Schad and Kashi Lagoon should miss their engagements at Kempton Park on Saturday to go straight for classic objectives.

Hanbury was guided by Lester Piggott, who rode both horses in their work. Christian Schad will tackle the Italian 2,000 Guineas in Rome on April 13, while Kashi Lagoon goes for the 1,000 Guineas at Newmarket on May 2.

Christian Schad was ridden by Steve Cauthen when he won a handicap under 9st. 7lb by seven lengths at Doncaster on Lincoln Handicap day but Piggott, still riding in Australia at that time, will take the mount in Italy.

Piggott's decision means he will miss the Guineas Trial meeting at Salisbury, where Primo Dominie, who will join Michael Stoute after the 2,000 Guineas, has his first race trained by Sylvia Swift.

Piggott is also expected to take the 1,000 Guineas mount on Kashi Lagoon, for whom tentative plans had been made to appear in the Fred Darling Stakes at Newbury on April 19. Hanbury said yesterday: "Lester felt that seven furlongs on fastish ground would be too sharp for her so she goes for the Guineas first time out."

Hanbury added: "She's a temperamental filly and needs to be treated very gently, like you'd treat your girl friend. She's a stayer and not many Guineas fillies stay a mile and a half, so there's no point leaving her best races behind by running her now."

Kala Dancer pleases

Kala Dancer, Hanbury's 2,000 Guineas hope, did his first serious work of the year yesterday, also ridden by Piggott, who has been confirmed his Newmarket classic rider. "He did everything we asked from him," said Hanbury, "but Lester will ride him again next Wednesday and then we will decide whether he runs in the Greenham Stakes or goes straight for the Guineas."

Though Hanbury's Kempton entries will be withdrawn, Piggott will reappear there on Saturday to start what is expected to be his last season riding in Britain.

The northern jockeys David Nicholls and Robert Earnshaw are also due back at the weekend, following injury, though both were expected to be out for much longer at the time of their accidents.

Nicholls broke his right leg playing football on New Year's eve, and after it failed to respond to treatment he was told he would not ride again for six months. He consulted Hugh Barber, Jonjo O'Neill's consultant, and having been to the Injured Jockeys' Fund-backed rehabilitation centre in London for three weeks, he was passed fit by the Jockey Club's medical consultant yesterday.

Nicholls will ride out for York trainer David Chapman tomorrow and on Saturday, and will resume on Monday.

Earnshaw will ride out for Monica Dickinson today for the first time since his fall from Richardstown at Liverpool last Thursday. He was detained in Hospital overnight with concussion but what was thought to be a cracked shoulder proved to be bad bruising.

Regular swimming and physiotherapy have helped the injury improve faster than expected, and visits to the sauna have kept his weight steady. He expects to resume on Saturday, providing he is passed fit by the doctor, but with no engagements for the Dickinson stable, the venue will depend on his commitments for David Gandolfo.

Today Gandolfo may be on the mark with Lord Laurence (2.30) at Ludlow, where Doucement (4.30) is napped.

Course Notes & Hints

VELESO IS BEST OF DAY

By Our Course Correspondent

VELESO*, who has shown the benefit of a rest after falling at Wolverhampton in December by winning his last two races, may complete a hat-trick in today's H. R. Attwood Memorial Handicap 'Chase (3.0) at Ludlow.

Jeff King's gelding easily defied a 7lb penalty at Towcester last month, following a three-length win over Co Member, who reopposes, at Chepstow.

Veleso, who was in receipt of 11lb from Co Member, quickened in impressive style on the run-in and is expected to confirm his superiority on only 1lb worse terms.

Doucement fancied

Irish Lord has sound claims in the Leintwardine Novices' Hurdle (4.0). Martin Pipe's four-year-old, easy winner of his first two races, was well beaten in the Triumph Hurdle at Cheltenham last time but has a much easier task here.

Celtic Bell is fancied to gain her first win of the season in the Old Wolverhampton Book Club Novices' Handicap Hurdle (2.30) and Doucement may take the Butts Novices' Handicap 'Chase (4.30).

Doucement overcame an early mistake to beat Stubbs Daughter by 15 lengths over course and distance last month. She may make light of a 5lb penalty.

Sunshine dispels stamina doubts

By MARLBOROUGH (John Oaksey)

FOR the second time in four days Bajan Sunshine proved what a difference blinkers and better ground can make, when at Ascot yesterday, as at Liverpool on Grand National day, he dominated the Keith Prowse Long - Distance Hurdle almost from start to finish.

After Bajan Sunshine had finished well behind Rose Ravine and Crimson Embers at Cheltenham, there seemed, despite his Cesarewitch victory on the Flat, a serious doubt about his ability to stay three miles over hurdles.

But now, with blinkers to keep his mind on the job, Bajan Sunshine has settled that question in style. Yesterday. Crimson Embers was under pressure three flights from home and the further they went the stronger Bajan Sunshine got.

Martin Tate, who says that his six-year-old already jumps fences well, is eagerly awaiting next season and the start of his steeplechasing career. But Bajan Sunshine finished so fresh here that the trainer is tempted to run him in the Welsh Champion Hurdle at Chepstow on Monday.

Jumping jockeys usually spend their short summer holiday relaxing and spending their hard-earned money. But this summer will be different, since Peter Scudamore, Bajan Sunshine's rider will captain an eight-man team to tour the United States, Australia and New Zealand through the month of June.

Two of the squad, Neale Doughty and Ben de Haan, who missed the Grand National because of injury, were passed fit at Ascot yesterday by Dr Michael Allen, the Jockey Club's medical consultant, and will resume on Saturday.

Apparently Dr Allen was amazed at the speed with which Doughty's shoulder injury had healed, but the former champion Jonjo O'Neill, much injured himself, is only one of several senior jockeys who have grave doubts about the Jockey Club's medical adviser "suspending" jockeys for injuries of a muscular or bony nature unconnected with concussion or the nervous system.

The tradition has been that the question of a man's fitness to ride in such cases rested between him and the trainer.

Considerable patience as well as skill has been needed with both winners John Webber saddled yesterday. After starting the season brilliantly, Townley Stone disappointed several times and neither of Restless Shot's two runs this year suggested him as a likely winner of the Peregrine Handicap 'Chase.

But although it was not surprising that Boreen Prince showed the strain of two splendid Cheltenham efforts Townley Stone displayed his old dash and agility in the Golden Eagle Novices 'Chase.

Sheer Gold atones

Thaventalight was a possible danger when he fell at the second-last but Townley Stone, who may have one more race on this course this season, was still full of running at the line.

Chief credit for Restless Shot's comeback belongs to John Pullen, former stable lad and now stud groom to the horse's owner-breeder "Sonny" Richmond-Watson. In his time with Fred Rimell, Pullen had charge of two Grand National winners but had not ridden a horse for 10 years when Restless Shot came for a holiday at the stud.

"He rode him out all through the bad weather and got him really sweet," Mr Richmond-Watson said.

Another Cheltenham disappointment was redeemed when Sheer Gold won the Hen Harrier Novices' Hurdle. As at Cheltenham she ran her race slightly in snatches but finished like a train.

Tony Balding may run her again over hurdles before the Sagaro Stakes on the Flat. Only if she won that very easily indeed would he consider a crack at the Gold Cup.

Haydock Park Racing

PROVIDEO NARROWLY BEATEN

PROVIDEO showed all the fighting spirit which characterised his juvenile career when beaten a neck by Ardox Lad in the Field Marshal Stakes at Haydock Park yesterday.

Ahmed Foustok's home-bred colt, winner of 16 two-year-old races, will tackle the Palace House Stakes at the Newmarket Guineas meeting after running in Folkestone's Privy Councillor Stakes on April 15.

Provideo's trainer, Bill O'Gorman, was disappointed with the running of his other representative, Que Sera, who finished last.

Stans Pride, who had a belated first Flat win at the age of eight in the Famous Grouse Maiden Stables, could be back over hurdles on Monday.

She attempts her 10th win under National Hunt Rules in the Welsh Champion Hurdle, and trainer Gordon Price said: "It was easier than I thought it would be today, and the race will have tuned her up nicely for Chepstow."

McCormack's fourth

St Croins Castle gave Matt McCormack his fourth winner of the season when justifying 2-1 favouritism on her debut in the Mornington Cannon Maiden Fillies' Stakes.

The Irish-owned grey took up the running a furlong and a half from home and drew five lengths clear of Ole Flo and Absolutely Bonkers.

Walter Wharton made a late switch of jockey before saddling Judy's Dowry to win the Frank Wootton Selling Handicap. "It was a pity that my son Walter could not ride her," he said, "but with Edward Guest I was able to claim the 5lb and this made all the difference."

Boat Race: Saturday (2.45pm)

By GEOFFREY PAGE

THE main piece of work in Boat Race training yesterday came from Cambridge, who chanced their arm by taking on Vesta in the evening for some short rows. Their Canadian coach, Neil Campbell has returned from Canada to help Alan Inns with the last few days of coaching.

Vesta, fifth in last Saturday's Head of the River race, had held Cambridge for five minutes when sickness forced Inns to abandon the row 10 days ago, so to ask for a return fixture was a calculated gamble.

In a preliminary minute along Chiswick Eyot, Miss Shaw went out of the tide and Cambridge finished a few feet down. The crews were then set to row for four minutes from Harrods, with Cambridge on Middlesex.

Cambridge were away a bit quicker this time and were about a quarter-of-a-length up when they steered too far across and hit Vesta's blades, which almost stopped the club crew and Cambridge went away fast.

Pointless to continue

Vesta decided it was pointless to continue when well behind after one-and-three-quarter minutes and both crews eventually stopped. They then rowed from just above Beverly Brook to the University Stone, Cambridge starting a few feet up. Both crews were striking more than 40 in the first minute.

Cambridge were moving really well at 37 in the second minute and finished with about three-quarters-of-a-length of clear water in just over two minutes, but again Miss Shaw steered dangerously close and there was nearly another clash.

Oxford survived a scare earlier in the day when they were involved in a collision on their way to the river, but the only damage done was a dent to their transit van.

They had two easy outings, to the Old Ship, Hammersmith and back in the morning and then doing some starts and a two-minute piece with National Westminster Bank in the afternoon.

TODAY'S OUTINGS: Oxford 11 a.m. (Umpire's rehearsal) & 4.30 p.m. Cambridge: 11 a.m. & 4 p.m.

Waddle is ready to move on

By BILL MEREDITH

CHRIS WADDLE, 24, the Newcastle striker who made his England debut against Eire last week, is all set to leave St James's Park at the end of the season.

He has rejected the offer of a new one-year contract after being substituted against Sheffield Wednesday last Saturday.

After that match, which Wednesday won 4-2, Jack Charlton, the Newcastle manager, said: "His performance was rubbish. I took him off because he was totally ineffective.

"While he has a lot of ability he will not become a great player unless his attitude is right."

Tottenham will be one of the favourites for his signature. When Newcastle played at White Hart Lane earlier this season,

RUSH STRIKES AGAIN

Two goals from Ian Rush in the first half at Sunderland, and a third from John Wark, gave Liverpool a crucial three points to keep them within sight of Division One leaders Everton. Liverpool were in command almost throughout.

Peter Shreeves, the Spurs manager, enthused: "Waddle is obviously a world-class player."

Gerry Ryan, the Brighton striker, who broke his left leg against Crystal Palace on Tuesday night, is likely to remain in hospital for a fortnight and in plaster for three months.

Coventry, severely hit by injuries and influenza, may ask the Football League to postpone two crucial Easter games against Luton and Stoke. Both matches could have a big bearing on the First Division relegation question.

Bournemouth's Third Division home match with Millwall will now be played on Wednesday, May 8 at 6 p.m. by "mutual consent." The fixture was originally scheduled for Bank Holiday Monday, May 6.

Brian Tiler, managing director of Bournemouth, said yesterday: "We are delighted with the complete co-operation of Millwall. It will still be an all-ticket match, but Millwall will not be taking up their allocation."

EVERTON EDGE FURTHER AHEAD OF SPURS

By DONALD SAUNDERS

Tottenham ... 1 Everton ... 2

AN early goal by Andy Gray and another by Trevor Steven, after an hour, pointed Everton towards a crucial victory over Tottenham at White Hart Lane last night. But then Graham Roberts pulled one back for Spurs to make it 2-1, after 74 minutes.

After Everton had given themselves the perfect start with an early goal, the match developed into a fierce battle, as Spurs tried to close the narrow gap and their opponents resisted purposefully.

The goal, in the 10th minute, was simplicity itself. Southall began the move by making full use of a following wind to punt the ball almost to the edge of Tottenham's penalty box.

On a normal night Miller probably would have cleared without too much difficulty. But on this important occasion, the Spurs' centre-half panicked under pressure from Sharp, tried to head the ball too quickly, and merely put it straight into the path of Gray, who promptly thumped it into the back of the net.

Not surprisingly, it took Tottenham some time to recover from this early shock. Indeed, with Reid, Sheedy and Steven working busily and smoothly in midfield, Everton threatned to take command.

Neat touches

So Tottenham applied ever-increasing pressure on Everton's calm, experienced and well-organised defence.

With a little better finishing, the Londoners might have drawn level before half time. Instead, Hoddle slipped a quick shot wide and saw another turned aside by the agile Southall and Falco failed to make the most of a difficult, close range chance—first with his head and then with a misplaced shot.

With so much at stake, occasional physical clashes were inevitable. Mountfield was booked by the referee after a foul on Hoddle, and the referee made Roberts and Gray shake hands after they had bitterly disputed a high ball in midfield.

Spurs refused to give up and, in the 73rd minute, earned due reward for their spirit, when Roberts put them back in the game by hammering the ball home from 20 yards.

The strain both teams were clearly feeling was amply demonstrated soon after the interval, their lead with a gross defensive error as Miller commited in the first half.

Severe pressure

There was now a fierce determination about Tottenham's football, and Everton's defence came under severe pressure. In their efforts, however, to keep the momentum going the Londoners did leave themselves open to quick counter attacks. One of these ended with Roberts conceding an indirect freekick inside his own penalty box for obstruction.

Another offered Sheedy a difficult chance to put Everton further in front, but he mishit the ball wide.

Spurs failed to heed the warning, and in the 60th minute paid the penalty. A quick clearance to Steven, who raced up field, by Sharp caught young Bowen off guard, and he lost possession took the ball round the helpless Clemence and planted Everton's second goal in the net.

This goal came only two minutes after Everton decided to tighten up their midfield by withdrawing Gray from the front line, switching Steven to the centre and sending Harper, the substitute, on to the field to take up station on the right side of midfield.

IPSWICH'S QUICK GOALS STING WBA

By ROGER MALONE

West Bromwich 1, Ipswich 2

EARLY goals from Kevin Wilson and Mitch D'Avray pointed a delighted Ipswich towards First Division survival, before West Bromwich settled to frequent periods of pressure, unrewarded, however by the interval.

Ipswich began last night in bottom but one position, five points behind the side above them, Luton. But two goals and almost two more in the opening half-hour, must have come like a lifeline to a drowning man.

Wilson first snapped up a Robertson back-pass which lacked weight, then outwitted Whitehead on the left wing before placing a perfect centre for D'Avray to knock home.

Brennan's 25-yard effort clipped the top of the crossbar and Butcher's superb diving header was brilliantly saved by Godden, otherwise West Bromwich, a mid-table side of uneven progress this season, would have been in even more trouble.

Defence distracted

Valentine's numerous centres from the right were well resisted by Osman and Cranson, and when Thompson, invariably so formidable in the air, got a touch, always it went near enough for Cooper to catch or deflect.

After replacing Cross with Grealish after 67 minutes, West Bromwich at last broke through nine minutes later. Forsyth moved down the left and crossed. Hunt arrived from midfield, and with Thompson's leap distracting Ipswich's central defence, headed home from inside the six yard area.

Ipswich.—Cooper; Burley, Cranson, Zondervan, Osman, Butcher, McCall, Brennan, Wilson, D'Avray, Gates.

Haylock slips as Norwich hold on

By A Special Correspondent

Norwich City ... 1, Sheffield Wednesday ... 1

AN own goal by Paul Haylock denied Norwich City full points at Carrow Road last night when they had to be satisfied with a draw.

Norwich had the ball in the net again seven minutes later through striker John Deehan but he was disallowed for offside.

Wednesday did not threaten until after a quarter of an hour when midfielder Andy Blair nearly caught out Chris Woods with a clever chip but it landed on top of the net.

Then at the other end Hartford missed a golden chance to increase Norwich's lead but he blasted wide from 10 yards.

Seeking a place in Europe, Wednesday drew level in the 31st minute. A cross from Brian Marwood was urned into his own net by Paul Haylock.

Then two minutes from the interval Woods was lucky to escape when he missed a cross but Mick Lyons' header was turned wide.

Norwich midfielder, Peter Mendham, failed to appear in the second half. He was stretchered off after a clash with Wednesday's defender, Peter Shirtliff, a couple of minutes before half-time.

Wednesday goalkeeper, Martin Hodge, came to his side's rescue after renewed Norwich pressure pulling off a magnificent save from Barham's fiercely-struck close drive.

Six minutes later, Wednesday came close when striker Varadi flicked a Worthington cross past a post.

After 70 minutes, Wednesday were awarded a penalty following a hand ball by Norwich captain Dave Watson but Andy Blair blasted the kick over the bar.

MILLWALL SURGE

Derby County 1, Millwall 2

MILLWALL continued their drive for the Second Division with a 2-1 victory at the Baseball Ground last night.

A massive police contingent was still turfing small pockets of Millwall support out of the stands and onto a specially reserved area of terracing when Derby took a sixth minute lead.

A weak punch by Sutton three minutes later led to Millwall's equaliser. Smith hooked the ball back into the goalmouth for Cusack to power in an unchallenged header.

Millwall had Hinshelwood sent off in the 79th minute for an off-the-ball offence but snatched victory two minutes from the end when Lowndes ran 40 yards to score with a shot Sutton could only deflect into his net.

Derby Co.—Sutton; Streete, Buckley, Lewis, Hindmarch, Blades, Micklewhite, Christie, Davison, Williams, Robertson.

RUMANIA'S STRONG SIGNAL

By A Special Correspondent

RODION CAMATARU, the Rumanian striker, sent a two-goal warning to England in Craiova yesterday, when his team beat Turkey 3-0 in a Group Three World Cup qualifying match.

England travel to Rumania on May 1 for a crucial group game, and it is clear their defence will have to keep a close watch on the lively Camataru.

Rumania were obviously too strong for the Turks, who have now lost all three of their group matches and conceded 13 goals in the process, scoring only once.

Gheorghe Hagi opened the scoring for Rumania in the 21st minute and then Camataru weighed in with his two goals in the 28th and 41st minutes. There was no further scoring, though Ilie Balaci missed a penalty for Rumania six minutes from time.

In Budapest, Hungary increased their lear at the top of Group Five with a not-too-convincing 2-0 home victory over Cyprus.

The Hungarians were hanging on to a slender single-goal lead, scored by Jozsef Kardos just after the interval, until Laszlo Szokolia made the score more respectable with a second goal seven minutes from the end.

Cyprus, who are still pointless after five games, relied on tough defensive tactics—and had three players booked.

The referee of a First Division match in Switzerland between St. Gallen and Neuchatel Xamax had to be evacuated from the ground by helicopter after sending off one of the home team and then refusing them a penalty late in the game.

Irate supporters laid siege to his dressing room after the game, and an official said: "The referee was still trapped an hour after the game so we decided to fly him out by helicopter."

Gola League

WEALDSTONE TAKE STRAIN

By PETER ERNEST

Four Gola League teams in contention for the championship turn their thoughts to Wembley on Saturday when they play first-leg ties in the semi-finals of the F.A. Trophy.

Altrincham (52 points), who briefly lost the leadership to Wealdstone (51) on Sunday, take on ninth-placed Boston United (41) at home, boosted by last Monday's 2-1 win at Kettering which put them back to top.

Wealdstone, whose excellent run of five wins in nine days regained them the No. 1 spot for 32 hours, make the short trip to Enfield, who are seventh in the table, 10 points behind Altrincham with three games in hand.

But both Middlesex teams lost 2-0 in midweek away games at Runcorn (Wealdstone) and Telford (Enfield). Boston also lost in midweek, to a goal by Eddie Bishop at Northwich, and will be looking to improve their form in order to make the Wembley final on May 11.

Lazarus leaves

Already through to the final of the Bob Lord Trophy are Maidstone, whose goal by Paul Lazarus enabled them to topple Enfield, and Runcorn, who beat Altrincham 2-1 with goals from Mark Carter and Alan Crompton.

Maidstone, who stage the first leg of the final on Wednesday, April 24, have no injury problems for the home match with Kidderminster on Saturday, but this week lost three players to foreign clubs. Lazarus has gone to Finland; Phil Driver is set for Sweden; and Billy Hughes is going to South Africa.

Runcorn have a busy Easter, away to third-placed Dartford on Saturday and playing host to Telford on Monday. "Unfortunately, injuries have been our biggest problem this year," said John Williams, the Runcorn manager, "and it was difficult just getting a team together at Wealdstone last Saturday."

Fourth-placed Bath, 46 points from 31 games, take a 1-0 lead into the second leg of the Somerset Senior Cup final after beating Yeovil with a Gary Smith goal on Tuesday. On Saturday they visit Telford and are at home to Weymouth on Monday.

Coventry run riot against Rugby

By MICHAEL AUSTIN

Coventry ... 66 pts, Rugby ... 0

GRAHAM ROBBINS, the Coventry and Midland No. 8, celebrated his 200th appearance with three tries as Rugby's fledgling side was outclassed at Coundon Road last night.

Robbins, having begun the scoring with a pushover try, later exposed Rugby's constant defensive frailties with a second from a driving run and then added another pushover.

Rugby, trailing by 34 points at half-time, found some refuge afterwards in the rain, but deteriorating conditions did not prevent Coventry from achieving a record win in an ancient fixture.

Rugby baffled

Coventry's victory by seven goals and six tries showed the gulf between the sides in experience, skill, speed and physical presence. Three days earlier, Coventry had overwhelmed Ebbw Vale 55-10.

Rugby, with only five wins and 21 tries scored this season, were baffled by the power of Coventry's pack and by penetrative running, especially from Buttimore.

Bend, Rugby's left wing, showed occasional touches of panache, but their problems were compounded by showing dissent at decisions by Terry Friend, the Leicestershire referee, who had awarded a penalty try following obstruction on Makey.

Bevan and Hall each scored two tries, with others from Royle, Brain, Travers, Ralston and Thomas, a former Rugby captain, who also landed six conversions. Ralston converted his own try.

Coventry.—H. Bevan; C. Royle, C. Ralston, T. Buttimore, S. Hall; M. Lakey, S. Thomas; L. Johnson, S. Brain, S. Wilkes, A. Gulliver, G. Warrington, M. Trumper, R. Travers, G. Robbins.

Rugby: D. Coulter; N. Griffin, K. Greatrex, M. Murch, C. Bend; G. Rossborough, A. Dougherty; C. Neal, A. Hughes, N. Riley, A. Scott, J. Hadley, N. Maplecroft, J. Johnson, M. Aland.

Manchester Utd scramble on

By DENIS LOWE

Manchested Utd. ... 2, Leicester ... 1

A CLEVERLY taken 38th-minute goal by Gary Lineker, Leicester's high-scoring England striker, gave his club a surprise first-half lead after Manchester United, out to increase pressure on Everton and Spurs had been in almost total control.

Leicester, who have not won at Old Trafford for 10 years, were soon pushed back into defence as Robson, Whiteside and Olsen searched for openings, while Andrews kept out early efforts by Hughes and Gidman.

Strachan, with a low shot, and Stapleton, with a powerful angled drive, were next to test Andrews—and Robson, in the clear five yards out, then stabbed Gidman's centre wide after a smart three-man move.

Coolly-taken goal

The Manchester defence was caught flat-footed when Banks played the ball in, and Lineker held off Hogg and Gidman to slip the ball coolly past the advancing Bailey for his 25h goal of the season.

O'Neill and Williams coninued to defend resolutely as United forced a succession of corners—12 before the inervalt.

Lineker, whose pace often worried Manchester, coul dnot put enough power behind his shot when the hardworking Wilson gave him a 53rd minute chance. United replied, Whiteside an dHughes recording near misses.

United drew level in 69 minutes following Olsen's corner on the right. Stapleton flicked the ball on and Robson stormed in at the far post to force the ball over the line—his 10th goal this season.

Leicester again threatened—Bailey did well to keep out a drive by aBnks—but Andrews remained the busier goalkeeper, dealing with a number of awkward crosses in style and denying Hughes from close in.

O'Neill, trying to push the ball back to Andrews, handed Stapleton the simplest of goals for United's winner in the 84th minute. Stapleton went around the helpless goalkeeper to score just when Leicester's spirited defensive work seemed to have deserved a point.

Manchester Utd. — Bailey; Gidman, Albiston, Whiteside, McGrath, Hogg, Robson, Strachan, Hughes, Stapleton, Olsen.

Leicester.—Andrews, Feeley, Wilson, R. Smith, Williams, O'Neill, Lynex, Lineker, A. Smith, Ramsey, Banks.

ENGLAND PICK TWO COACHES FOR NZ TOUR

By JOHN MASON

ENGLAND, whose seven-match tour of New Zealand in May and June will be managed by Derek Morgan, the chairman of selectors, have invited two coaches, Martin Green and Brian Ashton, to accompany them, the R F U announced yesterday.

Richard Greenwood, England's coach for the past two seasons, is not available because of a new business appointment on May 1. He will have charge of the squad in the remaining international, against Wales in Cardiff on April 20.

Green, a flank-forward, was Cambridge's captain in 1967 and played in three University matches. He is the England Under-25 coach and coached the Midlands Division when they beat the All Blacks last winter. He, like Ashton, is a schoolmaster.

Ashton, a scrum-half, who went to Australia with England in 1975, will work with the backs. He is the England Colts coach and this season has assisted the side to defeat Italy and Wales. The remaining Colts match is in Franch against a national selection on April 20.

Mr Morgan, greatly experienced and diplomatic in handling England players abroad, has taken national teams to Rumania, Italy and France in addition to managing the full international side in Argentina and South Africa.

"Martin Green will be the senior coach," Mr Morgan explained yesterday. "Brian will be dealing with the backs as he has done in some of our sessions this season. Australia used two coaches with Alec Evans helping Alan Jones, and it seemed to work very well.

Derek Morgan, England's tour manager.

"We're able to give every player technical advice and we think this input is a positive contribution. I think the demands of the players in New Zealand will be even greater than they were in South Africa last summer.

"There will be no let-up in any fixtures this time. But there has been a good spirit in the England camp this season and we need to keep that going."

The tour party of 26 will be announced a week today, two days after the team to play Wales has been chosen. But for the postponed internations—England were twice involved—the selection processes would have been completed after the Calcutta Cup on March 16.

Absent regulars

Rory Underwood, because of R A F duties, and Kevin Simms and Rob Andrew, because of university examinations, are not expected to tour, while three more players on England's short-list have not yet confirmed availability because of job and holiday problems.

Green was not available yesterday as he is on holiday. But Ashton, who teaches at Stonyhurst, where Greenwood is leaving his post as assistant bursar, said: "It's certainly in at the deep end, but I think that's the best end to start."

No doctor will be travelling with the party which leaves on May 12. The physiotherapist is Alan Bell (West Hartlepool), who had similar duties with the Under-25 side in Spain last May, a tour Green missed because of school duties at Warwick.

NEW LOOK TAMWORTH FIND FORM

By MICHAEL AUSTIN

TAMWORTH, having overcome the loss of five players to Nuneaton this season, are thriving again on and off the field under the captaincy of Keith Griffiths, a centre.

Despite not winning a match until mid-October, Tamworth now have 18 virtories and a draw in 23 games, a remarkable transformation.

Most clubs would have despaired when losing three backs, Chris Massey, Chris Archer and John Shroeffer, and two forwards, Ian Wass and Baz Parker, to senior rugby, but Tamworth buckled down to a rescue operation, with lofty assistance.

Better fixtures

Two locks, Mark Ison, formerly of Coventry and Moseley, and David Heaney, rejoined Tamworht whose conquests have since included Stafford, Westworth whose conquests have Newark, Dudley, Kingswinford and Sutton Coldfield.

Next season Tamworth will lose Roger John, 24, a former Llanelli wing and Wales Schools sprinter, to Coventry but John Lassey, the Staffordshire club's secretary, said: "We have emerged from junior rugby and are entering the next stage with strengthened fixtures."

Peterborough can thank a goal-kicking hooker, Tim Meston, for their first appearance in the John Player Cup next season. His last kick penalty goal beat Stewarts and Lloyds 12-10 in the East Midlands Cup final this week.

MIXED BAG FOR McKEE

By ROBERT KITSON

Even by his own standards, Andy McKee, the record-breaking Alleynians wing, is enjoying one of the more eventful weeks of his short career.

On Saturday he scored all five tries in his side's 26-12 win over Reigatians to boost his tally to 25 for the season, the highest number in Alleynians' long history.

The following day he helped the club win the Emanuel 75th Anniversary Sevens tournament, after partially dislocating his shoulder in the quarter-finals.

Despite his injury, McKee refused to leave the action and played in both the semi-finals and final of the competition, in which Alleynians beat the hosts 18-12.

His bravery could backfire on him, though, as he is unlikely to play any part in his club's three-match Easter tour to East Anglia which starts tomorrow.

BANCROFT AIMS TO KEEP LEAD

Jonathan Bancroft, 22, needs to win the third round of the Townsend Thoresen R A C British Formula Ford 1600 Championship at Silverstone on Easter Monday to maintain his points lead in the series.

But he faces stern competition from car dealer Mark Blundell, 18, of Hertfordshire, also in a Van Diemen RF85, winner of two races already at the circuit. Also in contention is Damon Hill, son of twice former world champion Graham.

With 23 cars — the largest entry so far for the European Formula 3000 Championship—and other good entries for the supporting Marlboro British Formula Three races, an interesting day also lies in store at Thruxton on the same day.

NEW YORK GP POSSIBLE

Organisers of the first Formula One Grand Prix scheduled for New York City on September 29, are winding their way through a myriad of local regulations.

A spokesman for the New York Grand Prix said yesterday that the public hearing on Monday about the environmental impact of the race on the city was just another step in an 18-month-long study to prepare a final report some time after April 15.

The report will be submitted to the New York Commissioner of Parks, Henry Stern. If he approves the race being held on the former World Fair grounds in the district of Queens, financial negotiations will enter their final stage.

Haslam to ride at Donington

By GEORGE TURNBULL

RON HASLAM, who has just gained his road licence, should lead the Commonwealth team to victory against the Americans at the weekend in the Shell Oils Transatlantic Trophy match at Donington Park.

Doubts about Haslam's riding were dispelled when late negotiations resolved a financial dispute between the country's leading rider and the match race organisers.

In the 14-year history of this colourful event, the home team have won nine times to the Americans' five, and again the visitors are the underdogs.

Last year they scored a crushing victory with their best-ever team, but they will be considerably weakened this time through the absence of Kenny Roberts, Freddie Spencer and world champion Eddie Lawson.

Confident Mamola

Randy Mamola, the American captain, believes, however, that they have a good chance of success and that the teams are well matched. "We may lack a couple of big names but we have ability in depth," he said.

The six match races worth £60,000 are only part of the splendid three-day meeting. It also includes the World of Sport Superbike Challenge, the opening rounds of the 250, 500 and sidecar European Championships, the Shell Oils A C U Formula 1 Championship and the new M C N Superstock series.

For enthusiasts who cannot get to the Leicestershire circuit many of Britain's top riders will be appearing at Brands Hatch tomorrow and at Oulton Park on Monday in the popular Transnational series.

Racing at Donington begins on Saturday and the teams are:

Commonwealth. — R. Haslam, M. Grant, R. McElnea, R. Marshall, W. Gardner, R. Burnett, G. Lingham, S. Parrish.

HARDCASTLE FOR CANADA

Sarah Hardcastle has accepted an invitation to take part in the Esso International in Montreal, April 18-21, when she will tackle six long stamina testing races.

This flying trip will complete 17 days of concentrated competition starting with a 10-event programme at the Hewlett-Packard National short course championships at Wythenshawe, Manchester, from tomorrow until Monday.

In between, Hardcastle, a double Olympic freestyle medallist, will fit in an appearance for Britain against Sweden at Blackpool, April 12-13.

The Manchester meeting is her last chance to break British junior figures for on Tuesday she will be 16 and out of this category.

The mark Hardcastle would like to claim before her birthday is the oldest junior one in the book, the 2min. 17·77sec. for 200 metres medley set by the 1980 Olympic silver medallist, Sharron Davies, seven years ago.

12 30 NEWS, WEATHER. 12.57 Regional News (London and South East only: Financial Report and News). 1 Pebbie Mill at One, with Sarah Greene meeting the Gateshead Music Collective, Peter Seabrook on gardening and Bill Evkva considering a garden at the P.M. house. 1.45 Trumpton, repeat.

2 00 "THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE" (1936, b/w)—The earlier one with Errol Flynn which was an even bigger travesty of history than the 1968 film. A good piece of fictional entertainment, all the same, "a splendid gung-ho adventure" as one critic put it, with no nonsense about the evils of the military mind. Also starring Olivia de Havilland and, well down, David Niven. 3.53 (not London) Regional News.

3 55 MOP AND SMIFF — Mike Amatt starting a new ten-part series about a village cat and dog. 4.10 Ivor the Engine, rpt. 4.15 Jigsaw, rpt. 4.30 Bananaman. 4.35 Dogtanian and the Three Muskehounds. 4.55 John Craven's Newsround. 5.5 Blue Peter: Horses on Parade! 3 50 "FOLLOW ME" (1971)—Uneasy, not too successful Carol Reed film from the Peter Shaffer one-act play, The Public Eye, with Topol (it's his day today on BBC 2) as a private detective hired by Michael Jayston to check on his wife (Mia Farrow). 5.20 News, Weather. 5.25 The Show Me Show.

6 00 THE INVADERS—The Spores. They are alien "seedlings" in a stolen suitcase. Readers are asking if the BBC could not give the number of each episode and the final total, if known. Are they in the right order? All I can say is that the series was made as far back as 1967.

7 25 O'DONNELL INVESTIGATES . . . BOOZE — Second programme by Dr. Michael O'Donnell on how drinks continue to go up and down, not always in accordance with the licensing authorities' last orders.

7 50 OURS TO KEEP—Living on the Past. This last of the series shows York before and after the Minster fire. A good market town, a city of museums, needing to retain much of the past but needing, also, to cope with today's traffic and other problems.

8 30 TOPOL'S ISRAEL—In his second programme Topol returns to the Geva kibbutz where he spent his 17th year and was then recruited into an army entertainment troupe. A most likeable man, compassionate, many talented, lively, tolerant, but he may have to be more than all that to fill six programmes as stretched out as this.

9 00 YES MINISTER — The Bed of Nails. Repeat. (Ceefax.)

9 30 FORTY MINUTES—Whatever Happened to Baby Paul? A perilous documentary to write about because the answers are not known. How did Joanna Morgan's baby son get his fractured arm, then fractured legs? Wandsworth Social Services heard her denials but placed him in a foster home. She has become very angry as the fight to regain him drags on. A classic case of circumstantial evidence.

8 30 MINDER—Diamonds Are a Girl's Worst Enemy. Terry has to mind an old enemy's Mercedes, then it disappears. Repeat.

10 00 NEWS AT TEN; followed by Thames News Headlines.

11 30 LOOKS FAMILIAR—Repeat.

12 15-12.25 THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS—Gluttony. Discussed by students.

Channel 4

2 30 p.m. "BATAAN" (1943, b/w) — Robert Taylor, George Murphy and Thomas Mitchell heading a small group of American soldiers left on the Pacific island to fight the Japanese. Both heroic and naive. 4.30 Hey Good Looking! Post Modern Architecture. 4.45 Dangerous Journey: The Valley of the Shadow of Death.

5 10 "THE BATTLE OF RUSSIA" (1943, b/w)—Documentary produced by Frank Capra, directed by Anatole Litvak, recalling early attempts to invade Russia, then on to Hitler's offensive with 200 divisions. 6.35 "You Nazty Spy" (1940, b/w): Three Stooges comedy.

7 00 CHANNEL FOUR NEWS—At 7.50 Comment and Weather.

8 00 MIRROR IMAGE—David Essex Live at the Albert Hall. The term "recorded live" becomes daily more meaningless.

9 00 POOKIESNACKENBURGER IN RESTORATION COMICS—Start of a new five-programme musical comedy series by the busking group's six members.

9 30 MAX HEADROOM—Science-fantasy film about the world's first computer-generated TV presenter, set in the near future. With Matt Frewer and Nickolas Grace.

10 35 DESIGN MATTERS—Capital Spaces or Capital Places? Comparing two London areas, the delightfully re-built Covent Garden with the grey, forbidding concrete of The South Bank. But anyone looking for "the old community spirit" won't find it in either place, priced out north of the river and frightened off by the brutal jungle in the south.

11 05-12.30 SAMUEL BECKETT: SILENCE TO SILENCE—Documentary film on the artistic life of Beckett, shot in Dublin and Paris, with extracts performed by Jack McGowran, Patrick Magee and Billie Whitelaw.

1 10 "THE AMAZING CAPTAIN NEMO" (1978)—First shown as a TV series, Jules Verne's famous character (Jose Ferrer) is found alive but in suspended animation. He is revived and joins the fight against the evil professor (Burgess Meredith).

2 50 DONALD DUCK'S 50TH BIRTHDAY—Celebrated with Dick van Dyke. (Ceefax.)

3 35 "THE WATER BABIES" (1978)—Mixed production (Britain and Poland) and media (animation and live) from the Charles Kingsley tale of another sort of underwater adventures, those of a little chimney sweep. With James Mason, Billie Whitelaw, Bernard Cribbins, Joan Greenwood and David Tomlinson. (Ceefax.) 5.10 Circus of Youth, from the Robert Brothers Big Top.

6 00 NEWS, WEATHER. At 6.10 Regional News.

6 15 DRIVING FORCE—Showbiz personalities and professional drivers testing their skills in a variety of vehicles.

7 00 A SONG FOR EUROPE 1985—The final eight contenders for the honour of representing the U.K. in the Eurovision Song Contest, introduced, of course, by Terry Wogan.

8 30 ★ DAD'S ARMY—Getting the Bird. Repeat. (Ceefax.)

9 00 NEWS, WEATHER.

10 15 THE ROAD TO THE CROSS—With the BBC Welsh Chorus and readings by Martin Jarvis and Gabrielle Drake.

10 55 THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. JOHN.

11 15 "GASLIGHT" (1944, b/w). — Hollywood version of the Patrick Hamilton play about a man driving his wife insane, not half as good as the British version of 1939 but Ingrid Bergman still won an Oscar. The story remains good; with Charles Boyer and Joseph Cotten. 1.5 Weather. (Wales: 11.15 Sioe Siarad. 11.25 "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951 b/w sci-fi drama): Michael Rennie, Patricia Neal. 12.55 News, Weather.)

BBC-2

11 25 a.m. "TOM SAWYER" (1973)—Wholesome version of the Mark Twain classic, aimed at children, with music. With Johnnie Whitaker, Celeste Holm, Jeff East, Warren Oates and Jodie Foster. 1 Long Point: repeat of a film about wildlife on the shore of Lake Erie. 1.50 Gardeners' World, from Barnsdale, with Geoff Hamilton and John Kelly on Easter tasks.

2 20 ★"LES ENFANTS DU PARADIS" (1945, b/w)—Marcel Carné's marvellous film of Paris in the 1840s, particularly the theatrical life, shown this afternoon in two parts. With Arletty, Jean-Louis Barrault, Pierre Brasseur and Marcel Herrand. 3.55 Chateaux de Sable: Peter Wiersma's 100 cities of sand.

4 05 ★"LES ENFANTS DU PARADIS"—Part two. 5.30 The Joy Adamson Story, repeat. (Ceefax.)

6 15 ★ MASS IN B MINOR BY J. S. BACH—Recorded at the Royal Albert Hall last month with the Prince of Wales and the Duchess of Kent in the choir, in the presence of the Duke of Kent, Chairman of the U.K. Committee of European Music Year. Conducted by Sir David Willcocks, with Felicity Lott, Catherine Wyn-Rogers, Maldwyn Davies, Stephen Roberts, The Bach Choir and the English Chamber Orchestra.

8 45 HARTY GOES TO . . . MONACO — He spends the Easter weekend there, tonight talking with Princess Caroline.

9 15 TO THE WORLD'S END — Scenes and Characters on a London Bus Route. The No. 31 to be exact, from Camden Town to Chelsea. 10.5 Animation Now.

10 15 "AVANTI!" (1972)—Black romantic comedy written and directed by Billy Wilder, with Jack Lemmon as an American visiting Italy and soon deeply involved in not only a matter of family honour but a love affair of his own. Much too long, but some critics judged it badly underrated. 12.35 Weather.

ITV Thames/LWT

6 15 a.m. GOOD MORNING BRITAIN. 9.25 Sesame Street. 10.25 BMX Beat: free-style championships.

10 50 "FLASH GORDON, THE GREATEST ADVENTURE OF ALL" (1981)—TV film, a feature-length cartoon. News from a far off alien source rocks the world. 12.30 According to Saint Matthew, narrated by Michael Pennington. (Oracle.)

1 00 NEWS. 1.5 Sindy and Barbie, with Love: documentary on marketing the dolls.

2 00 "THE FIRST GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY" (1978)—Victorian crime caper of a gold bullion robbery from the Folkestone express in 1855, with Sean Connery, Donald Sutherland and Lesley-Anne Down. (Oracle.) 4.5 Disney Cartoon: Clock Cleaners, made in 1937.

4 15 THE MAKING OF INDIANA JONES — Described by the director Steven Spielberg. 5.15 Blockbusters.

5 45 NEWS.

6 00 THE MAGIC OF DAVID COPPERFIELD—The American illusionist, plus Bonnie Tyler.

7 00 THE PRACTICE—I'll Have Him in Court for This. The row is over the unborn child of Janis Jones, aged 15. (Oracle.)

7 30 FAMILY FORTUNES—Presented by Max Bygraves.

8 00 "ROLLERCOASTER" (1977)—Slightly dense disaster film in which a saboteur causes disasters at fairgrounds and demands a million dollars to pack it in. George Segal as an inspector, plus the normally more discriminating Henry Fonda, Timothy Bottoms, Richard Widmark and Susan Strasberg. (Oracle.)

10 00 NEWS AT TEN; followed by London News Headlines.

10 15 THE SOUTH BANK SHOW—Olivier Messiaen: The Music of Faith. Film profile of the contemporary composer in which he talks about his life and influences, and his music is performed.

11 45 SOUTH OF WATFORD—Ben Elton visits the ski-town of Val d'Isère. Last of the present series.

12 15-12.25 THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS—Anger. Discussed by students.

Channel 4

2 30 p.m. MASTER BRIDGE—Repeat. 3 Winter Sunlight: episode four, repeat. 3.55 Cartoon Carnival. 4.25 Hey Good Looking! Milton Keynes—architecture. 4.40 Dangerous Journey: Vanity Fair.

5 00 THE TUBE—A special two-hour Good Friday edition, looking back over some of the best moments of shows in the past six months, including nearly 20 groups and singers.

7 00 ATHOS—The Holy Mountain. In the oldest surviving Christian monastic centre, on a peninsula in the northern Aegean Sea where cameras are allowed, it is said, for the first time. Preceded by News and Weather.

8 00 TREASURE HUNT SPECIAL—Ned Sherrin takes over and makes Kenneth Kendall and Anneka Rice the contestants with the runners in, around and over London.

9 00 THE COSBY SHOW—A Shirt Story. Pleasant American sit-com with Bill Cosby as the father of four.

9 30 7 UP—Repeat of the original Granada documentary from 1964 which showed the group of 14 seven-year-old boys and girls and asked them about their future hopes. The later two parts will follow.

10 15 ★ CHEERS—An American Family. Carla's ex-husband returns with his new wife and demands their son.

10 45-12.20 "WHILE I LIVE" (1947, b/w)—This romantic melodrama owed so much to its theme music that it was re-issued in 1950 as "The Dream of Olwen"—a fair assessment of its relative merits. Set, inevitably, in Cornwall, it is the novelettish story of a woman (Sonia Dresdel) who believes a young girl who has lost her memory is actually her own sister whom she drove to death. With Tom Walls and Clifford Evans.

★★ Outstanding. ★ Recommended.

HURD DAMPENS ULSTER DEAL SPECULATION

By JAMES WIGHTMAN Political Correspondent

MR HURD, Northern Ireland Secretary, yesterday described "the four specific elements of British policy" including talks with the Dublin Government, in a speech trying to counter speculation about a breakthrough on Ulster being imminent.

He placed "the dialogue with the Republic" third behind security policy and talks with the Ulster political parties, and ahead of economic policy.

He was addressing the Federation of Conservative Students' conference in Loughborough the day after his return from the United States where he appealed to Americans not to help the IRA by giving funds to Noraid.

Mr Hurd emphasised yesterday that there was nothing going on between the British and Irish Governments which was secret or which would change Ulster's constitutional position in the United Kingdom.

In his speech, prepared before the latest IRA bomb attack in Newry, Mr Hurd referred twice to the Dublin Government.

He linked it with the United States in saying that it was essential for Britain to enlist its co-operation in securing "a robust security policy."

Then he said that the dialogue with the Republic had unique issued after the Chequers Summit last year between Mrs Thatcher and Dr Fitzgerald, Irish Prime Minister.

He added: "To those who have read that communique or followed later Parliamentary answers and Ministerial visits, there has never been any secret about this dialogue or about the framework within which it is conducted.

"The dialogue is in harmony with the constitutional guarantee to the people of Northern Ireland and it is in the interests of Northern Ireland as a whole that the dialogue should succeed."

Newspaper 'flurries'

Referring to recent newspaper reports about Mrs Thatcher being close to an historic breakthrough on Ulster, he said: "Every now and then there comes a flurry of speculation about British policy in Northern Ireland. There are beguiling reports about fresh initiatives, secret plans, imminent breakthroughs.

"This speculation appeals to those who believe against the evidence that somewhere there is a single key which would fit a single lock and open a single door to a solution of the Irish problem. When the flurry dies down it is found that the main thrust of British policy continues unchanged.

"That is not because we are satisfied with the condition of Northern Ireland. Of course we are not. Despite the undoubted progress which has been made, no sensible person could be satisfied with the condition of Northern Ireland."

Satisfaction would not come, he said, until terrorism had been eradicated, there was a reasonable partnership within Northern Ireland between the elected representatives of the constitutional parties, there was a solid relationship with the Republic, and the present tragic level of unemployment was brought down.

KIT KAT BAN

By R. BARRY O'BRIEN

The 88-year-old York-based firm with Quacker and Liberal associations said yesterday that it had informed the G L C that there was no discrimination against women, racial minorities or the disabled in its 17,000-strong workforce.

But it was not prepared to fill in the G L C's questionnaire form because it did not see any need for it.

"We stand firmly behind what we have already said to the G L C that this company has long practised a policy of equal opportunity for all staff without discrimination by sex, political view, creed or colour," a spokesman said.

"We do not believe there should be any requirement for the completion of such a document as the GLC questionnaire in a commercial tender."

Under a new policy introduced by the GLC last year firms supplying goods and services have been required to apply for retention on the approved list of contractors and suppliers to keep their contracts with the council.

Completion of the questionnaire, officially known as the "retention form," has been made a compulsory part of the procedure.

Firms are asked what type of business they are in, the number of people they employ and the composition of the workforce.

They are required to state how many black Afro-Caribbeans, black Asians, white Europeans and other ethnic groups are employed in different categories of staff listed as professional, junior administrative, skilled manual and so on.

The questionnaire asks: "What specific steps has your firm taken as a result of the Sex Discrimination and Race Relations Act to ensure equal opportunities are provided for women and ethnic minorities within your company?"

Firms are asked to give brief details and enclose "any relevant documents" such as advertisements for jobs.

Disabled ruling

Companies are asked what methods they use to fill vacancies, whether jobs are advertised in newspapers and on notice boards and if their employees are told about vacancies.

The form reminds companies that the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act, 1944, requires firms employing 20 or more people to have at least three per cent. of the workforce as disabled people.

A question says: "If you employ 20 or more do you meet the three per cent. quota and if not can you explain why not?"

The G L C said yesterday at its supply department bought £180-million worth of goods and services in 1983-84, and it was working through the list of 20,000 suppliers. All had not yet been sent the form.

Robertson's lost a £2,000 contract for the supply of marmalade to G L C old people's homes because Labour councillors complained that the firm's long-established golliwog emblem was raciest

AIR PASSENGER'S 12,000-MILE SLIP

By Our New York Staff

A young American returning home from a European holiday boarded what he thought was a local flight for Oakland, California, but ended up 12,000 miles away in Auckland, New Zealand, it emerged yesterday.

Michael Lewis, 21, was changing planes at Los Angeles when he misheard an announcement that the Auckland flight was departing. The agent failed to check his boarding pass and it was ten minutes after the Air New Zealand flight had left for the South Pacific that the mistake was discovered.

WORLD BAN ON RHEUMATIC DRUG

A leading pharmaceutical firm announced last night a worldwide ban of a potentially hazardous anti-rheumatic drug and severe restrictions on the use of another.

Ciba-Geigy of Switzerland said sales of Tanderil would be discontinued, while Butazolidin would become a "drug of second choice." Both drugs are in the bute family of painkillers, linked to 1,500 deaths in Britain since they were first marketed more than 20 years ago. Britain discontinued sales of Tanderil last year.

Spray-can tuition on rates

By JENNY SHIELDS

A NEW YORK graffiti artists comes to London on an all-expenses-paid trip next week, courtesy of Camden Council, to give free children's workshops in the art of the spray can.

"Brim," from the Bronx, is being flown over as part of the Shaw Theatre's "Rap Attack"—a 10-day celebration of the breakdance culture.

Apart from the 18-year-old graffiti artist, the theatre is also bringing over two New York disc jockeys and a "rapper"—a sophisticated smooth-talker who "raps" over the music popular with this street culture.

Mr Ian Bowater, the theatre director, says it will cost about £17,000. "Forty per cent. will come from our box office, but the rest is being funded from the G L C and I L E A Youth Festival and Camden Council's Race and Community Relations Committee."

But the graffiti workshops for youngsters aged between 10 and 15, have enraged one Islington councillor. Mr David Hyams, who yesterday called it "municipal vandalism on the rates" and said: "The last thing we need is to encourage children to spray slogans on walls."

Mr Bowater disagrees. "Graffiti art is a recognised, respected and established art form," he said.

SUBWAY TO GALLERY

Street artists' progress

TONY ALLEN-MILLS in New York writes: Graffiti art has long since left the New York subways for the bright open spaces of modern art galleries.

Although in Britain graffiti is most closely associated with slogans on walls, in America the best graffiti artists produce dazzling canvasses and striking cartoons.

When the Whitney Museum of Modern American Art opened its biennial review of current artistic trends last month, the exhibition included a huge graffiti mural by Kenny Scharf, perhaps the best of the graffiti artists.

Despite the respectability now conferred upon graffiti art, the painter's main tool remains the aerosol spray can. Any novice artist can spray a slogan on a laundry wall, but true aficionados are found of their technique.

GAS SCARE IN FATAL CRASH

By Our Staff Correspondent in Bonn

Three people were killed early yesterday and at least two injured in a motorway pile-up south of Freiburg, West Germany, involving a lorry carrying a load of chemicals that burst into flames and set off a poison gas alert.

About 100 motorists caught in the jam reported to local hospitals and clinics complaining of breathing difficulties. Police with loudhailers advised people in nearby Neuenburg to keep windows and doors closed until the noxious fumes had cleared.

NEXT ENVOY TO MOSCOW

By Our Diplomatic Correspondent

The Foreign Office confirmed yesterday that Mr Bryan Cartledge, 53, is to be Britain's next ambassador in Moscow. He is to replace Sir Iain Sutherland, who is retiring in July.

Mr Cartledge, who is currently working in the Cabinet Office, has previously served in Moscow and speaks fluent Russian. He is a former head of the Foreign Office's East European and Soviet Department and was ambassador to Hungary from 1980-83.

PRIZE FIGHT FLOPS

By EDWARD PEARCE

MR JARVIS ASTAIR and Mr Mickey Duff would not be where they are today if in a catch-weight contest at the Hippodrome, Great Driffield, they had matched Mr Tom King and Mr John Prescott.

The dullness of Mr King has pandemic potential for the House, while Mr Prescott, despite many amiable qualities, lacks nuance.

He lacks nuance to the extent of reading a script at top volume, with the indignation pedal rammed down, in the manner of a whirling dervish preaching from the telephone directory.

The entire discussion of Mr King's White Papers was rather like that smug and sour by exactly alternating turns.

Mr King has a gift for bathos. Accused in the customary incantatory way of "washing his hands of the unemployed", he said in a shocked voice that no one could accuse him of washing his hands when he was introducing two White Papers.

If only Pontius Pilate, much in the anniversary news this week, had thought to establish a select committee to report on the Galilean unpleasantnesses!

Pocket patriot

He was supported by a number of indistinguishably loyal Conservative backbenchers.

The included a Mr Spencer Batiste, who sounds like a first-change West Indian pace bowler, and from the furious little human atoll and pocket patriot, Peter Bruinvels (South African middle order batsman?) who offered Mr King support "from this side and on behalf of the country."

He had sought to put down an early day motion to mark the 60th birthday of Mr Wedgwood Benn so that the outstanding loyalty of this Rt Hon. Member to successive leaders might be properly celebrated.

Alas it had been rejected by the Table Office he said in a hurt voice on the grounds that it was uttered in a spirit of mockery.

We are at the end of a session though and the mood is all for triviality, not least in the 10-minute Bill introduced by Mr Beith for the Alliance to embarrass the Tories and annoy Labour by substituting "contracting in" for "contracting out" in respect of trade union political levies.

Rough boys

Now, as the world well knows the Tories, having hesitated to go so far intheir own legislation, are not best pleased to be outflanked on the union front by a sudden, unexpected bout of classical Liberalism from, of all people, the Liberal party.

The Tories had been warned by their nurses and governesses with Mr Garrell-Jones patrolling the aisles like the paths of Kensington Gardens, to keep away from these rough boys.

Mr Beith bashed on about the Transport and General Workers and Nupe having registered a 98 per cent. levy; all paid to Labour; actual Labour vote nationally rather less than that at 25 per cent. of electorate; levy reminiscent of a Soviet General Election!

Why were the tories doing nothing to prop up and featherbed the Labour party as the Opposition it knew and loved and feared nothing from.

When the vote was called, Mr Robert Jones, a free market dry posing under a beard as a structuralist, stationed himself at the corner of the lobby aisle, and in nervous twos and threes Tories sidled up to him and in the furtive style of men hovering at chemist's doorways, hurried up into the aye lobby.

There were, of course, not enough to carry the motion. But more than 40 Tories did make a protest. Garrel-Jones rules, but edgily.

Parliament—P9

2.6 pc PAY RISE

By Our Sydney Correspondent

Australia's 6,000,000 wage and salary earners will receive a rise of 2·6 per cent, in an arbitration commission cost-of-living award, not 2·7 per cent. as trade unions sought.
